TOWNLEY LOSES BACKING OF HIS OWN COMMITTEE

Claim Townley Sold Out to Republican and Democratic Foes

An unannounced meeting was held in the city last Tuesday afternoon by Mr. Niunaber and Mr. Ohlquist who were formerly associated with Townley's committee of 100. They denounced Townley as a traitor.

Mr. Niunaber is a former campaign manager of Townley and Mr. Ohlquist was the secretary of the Committee of 100 which went to the Governor and asked the dismissal of various emplayees of the state to be replaced by men who have been with the Farmer-Labor movement prior to their rise to power.

Mr. Ohlquist stated that he had an office next door to that of A. C. Townley's in the West Hotel in Minneapolis and that while he was there Senator Schall Republican Senator from Minnesota, and Mr. Haislet, Chairmann of the Minnesota Republican Party, were frequent callers at Townley's office. Mr. Ohlquist also displayed a list of names, reputed to be in Townleys handwriting, of the men whom Mr. Haislet said would give him financial support in his campaign for governor. Among the names on this list, he said. Were Haislet's and Theo. Quale's, chairman of the Pennington County Republican club. Townley meetings were all advertised by the Nelson or Regan press and workers, according to Mr. Ohlquist.

Mr. Niunaber had, and displayed, a letter from Mr. Townley's daughter in Colorado whitten by her to her father in which she says that their bank account is beginning to swell. Townley, who is supposed to be broke, has been naving a hard time to break the hundred dollar bills he has in his possession according to Mr. Niunaber. This money has all come from the reactionary group who are anxious in defeating Governor Olson in the coming election. Mr. Niunaber claims. He asked who announced Townley's meetings here?" It was incidently, the Thief River Falls Times.

The committee of 100 repudiated Townley and his forces when they found out that he was being paid by republican and democratic parties to split the Olson vote, according to Messers Niunaber and Ohlquist.

Checkup Shows NRS Pays for It-Self; H. Davidson

Howard Davidson, statistician of the local National reemployment Service office, announced the following statistics for the week ending Octorber 20: 4 new registered, 23 renewals, 3 re-interviews, 17 referrals, 17 employer visits, and 7 private placements.

New information received shows that an article printed in last week's issue of the Forum was erroneous in the statement that the cost to the city of maintaining the National Reemployment office here is more than $100. a month. Proper charging of amounts paid out brings the cost down to approximately $45. per month, for the last five months.

In the last five months the National Reemployment Service has been instrumental in placing 695 persons in gainful employment; this at a cost of approximately 38c per placement.

In addition to these direct benefits to labor and secondarily to the merchants of the city, the National Reemployment office has brought here a monthly payroll of $780.

If it be taken into consideration that the entire payroll of the office is spent with local merchants, and that in addition the amount contributed by the city is at once turned back by local purchases, it will be seen that the benefits of the service far outweigh its cost.

Cosgrove Beer Parlor Raided by State Liquor Control Men Wednesday

A raid was made last night on Cosgroves Beer Parlor by two men from the State Liquor Control Commission in which three cases of liquor were ocnfiscated along with two cases of empty bottles.

The raid took place last evening about six o'clock with the chief of police A. B. Stenberg assisting the state men. The liquor was taken from the rear of the place and placed in custody of the local authorities until the time of the hearing which will be held in about two weeks. The quality of the liquor was not given a very high rating by the local police and was described as being very green and possibly bottled no earlier than the fall of this year.

The manner in which the raid was conducted was indicative of the efficiency of the liquor control men and gave some idea of the futility of trying to evade the liquor laws of the state, according to Chief Stenberg.

OUR PREVIOUS STATEMENTS ARE JUSTIFIED

An Editorial by R. M. Aalbu

Shortly before the primary election I stated in an editorial that in my opinion, Mayor Tungseth's senatorial campaign is financed and pushed by the liquor interests and the public utility crowd. In the same editorial I also stated that when a citizen asked the mayor to state some reason for the discharge of two of the city's employees he turned beligerently on his questioner and asked, "Are we responsible to you?"

Subsequently, Mr. Tungseth made a public statement wherein he charged that I had misquoted him and that what he said was not, "Are we responsible to you?" but "Are we responsible to you personally?" In the same statement he voiced some desire to "slap my face". Whether or not he added the word "personally" we shall not argue, it does not change the sense of the sentence. Eighteen people who heard the mayor have signed a statement to the effect that I quoted him correctly.

The point I want to stress, is that Mr. Tungseth did not then nor has he since denied that he is being supported by the lillicit liquor dealers.

We have no quarrel with the wets, nor do I care to drag the wet and dry fight into this campaign. I know a lot of good people who are honest in opposition to prohibition, and I think no less of them because their views do not coincide with mine. However, I do insist that all good citizens believe in law and order. On that point there can be no difference of opinion between the wets and the drys. It is on this score that we have a decided quarrel with Mayor Tungseth. He poses as an ardent dry, and has made two nasty attacks on the governor of the state, using as his chip, the liquor question and enforcement. But if Mayor Tungseth is so dry and so much concerned about enforcement of the liquor laws, why was it necessary for the State Liquor Commission to come in and make a raid last evening of a place that has been frequented by Mr. Tungseth? How does it come that Mayor Tungseth did not see what was going on in this place and stop it?

Was it because it has been the unofficial headquarters for Tungseth's supporters for the senatorship; a hangout for his campaign workers; and because the proprietor has been one of his most ardent supporters? Mr. Tungseth held a conference with some of his campaign workers in the place on Tuesday. Didn't you know at that time that there was illicit liquor being dispensed there, Mr. Tungseth?

This is no longer merely a campaign on political and economic issues, altho these are clean-cut enough in themselves. This is a campaign for common decency. A man who will accept the support of the underworld in his campaign for mayor and again for the senatorship, is not fit to be State Senator from the Sixty-fifth District.

Twelve days remain before the election and it can not be charged that I am indulging in last-minute mud. I am prepared to prove my charges, anytime, in court, if the honorable mayor so desires. And furthermore, if he has any defense to make I offer him the columns of the Forum for that purpose.

Under Consumption Not Overproduction Is Cause Of the Present Depression, Says Governor Olson

Cost of Production Must Be Guaranteed to the Produoers

FAVORS AN INCOME TAX TO RELIEVE TAX BURDEN

Claims Sales and Property Tax Places Burden on Small Incomes

Governor Floyd B. Olson, who has for a number of years been the principal speaker at the Red Rver Valley Dairymen's Association Convention, was again the main speaker at the convention held in this city last Thursday afternoon in the municipal auditorium. The building was packed with every available inch of space being taken by those who wanted to hear the address and even the sidewalks outside were crowded by people who were unable to get inside; a loud speaker outside the building enabled those who couldn't get in to hear the address.

In his opening statement Gov. Olson said that even the city man could see that the prosperity of the state was wrapped up in the dairy industry and if the dairy industry suffered then the whole state must suffer.

The development of the upper Mississippi River so that the middle-west would have barge facilities, thereby reducing the freight rates for commodities which the people must have from the eastern ports, will be carried on to completion the governor said. The main opposition to the St. Lawrence Waterway Project comes from the seaboard towns because it will take some of the business away from them. says Governor Olson, yet we, of the midwest, paid our share of the cost for the development of these ports.

"The Interstate Commerce Commission fixes and protects the minimum amount the public utilities can make on their investments at five and three-quarters percent of their capital nvestment, still, the farmers of the state cannot be sure of even making the cost of production for their products let alone make a profit on the investment; the farmers must be guaranteed the cost of production for their produce. A minimum price should be fixed for the farmers like there is for the large capitalist industries (note, I said a minimum fixed price)" Governor Olson said.

The Governor further stated, "I refuse to accept the surplus theory as being a cause for this depression; if every person had enough to eat only we would now be short approximately 5,000,000 hogs and 300,000 milk cows. The only surplus that we would have would be of wheat which could be easily exchanged for other commodities from other countries.. If from other countries. If everyone were to have enough clothing in the United States all the clothing factories in this country, working full time and at full capacity, could not supply the need for clothing. It is impossible to believe and foolish to ask us to believe that the reason that so many people are hungry is because the farmer had raised too much food and it is equally foolish to ask us to believe that because the workers have made too many clothes the farmers must go without clothing. We don't have to listen to those voices in America anymore."

"Secreary of Agriculture Wallace is bucking a system in a polite way instead of using an iron fist; the reason the price of butter is down is not because of the overproduction of butter but because of the under consumption of butter by the large consumer of the product which is the working man. If the working man was able to buy the product do you think he would buy a cheap substitute? If you were to study a chart with the curve for butter prices and the curve for wages marked out on it, you would find that butter prices and wages fluctuate in the same direction. A one cent raise in milk prices was asked by the milk companies in Minneapolis, this was only granted after this one cent raise in price was returned to the producers, thanks to the labor unions in Minneapolis," said the Governor.

Accord ing to Governor Olson a net income tax is ths only fair tax under the present system; in this

Asks Voters to Elect Harris, Day, and Melby

GOVERNOR FLOYD B. OLSON

Governor Olson stopped in Red Lake Falls to give a short talk when on his way here last Thursday afternoon; among other things he said, "I see in the crowd my good friends Paul A. Harris, W. E. Day and J. O. Melby. I want you to be sure to elect Paul A. Harris for senator and J. O. Melby and W. E. Day for representatives. They are all progessive meen, and it would be a distinct loss to the movement of any of them should not be elected. I want you to be sure to elect, not only Harris for Senator, and Day and Melby for Representatives, but also to elect the entire Farmer-Labor ticket all the way through."

Senator Henrik Shipstead was the principal speaker at the bridge dedication exercises Friday afternoon in the auditorium. In his address Senator Shipstead cited the need of an inland waterway system, stating that high freight rates are due to the topheavy financial structure of the railroad systems. He further stated that control of money and credit has been in the hands of the large financial and industrial interests, which has promoted the growth of the income of industry, and decreased the income of labor. A change will be made in the future, Shipstead said, to bring an equitable distribution of the nation's wealth.

Also speaking on the program were J. .T Ellison, assistant state highway comimssioner, and Mayor Ralph Webb of Winnipeg. The invocation was delivered by Rev. E. A. Cooke, and music was provided by the municipal band.

A representive of the Pubic Employees Retirement Association gave an interesting talk to the members explaining the plan of the association and telling of the feasibility of the plan for the employees of the city of Thief River Falls. This plan calls for the deduction of a percentage of the employees pay to be used in creating a fund to retire men when they become too old for public service instead of letting them go with no means of making a living at an age when it would be impossible for them to get any other kind of work, as is now being done.

CITY COUNCIL PLACES ROOMS FOR 2 GROUPS

NRS and Women's Club to Have Rooms in City Auditorium

At a meeting of the city council last Tuesday evening it was decided to select relief judges and clerks for the coming election. The men who will be appointed relief judges have not been named as yet.

Application was made by M. T. McFarland for the building of three houses and one duplex at an approximate cost of $11,100 on lots 13-18 of block 38 of the original townsite; the application was laid over to the next meeting.

Harry Lund was granted permission to remodel the building on lot 124 in block 28 at an estimated cost of $450.

A lengthy petition was filed by the Women's Club of this city asking for a room designated as the Womens Club Room in the municipal auditorium. The petition was granted and the building committee of the city council was instructed to arrange such a room in the auditorium. Another petition asking for a room in the basement of the auditorium by the NRS was presented and space was provided.

A representive of the Pubic Employees Retirement Association gave an interesting talk to the members explaining the plan of the association and telling of the feasibility of the plan for the employees of the city of Thief River Falls. This plan calls for the deduction of a percentage of the employees pay to be used in creating a fund to retire men when they become too old for public service instead of letting them go with no means of making a living at an age when it would be impossible for them to get any other kind of work, as is now being done.

A widely-known authority on turkeys, Dr. W. A. Billings, extension turkey specialist with the University farm, St. Paul, while in the city last week issued a warning to turkey growers to sell only Number 1 birds for Thanksgiving market. He further stated that there will be an over-supply of November 2 turkeys owing to the feed situation.

R. M. Douglass, county agent, suggests that for the turkey market, growers should not sell toms under 17 to 18 pounds live weight in the yard or hens under 11 to 12 pounds live weight.

The Land O' Lakes Thanksgiving turkey pool will open November 8, and the other local buyers will commence operation at the same time.

Cost of Production Must Be Guaranteed to the Produoers

FAVORS AN INCOME TAX TO RELIEVE TAX BURDEN

Claims Sales and Property Tax Places Burden on Small Incomes

Governor Floyd B. Olson, who has for a number of years been the principal speaker at the Red Rver Valley Dairymen's Association Convention, was again the main speaker at the convention held in this city last Thursday afternoon in the municipal auditorium. The building was packed with every available inch of space being taken by those who wanted to hear the address and even the sidewalks outside were crowded by people who were unable to get inside; a loud speaker outside the building enabled those who couldn't get in to hear the address.

In his opening statement Gov. Olson said that even the city man could see that the prosperity of the state was wrapped up in the dairy industry and if the dairy industry suffered then the whole state must suffer.

The development of the upper Mississippi River so that the middle-west would have barge facilities, thereby reducing the freight rates for commodities which the people must have from the eastern ports, will be carried on to completion the governor said. The main opposition to the St. Lawrence Waterway Project comes from the seaboard towns because it will take some of the business away from them. says Governor Olson, yet we, of the midwest, paid our share of the cost for the development of these ports.

"The Interstate Commerce Commission fixes and protects the minimum amount the public utilities can make on their investments at five and three-quarters percent of their capital nvestment, still, the farmers of the state cannot be sure of even making the cost of production for their products let alone make a profit on the investment; the farmers must be guaranteed the cost of production for their produce. A minimum price should be fixed for the farmers like there is for the large capitalist industries (note, I said a minimum fixed price)" Governor Olson said.

The Governor further stated, "I refuse to accept the surplus theory as being a cause for this depression; if every person had enough to eat only we would now be short approximately 5,000,000 hogs and 300,000 milk cows. The only surplus that we would have would be of wheat which could be easily exchanged for other commodities from other countries.. If from other countries. If everyone were to have enough clothing in the United States all the clothing factories in this country, working full time and at full capacity, could not supply the need for clothing. It is impossible to believe and foolish to ask us to believe that the reason that so many people are hungry is because the farmer had raised too much food and it is equally foolish to ask us to believe that because the workers have made too many clothes the farmers must go without clothing. We don't have to listen to those voices in America anymore."

"Secreary of Agriculture Wallace is bucking a system in a polite way instead of using an iron fist; the reason the price of butter is down is not because of the overproduction of butter but because of the under consumption of butter by the large consumer of the product which is the working man. If the working man was able to buy the product do you think he would buy a cheap substitute? If you were to study a chart with the curve for butter prices and the curve for wages marked out on it, you would find that butter prices and wages fluctuate in the same direction. A one cent raise in milk prices was asked by the milk companies in Minneapolis, this was only granted after this one cent raise in price was returned to the producers, thanks to the labor unions in Minneapolis," said the Governor.

According to Governor Olson a net income tax is ths only fair tax under the present system; in this

An unannounced meeting was held in the city last Tuesday afternoon by Mr. Niunaber and Mr. Ohlquist who were formerly associated with Townley's committee of 100. They denounced Townley as a traitor.

Mr. Niunaber is a former campaign manager of Townley and Mr. Ohlquist was the secretary of the Committee of 100 which went to the Governor and asked the dismissal of various emplayees of the state to be replaced by men who have been with the Farmer-Labor movement prior to their rise to power.

Mr. Ohlquist stated that he had an office next door to that of A. C. Townley's in the West Hotel in Minneapolis and that while he was there Senator Scha'l Republican Senator from Minnesota, and Mr. Haislet, Chairmann of the Minnesota Republican Party, were frequent callers at Townley's office. Mr. Ohlquist also displayed a list of names, reputed to be in Townleys handwriting, of the men whom Mr. Haislet said would give him financial support in his campaign for governor. Among the names on this list, he said. Were Haislet's and Theo. Quale's, chairman of the Pennington County Republican club. Townley meetings were all advertised by the Nelson or Regan press and workers, according to Mr. Ohlquist.

Mr. Niunaber had, and displayed, a letter from Mr. Townley's daughter in Colorado whitten by her to her father in which she says that their bank account is beginning to swell. Townley, who is supposed to be broke, has been having a hard time to break the hundred dollar bills he has in his possession according to Mr. Niunaber. This money has all come from the reactionary group who are anxious in defeating Governor Olson in the coming election. Mr. Niunaber claims. He asked who announced Townley's meetings here?" It was incidently, the Thief River Falls Times.

The committee of 100 repudiated Townley and his forces when they found out that he was being paid by republican and democratic parties to split the Olson vote, according to Messers Niunaber and Ohlquist.

Checkup Shows NRS Pays for It-Self; H. Davidson

Howard Davidson, statistician of the local National reemployment Service office, announced the following statistics for the week ending Octorber 20: 4 new registered, 23 renewals, 3 re-interviews, 17 referrals, 17 employer visits, and 7 private placements.

New information received shows that an article printed in last week's issue of the Forum was erroneous in the statement that the cost to the city of maintaining the National Reemployment office here is more than $100. a month. Proper charging of amounts paid out brings the cost down to approximately $45. per month, for the last five months.

In the last five months the National Reemployment Service has been instrumental in placing 695 persons in gainful employment; this at a cost of approximately 38c per placement.

In addition to these direct benefits to labor and secondarily to the merchants of the city, the National Reemployment office has brought here a monthly payroll of $780.

If it be taken into consideration that the entire payroll of the office is spent with local merchants, and that in addition the amount contributed by the city is at once turned back by local purchases, it will be seen that the benefits of the service far outweigh its cost.

Cosgrove Beer Parlor Raided by State Liquor Control Men Wednesday

A raid was made last night on Cosgroves Beer Parlor by two men from the State Liquor Control Commission in which three cases of liquor were ocnfiscated along with two cases of empty bottles.

The raid took place last evening about six o'clock with the chief of police A. B. Stenberg assisting the state men. The liquor was taken from the rear of the place and placed in custody of the local authorities until the time of the hearing which will be held in about two weeks. The quality of the liquor was not given a very high rating by the local police and was described as being very green and possibly bottled no earlier than the fall of this year.

The manner in which the raid was conducted was indicative of the efficiency of the liquor control men and gave some idea of the futility of trying to evade the liquor laws of the state, according to Chief Stenberg.

OUR PREVIOUS STATEMENTS ARE JUSTIFIED

Shortly before the primary election I stated in an editorial that in my opinion, Mayor Tungseth's senatorial campaign is financed and pushed by the liquor interests and the public utility crowd. In the same editorial I also stated that when a citizen asked the mayor to state some reason for the discharge of two of the city's employees he turned beligerently on his questioner and asked, "Are we responsible to you?"

Subsequently, Mr. Tungseth made a public statement wherein he charged that I had misquoted him and that what he said was not, "Are we responsible to you?" but "Are we responsible to you personally?" In the same statement he voiced some desire to "slap my face". Whether or not he added the word "personally" we shall not argue, it does not change the sense of the sentence. Eighteen people who heard the mayor have signed a statement to the effect that I quoted him correctly.

The point I want to stress, is that Mr. Tungseth did not then nor has he since denied that he is being supported by the lillicit liquor dealers.

We have no quarrel with the wets, nor do I care to drag the wet and dry fight into this campaign. I know a lot of good people who are honest in opposition to prohibition, and I think no less of them because their views do not coincide with mine. However, I do insist that all good citizens believe in law and order. On that point there can be no difference of opinion between the wets and the drys. It is on this score that we have a decided quarrel with Mayor Tungseth. He poses as an ardent dry, and has made two nasty attacks on the governor of the state, using as his chip, the liquor question and enforcement. But if Mayor Tungseth is so dry and so much concerned about enforcement of the liquor laws, why was it necessary for the State Liquor Commission to come in and make a raid last evening of a place that has been frequented by Mr. Tungseth? How does it come that Mayor Tungseth did not see what was going on in this place and stop it?

Was it because it has been the unofficial headquarters for Tungseth's supporters for the senatorship; a hangout for his campaign workers; and because the proprietor has been one of his most ardent supporters? Mr. Tungseth held a conference with some of his campaign workers in the place on Tuesday. Didn't you know at that time that there was illicit liquor being dispensed there, Mr. Tungseth?

This is no longer merely a campaign on political and economic issues, altho these are clean-cut enough in themselves. This is a campaign for common decency. A man who will accept the support of the underworld in his campaign for mayor and again for the senatorship, is not fit to be State Senator from the Sixty-fifth District.

Twelve days remain before the election and it can not be charged that I am indulging in last-minute mud. I am prepared to prove my charges, anytime, in court, if the honorable mayor so desires. And furthermore, if he has any defense to make I offer him the columns of the Forum for that purpose.

Under Consumption Not Overproduction Is Cause Of the Present Depression, Says Governor Olson

Large Crowd Gather in Spite Of Rain and Cold Weather Last Two Days

HIGH FREIGHT RATES DUE TO FINANCES; SHIPSTEAD

Wages of Labor Not Cause of High Rates Charged By Railroads

Although inclement weather prevaled thruout the last two days of the Decade of Progress celebration, large crowds were nevertheless in attendance.

Senator Henrik Shipstead was the principal speaker at the bridge dedication exercises Friday afternoon in the auditorium. In his address Senator Shipstead cited the need of an inland waterway system, stating that high freight rates are due to the topheavy financial structure of the railroad systems. He further stated that control of money and credit has been in the hands of the large financial and industrial interests, which has promoted the growth of the income of industry, and decreased the income of labor. A change will be made in the future, Shipstead said, to bring an equitable distribution of the nation's wealth.

Also speaking on the program were J. T Ellison, assistant state highway commissioner, and Mayor Ralph Webb of Winnipeg. The invocation was delivered by Rev. E. A. Cooke, and music was provided by the municipal band.

A parade to the bridge headed by the American Legion drum corps followed the auditorium progra m.The new bridge was officially dedicated by J. T. Ellison, after which cars carrying the participating officials crossed the bridge.

Approximately 300 persons attended the bridge dedication banquet at the Trinity Luthern Church on Friday evening, which was served by the Trinity ladies' aid. Speakers on the banquet program included Mayor Ralph Webb of Winnipeg, W. E. Dahlquist, J. H. Ellison, M. J. Hoffman, chief bridge engineer with the highway department, and Mayor E. L. Tungseth among others.

The indood circuses on both days and the dances with music by Cliff Perine and his broadcasting band were well attended.

Due to the unfavorable weather, it was impossible to repeat the parade Saturday afternoon as was previously planned.

J. T. Lyons, A. H. Kleffman, K. K. Solberg 'Open up' on Their Republican Opponents

A three-cornered attack on their Republican incumbent opponents was opened this week by Farmer-Laborites John T. Lyons, A. H. Kleffman and K. K. Solberg.

The candidates for state auditor, state treasurer and secretary of state, respectivily, "opened up" on the official actions of Republicans Stafford King, auditor; Julius Schmahl, etrasurer, and Mike Holm, secretary of state.

John T. Lyons charged King with being "a candidate without a party" in that he is listed as the Republican nominee, but "to date has failed to openly admit his party connections."

"Apparently," Mr. Lyons declared, "Mr. King is shy about admitting that he is a member of the reactionary Republican party and is attempting to campaign merely by attacking the progressive principles of the Farmer-Labor party. As a candidate for public office, I believe that Mr. King owes an explanation to the voters."

Mr. Lyons also charged Mr. King with "conducting a campaign of untruths" because he is presenting "only one side of the picture" when he states that county governments heve reduced their tax rates while that the state has increased. He challenged Mr. King to deny that fact that, according to the state auditor's own records, county governments have been able to reduce their rates because 80 of the state's 87 counties receive nearly $3.00 from the state in the form of aid for every $2.00 of tax money paid the state.

Mr. King also was condemned by Mr. Lyons because of his talks requesting economy, "when his own department's expenses for the last fiscal year amounted to $66,904.77, or an increase—not a decrease—but an increase, of $1,000.20 over his expenses for the year before."

JOHN T. LYONS

A. H. KLEFFMAN

Centering his attack on Republican State Treasurer Julius Schmahl, Farmer-Laborite Kleffman charged the incumbent with having "taken an active part in the operation of an insurance business while on the state payroll." Mr. Kleffman also referred to official court records showing that Mr. Schmahl was brought into court, together with a group of others, to answer to charges that widows and orphans were "deprived of their insurance claims because of technicalities suddenly unearthed in the policies of their departed ones."

K. K. SOLBERG

That Mike Holm is not the "retired individual he is painted to be" was pointed out by K. K. Solberg, the present Farmer-Labor lieutenant governor, who is his party's choice for secretary of state. Mr. Solberg described how Mr. Solberg described how Mr. Holm invaded various sections of the state to "serve as the power trust's representative in encouraging 'errand-boy' type of men to file as candidate to serve them in the legislature."

ROOSEVELT LAUDS OLSON AS LIBERAL, CONGRESSMAN PAUL J. KVALE STATES

Gov. Floyd B. Olson is considered one of the nation's leading liberals with whom President Roosevelt has "surrounded himself." Congressman Paul J. Kvale, Farmer-Labor candidate for re-election, declared in a talk in which in which he pointed out the similarity of the Farmer-Labor program and that of President Roosevelt.

"Not all persons bearing strict party labels can be depended upon to put over the features of the new deal, and President Roosevent discovered this long ago" Congressman Kvale stated. "Many strictly party men have been found to 'gum up the machiery,' and, consequently, the President has been forced to call upon the liberals of the nation, such as Senator Nye of North Dakota, Senator Norris of Nebraska, Senator Hiram Johnson of California, and Governor Olson."

Pointing out that "the eyes of the nation are upon Minnesota with an expectation that the governor will be given a friendly legislature and state executive council," Congressman Kvale urged that progressives of the state pay particular attention to the election of liberal candidates to the state legislature and to the offices of the state treasurer and secretary of state, so that a liberal progressive executive council will be formed to aid Governor Olson in his progressive principles. He said that the people of Minnesota have placed into office a liberal and progressive governor in Olson but that they thave "tied his hands" by not giving him a legislature and executive council to help carry out the enactment of his principles.

"While we, as thinking citizens, gave him the responsibilities of governorship and demanded of him that he keep his promises, we neglected to give him what he needed to accentuate these aims." Congressman Kvale declared. "We gave him only a minority in the state legislature, mind you, in both his terms as governor, and we gave him only a minority upon the executive council which, as you know, is composed of elective officials who act with the governor in the absence of the legislature.

"In other words, we do not provide him with the weapons with which to execute the enemies of society. We did not give him the needed agencies which could cooperate with him to carry out the aims which he so fondly hopes that he can complete before his third term expires."

Knocking on Wood

Knocking on wood is one of the most ancient of superstitions, writes G. H. Turner in the Kansas City Times. It originated more than 2,000 years ago among the druids, the powerful order of priests and judges who ruled the Celtic peoples of Gaul, Britain, and Ireland. These people, who embraced a primitive form of tree worship, believed that trees harbored protective spirits. Therefore, to rap on a tree, the dwelling place of a friendly spirit, was to invoke the spirit of the tree to protect one against impending misfortune. Knocking on wood is, of course, the equivalent of knocking on a dead tree.

Battle of Point Pleasant

The Battle of Point Pleasant, Ohio, fought in 1774 between the Americans and Indians as one of the battles in Lord Dunmore's war of 1774, has been called by historians the greatest battle ever fought between white men and red men, the battle which saved the Northwest territory to the colonies, the first battle of the Revolutionary war, and the last battle of the colonies, as English subjects, with the Indians.

Original Spanish Main Greatly Narrowed Down

Named in the heyday of conquistadores and pirates, the old Spanish Main originally comprised that part of the Atlantic ocean plied by Spanish treasure ships, says the National Geographic society. The name later embraced the shores of the Caribbean islands and adjacent coasts of South and Central America, but finally narrowed until it denotes specifically the northern coast of South America between the Isthmus of Panama and delta of the Orinoco—the coastal zones of Venezuela, Colombia and Panama.

Columbus sighted the palm-fringed shores of the Spanish Main in 1498. Red-painted Indians sucking brews from gourds watched the subsequent arrivals of Balboa and others who carried back to Europe amazing tales of pearls, gold, and Indians suitable for slaves. Men swarmed the coast to erect fortified settlements and to ship wealth back to Europe. Seeking the fabulous riches reputed to be in the interior, they pushed through almost impenetrable jungles. Before them fled harassed Indians, discharging poisoned arrows, futile against armor.

Settlers lived largely on a plentiful supply of immense tortoises and wild boars. Some, settling near what is Santo Domingo, hunted and smoked buffalo. They became known as buccaneers from the French word boucaner, to smoke meat.

Others became farmers, cultivating tobacco with the aid of numerous white and negro slaves. Many of the slaves ran away and joined the buccaneers, who, having become bored with buffalo hunting, took up pirating, preying on Spanish galleons and coastal settlements. The Spanish Main offered numerous natural advantages to these seafaring bandits: luxurious forests out of which to build their barks, lakes of pitch for calking the new craft, and hidden harbors from which to surprise their prey.

A Political Log Cabin

Under the device of a log cabin, with a barrel of cider in front of it, the Whigs elected William Henry Harrison in 1840—unseating the Democratic administration after the financial panic of 1837 and the subsequent depression. He was supposed to have lived in such simple quarters, although as a matter of fact the cabin was that of an early settler and had been made part of Harrison's mansion on his large estate near Cincinnati. However, thousands of tokens, medals and broadcasts bearing this emblem have been preserved in memory of "The Hero of Tippecanoe."

Tanning Process Has Changed

The earliest tanning consisted of placing skins in pits between layers of bark. One of the most important developments in American tanning history was the introduction of leaching, in which the tannin content was extracted from the bark, which permitted placing skins in tanning liquors.

To the Voters:
In soliciting your support for re-election to the office of County Auditor, I stand on my record during my first term.
I was elected to my first term on my pledge of an economical administration of the office. This pledge I have fulfilled.
Being an experienced accountant and auditor has enabled me to conduct my office during my firsr term without the expense of an experienced accountant for deputy. I have used only part time clerk hire and have operated my office at one-third the expense for Clerk Hire that my predecessor required, thereby effecting a saving of about $1,000.00 per year. My revision of the accounting system in the Auditor's office has effected other large savings. There is no substitute for experience.
If my administration of the office during my first term has met with your approval, your vote and support will be appreciated.

AMERICAN STANDARDS DWINDLE TO VERY LOW LEVELS, IS REPORT

Study Made by Federal Department of Labor Shows Low Living Standards of Railway Employees as Result of Depression

WIDESPREAD NEGLECT OF HEALTH REVEALED BY GOVERNMENT SURVEY

WASHINGTON.—The lowering of American labor's standard of living which has been so sharply in evidence since 1929, is grphically described in a report on "Earnings and Standard of Living of 1,000 Railway Employees During the Depression," released Aug. 24 by the U. S. Department of Labor. A summary of some of the findings was presented by Federated Press some time ago, but the complete report is now out in printed form, including some pictures of railroaders' homes.

The study was made by the Department of Labor in cooperation with 18 of the standard railroad labor organizations, and the final report is written by Prof. Carter Goodrich of Columbia University.

Most studies of reduced living standards have delt with the unemployed or with notoriously sweated industries, but the evidence in this one is all the more remarkable in that it deals with the more favored workers (those whose seniority still entitles them to jobs) in a well-organized industry where direct wage cuts have not been so great as in most others.

Toward Destitution

The careful case studies which were made of actual earnings and living conditions of these relatively favored workers reveals, however, what Goodrich describes as a "slow retreat from relative security toward destitution."

The general 10% wage cut which took effect in February, 1932, for all railroad workers was by no means the only, nor ever the biggest factor in reducing wages. Demotions (Whereby men with less seniority are "bumped" down the scale to ever lower-paying jobs when the number of jobs contracts); short time (usually a 5, 4 or 3-day week); irregular employment, and loss of overtime and furloughs cut much more sharply into the actual earnings of these workers.

Between July, 1929, and April, 1933, two-thirds of the men reported a decrease of at least 20% in earnings and 50% reported a loss of 30% or more. For the year 1932 two-thirds of the workers received less than $1,500, three-eights less than $1,000 and one-tenth less than $500. Only 18% received as much as $1,750, although higher paid crafts were included in what was intended to be a representative selection of railroad employes.

Incomes Cut

Not only were their own incomes thus sharply cut, but these railroaders who still had jobs had also to undertake the support of friends and relatives who had lost theirs. More than a fifth of the families investigated took into their homes such unfortunates and many helped needier families with cash or groceries.

The report tells of "educational opportunities abandoned and health needs neglected, and of lives stripped bare of even the most inexpensive forms of recreation and social life," in the uneven battle of these workers to live within their reduced incomes. "Frequently they entered the depression with substantial savings," it says, and more than half owned or were buying their homes. By the time they were visited, however, two fifths of these were in arrears in their payments and 44 owners had lost their homes. Cash savings were virtually exhausted, about half of the final lies had to give up insurance policies, and many were seriously in debt.

Reduced Milk Supply

Reduction in milk supply was reported by 115 families, all of them with children under 16, the number from 1 to 6 per family. In 32 families no milk at all was taken. In one family with 6 children the milkman was "ordered off" four years ago and the family had had no fresh milk since. More than half of these families had cut down from 50 to 75% of their milk supply. Butter, meat, fresh fruit and vegetables were most often drastically reduced in amount and sometimes eliminated from the table altogether.

Widespread neglect of health as a result of lowered income is also noted. In nearly one-third of the families visited one or more members required medical attention but could not afford it. Plans to send children to college had to be abandoned, and 157 children in either had dropped out of school or had deferred their entrance into the next higher course.

In regard to recreation, 378 families (38% of the total) reported that they could afford no recreation at all, and for most families it had become an "extravagance." Many reported that they had not seen a moving picture for 2, 3, or even 4 years. A 10-cent movie once a month for the children was the only recreation in other families.

Michigan's Early Capital

The territorial capital of Michigan was Detroit. There the first capitol was built and occupied by the first legislature called after the admission to the Union in 1837. The constitution of 1835 contained a provision which was adopted after a bitter struggle of delegates to the Constitutional convention. That provision read. "The seat of government for this state shall be at Detroit, or such other place as may be described by law, until 1847, when it shall be permanently located by the legislature."

Telling the Truth

Telling the truth is seeing beyond the "things that take the eye and have the price."

Columbian Exposition Coins

There were five million fifty-cent pieces struck for the Columbian exposition in 1893. The plan was to sell them for one dollar apiece to help in financing the fair. A disappointingly small number was sold as mementoes at this price, so it was necessary to use them at face value to meet obligations.

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1897."

The greatest service we can render our State and Nation is to interest ourselves in the political issues of the day. Every economic question is a political question. An economic question affecting the worker, the farmer, the professional or independent business man is a matter of concern to each and every one of us and we should stand shoulder to shoulder with each other in an endeavor of its solution.

Some of our "Civic Leaders" done themselves proud at the Dedication banquet last Friday evening in dishing out credit for the establishment of trunk highway 73. It would appear that most everyone had some honorable mention coming for bringing into exsistence this most laudable enterprise, even the mayor of Winnipeg, because it seems that he thought of it first.

However, all the speakers forgot that it came into existence as a result of an act of the Minnesota Legislature and that this route was incorporated into the act thru the work of the Senator and the two representatives from this district, Senator Laura E. Naplin and Representatives W. E. Day and J. O. Melby. Mr. Day was present at the banquet, but h ewas not called on, nor was his name, nor the names of his collegues in the legislature mentioned in connection with the highway.

Inasmuch as Friday was "fieldday" for "Kingfish Bill" and his strawman senatorial candidate, we need not wonder that Farmer-Labor legislators were ignored when the overflowing bowl of credit was passed around.

VOTE YOUR TICKET STRAIGHT

We often hear voters say that they "vote for the best man." And we are reminded of the rejoinder made by a friend of ours to such a statement, when he said "You must have a very wide acquaintance." Inasmuch as we often find such people at varience in their opinion in regard to who is the "best man" we must assume that there is found tion for the belief that the "voting for the best man" theory is falacious.

The time has come when the American citizen must choose between two distinct philosophies of government; those two philosophies are so different that anyone who mixes his ticket, flitting from one camp to the otehr when he marks his ballot is simply "gumming up the works" and voting to keep up the dissention, time wasting and money spending which has come to typify modern American government. Certainly if we believe enough in a candidate for a major office, such as president or governor to vote for him, we must be willing to give him a congress or a legislature that is in accord with him in his, and our own, views in regard political and economic philosophy. If we do not support him by voting for those who would aid him in his program, then we have no right to criticize if government fails to function as we would like to have it function.

Governor Floyd B. Olson stands for certain definite principles of political and economic philosophy, and if the size of his audiences and their response to his addresses is any indication, then the vast majority of the people of the state of Minnesota are in accord with him and his views. That being the case it would seem logical that the voters should in justice to him as well as in justice to themselves vote their ticket straight, so that he may have an opportunity to put his program thru.

The state Executive Council is composed of governor, the attorney general, the state secretary, the state auditor and the state treasurer. In its hands rests a good many questions of state policy. Up to the present time the fact that three republicans hold the offices of secretary of state, state auditor and state treasurer has thoroughly hamstrung the governor. In every question that has come up, these three have stood against the governor, the attorney general voting with him and the vote thus standing three to two. If some of the affairs of the state have suffered, blame yourselves, you voters who voted for Olson and Harry Peterson two and four years ago and then strayed to other pastures and voted for Julius Schmall, Mike Holm, and Stafford King. This time we hope that the voters will have the courage of their conviction and follow up their vote for Olson for governor with a vote for each of the Farmer-Labor candidates right down the line, including the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, where John P. Devaney is endorsed, associated justices of the Supreme court where Julius J. Olson and William Anderson are indorsed; and two Judges of the District Court appointed by Governor Olson; James E. Montague and M. A. Brattland both of whom have been endorsed by the Farmer-Labor Committees of the various counties within the Fourteenth Judicial District.

While the ability, experience and fitness for the office which they seek, is all on the side of the farmer-labor candidates in every instance names above, the voters who vote for principles and those who "always vote for the best man" should have no difficulty reaching accord in the case of the legisla tive candidates in this district and in the district adjoining us to the north.

In the 67th district Richard Rice of Alvarado F-L candidate for state senator is a man of exceptional ability, while his running-mate for the house position, from Marshall county, Mr. Evans of Middle River stacks up like a Colossus of Rhodes in comparison with the "horse-trader" Green who is seeking reelection.

In this district the Farmer-Labor candidates for re-election to the House of Representatives, W. E. Day of Bagley and J. O. Melby, and Paul A. Harris, the endorsed candidate for State Senator loom up large in ability, experience, trustworthyness and integrity compared with "Bill" Dahlquist's strawmen Tungseth, Jones and Waldal.

In these two districts at least, everyone who wants clean government and progress will vote Farmer-Labor straight.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

To Drive Out the Saloon

Politicians faithless to the solemn pledges of both Democratic and Republican Parties, threw the door open for the saloon in Illinois. They made a jest of President Roosevelt's promises and admonitions.

Chicago has been booded with evil concoctions called whiskey. The saloon is breaking the law and provoking law breaking. It is promoting social insecurity and menacing the home. Police regulation has become a farce.. . . .Next November, in more than a hundred precincts, representing seven wards, voters will decree whether their neighborhoods shall retain the saloon or oust it. The old war is on against the old enemy. . . .

The cause is one to which decency-loving citizens should give their aid in mony, time and votes.

"A more Millitant attack on the liquor evil than ever before" will celebrate the conclusion of six decades of temperance work by the W.C.T.U., according to word received here from national leaders who are planning the sixtieth annual convention of the organization, to be held November 10 to 15 in Cleveland.

An enlarged program of intensive alcohol education will be inaugurated at the convention. Saturday afternoon, November 10, the convention will be transformed into an "alcohol education school" and delegates will be taught methods of alcohol education by Miss Bertha R. Palmer, former state superintendent of public institution of North Dakota, and now national W.C.T.U. director of scientific temperance instruction.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Atlanta, national director of evangelism, will conduct evangelistic services opening the convention November 10. That evening an historical processional will precede the address of the president,, Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith.

A world peace demonstration will be held Sunday afternoon, November 11, Armistice day. The Rev. William LeRoy Stidger, Boston, will be the speaker that evening. Mr. S. D. Gordon, author of "Quiet Talks" will conduct noon devotional hours throughout the session. Professor Milton Conover of the department of government and political ecoonmy of Yale university, will be one of the convention speakers.

Headquarters will be established at the Statler hotel, with sessions held in the Euclid Avenue Baptist church.

Prospective candidates, besides having ability, should also show the following qualifications: COURAGE, so they cannot be intimidated. KEENESS, so they cannot be fooled. INTEGRITY, so they cannot be bought.

Fish, unless fed too much will bite most any hooked bait. There are two kinds of fish. The gullible grabbers and the indifferent nibblers. If one bait does not work, try another. The farmers took theirs, line, hook and sinker, and they were hoisted high and dry. Since then they have been strewn around in the financial shoals of dissolution. What will be the grasping in the last credit agonies next effective political bait?

Sympathy is cheap currency to tender to the unfortunate and the counterfeit that misery must accept. But it cannot be passed on in the world's marts for food. Sympathy salves the mind's feelings, does not feed the stomach but it does not cost the doner anything.

Every one else sets the price on their products. They do so either by common consent or because of a monopoly position. Why not the farmer? If business has found it sound why not the farmer. They can set the price on the consumable requiremets of this country on any product and it would garantee a continued prosperity. It is a solution. The others have none. Why must the farmer turn away empty handed and ignored while they liberally dole out help to the big financial and industrial interests? And this is America.

Flaying his opponents, Governor Olson resigned last week as federal relief administrator in Minnesota, turning over the job for the time being to L. P. Zimmerman, former deputy state administrator. Governor Olson in his telegram of resignation charged that his opponents have continued in their political endeavors despite reports from the federal ivestigators proving their charges groundless. Rather than take a chance of hampering the relief program, however, the Governor stated, he resigned and will go out into the state to do battle with the reactionaries opposed to the present relief system without being bound by official position of relief administrator. T. J. Edmonds, regional administrator, in commenting upon the Governor's resignation, stated that he has always been aware of the Governor's attitude that relief and human needs should be kept free from the slightest taint of politics. Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator stated, "I appreciate the fine spirit which prompted you to relinquish administrative responsibility.

Two men picked up by the State Bureau of Criminal Apprehension last week ended the unremitting nine year search made for the murderers of a farmer in southern part of the state. In addition to solving the decade-old mystery the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension since 1930, has one of the most outstanding records for crime detection of any state in the Union. Under Melvin Passolt, appointee of Governor Olson's, the Bureau has made Minnesota so unhealthy for bank robbers that only four bank robberies have been reported in the state since the first of the year. Under previous administrations only 569 criminal cases and 5 bank robberies were acted upon by the bureau in four years while since 1930, over 3000 cases have been acted upon.

The Minneapolis truck drivers' strike produced one permanent institution. During the labor walkout the state department of agriculture helped establish a cooperative market for truck garden farmers. This met with such a great success that it was continued after the strike ended. Now it is regarded as a permanent factor in Minneapolis trade. Both the buying public and the farmers are enthusiastic about the project as it permits the former to buy their garden stuffs at a lower price and it returns the latter a higher percentage of profit. The R.F.C. has looked the new market over and may advance funds for the erection of a building open to all co-operatives in the state at the site of the market on 10th St. and first ave. north.

I'm not in favor of capitol punishment generally, but when I read the Minneapolis Journal, I feel my idealism wavering. For instance the last few weeks the Journal has run a series of cartoons depicting what life will be in a cooperative society.

But I have devised an effective punishment for the Journal and all such reactionary dailies who persist in trying to stem the current of progress. My plan is this: when the cooperative society arrives, fence off a tract of land which contains the most effective piece of capitalism, and use it as an asylum for those responsible for our daily newspapers. While the rest of us were building a cooperative world, these knockers could enjoy capitalism to its fullest extent.

That, it seems, would be punishment enough!

Hunger

Hunger is one of the greatest driving forces in the world. A man will do things under the spur of hunger that he would never do ordinarily, bloated with surfeit. A man may desire many things, but he cannot long desire food without going out for it. And what is true of the individual is true in the aggregate.

In February, 1917, Russia experienced an upheaval simply because the people lacked bread. The same thing happened during the French revolution.

Will conditions ever reach that stage in the U. S. A.? So far, Uncle Sam has been able to stave off hunger through his various agencies—CWA, ERA, etc.— but the time may come wehn these are at the end of their resources.

All these things are but ameliorations—what we want is a deep-rooted change that will make such "shots in the arm" unnecessary.

It is a race between education and catastrophe, in the oft-quoted words of H. G. Wells.

Can we go about forming a new society in a rational manner, or do we have to wait for hunger to drive us to it?

"How to Live."

When Edw. C. Baumann of Bagley was propagating the Christian Brotherhood of America, its expressed aim was: "We do not teach men how to die, but how to live." As a precept, it is good stuff, and ought to be brought home forcibly to every man who thinks that this life is merely a vale of tears and sacrifice in which to prepare for the next world.

So few people really know how to live, because we have never had the chance. One thing that the new society should do for us—it would give birth to an entirely new science, named "How to Live."

"Carthage Must be Destroyed."

If I want to fill a bucket with coal, to use a homely example, and find the bucket filled with ashes, I must somehow get rid of the ashes. In certain cases new things cannot be built up before the old things are torn down.

We have only one country here. If we want to build a new society we must first get rid of the old one. That does not mean wholesale destruction—it means merely installing a new system of books, where the people as a whole are given a fair shake instead of a sheer fake.

The capitalist system must go somehow, some time. If you think that capitalism is dead, its rotting hulk remains; and rotting hulks do not vanish in thin air. There is work for the wrecking crew before the construction gang arrives on the scene.

I don't recommend bombs or whiskers as a suitable uniform (as the daily papers would have it). There are ways of wrecking a system without destroying every part. There are several things we can use in building the new system.

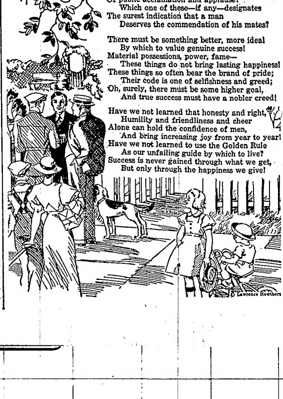
THE ONLY TRUE SUCCESS
by
Lawrence Hawthorne



What is the truest measure of success?
Is it a million-dollar bank account?
Is it a lengthy list of stocks and bonds?
Is it, perhaps, a generous amount
Of public acclamation and applause?
Which one of these—if any—designates
The surest indication that a man
Deserves the commendation of his mates?

There must be something better, more ideal
By which to value genuine success!
Material possessions, power, fame—
These things do not bring lasting happiness!
These things so often bear the brand of pride;
Their code is one of selfishness and greed;
Oh, surely, there must be some higher goal,
And true success must have a nobler creed!

Have we not learned that honesty and right,
Humility and friendliness and cheer
Alone can hold the confidence of men,
And bring increasing joy from year to year!
Have we not learned to use the Golden Rule
As our unfailing guide by which to live?
Success is never gained through what we get,
But only through the happiness we give!

YOUTH
Minneapolis Labor Review

After the growling and snarling of Messrs. Nelson and Regan, the respective candidates of the reactionary state Republican and Democratic parties for governor, it was refreshing for the public to hear the radio talk which Governor Olson recently made regarding youth.

It is much easier to throw mud than to hunt facts and prepare a decent address, and so Nelson and Regan, both realizing that they haven't a chance in the world of being elected, get up and slam bang the mud over the radio every time that they make an address.

Next morning the daily papers announce, "Olson Attacked." It is not improbable that this head is left standing. It has been used so often that when readers see it they wonder whether some beast of the jungle has attacked the governor or whether it is the same old attack by the mouth pieces of the branch bankers and the exploiters.

Of course, Nelson and Regan can't be blamed for making the kind of speeches they do. It takes ability to make a real speech, and it takes ambition, that is, the kind of ambition that means work and not just the desire to have something without working.

Neither being particularly fond of work and both realizing they are just running around the state like branch Punch and Judy shows, they take no pains with their addresses. They just slam the Governor and the Farmer-Labor party.

The only real sufferer under this character of campaigning, of course, is the radio public. They listen a while and then tune the growlers and snarlers out, but it is a shame that good money should be wasted for radio programs of this kind when there could just as well be programs like that in which the Governor discussed youth.

The Governor told what the reactionary old parties have done to youth, particularly in one paragraph.

"Youth is ready for the journey on life's highway, but it has no place to go. Every year that the depression continues, the outlook becomes darker. In 1931, the Bureau of Appointments at a large midwestern University placed about 60 per cent of its graduates; in 1932, 40 per cent; in 1933, 24 per cent; in 1934, only 8 per cent. One of the greatest electrical concerns in the country that before the depression hired from 600 to 800 engineering graduates every June from all over the country, in 1930 hired 250,; in 1932, 140; in 1933, 15; in 1934 it hired none and laid off 400. In the last five years, a large New York publishing house which formerly hired a large number of college graduates, has received 15,000 applications and has hired none. The National Committee on Mental Hygiene estimates that there are 6,000,000 unemployed educated young Americans. There are approximately 2,000,000 high school and college graduates every y 2,000,000 high school and college graduates every year, less than half of whom found positions in 1930, and the number has increased by leaps and bounds every year since."

This is the result of the rule of Republican Democratic parties. They are the parties of despair for youth and swollen profits for the pirates of big business.

In his youth address, the Governor never mentioned the names of his oponents. But that address gave the opportunity to size up the candidates, and everyone who heard it knows that there is not an other candidate for governor capable of such an address, and youth knows that for them the Farmer-Labor party affords the only hope of breaking down the old system that enslaves and impoverishes youth.

Theere was a sincerity, an idealsm, and a hope for youth in the Governor's address that has not been heard on the radio.

DEMOCRAT URGES OLSON'S RE-ELECTION
Renville County Journal

Thomas W. McMeekin, St. Paul attorney and a prominent democrat in the state, in a talk at the Lowry Hotel last Thursday evening, urged the reelection of Governor Olson. The speaker said among other things that Governor Olson should be reelected because "his record of achievements in the past four years stamp him as the greatest chief executive Minnesota has ever had and one of the outstanding governors in the United States."

Mr. McMeekin further stated "I am not a Farmer-Laborite, I am not a Republican. I am a Democrat—but a true Democrat and not of the type represented by John Regan, democratic nominee for governor. If Regan had his way two years ago, Minnesota would not have had a Democratic party and Franklin D. Roosevelt would not have been president of the United States, as Regan bitterly opposed Mr. Roosevelt's nomination at the Chicago convention. As for Martin Nelson, Republican candidate, I have the highest regard for him personally. But as a Republican, he represents those moneyed interests that are responsible for our economic condition of today. To elect Nelson means the return to Hooverism."

LOOSE WORDS
Austin American

Martin Nelson, G. O. P. candidate for governor, is as good at primises as any of his reactionary predecessors for the office have been. His latest boast is that he will cut taxes in half. Loose words, these, apparently spoken without a thought of what they actually mean.

In so doing he must reduce the expenditures of state government 50 per cent. Mr. Nelson and every other Republican knows this is impossible unless he curtails 'education,' law enforcement, courts and other necessary functions to a point where they will be useless to the citizens.

The Republican candidate declares he believes in an "equitable tax" but he fails to say how this tax would be levied. The Farmer-Labor party has not side-stepped this issue. During the last session of the legislature it showed its real interest in the small tax payer by enacting the Homestead Exemption act. Through Farmer-Labor influence the levy was cut $7,500,000.

Julius Schmahl, candidate for re-election as state treasurer, lit in Bovey Wednesday, and the small covey of old line reactionary republicans that roost here, disappeared like a flock of young partridges, leaving poor Schmahl to roam the streets all by his lonesome.

SOUTHERN MINN. BEAUTY SPOTS TO BE DEVELOPED

Natural beauty spots in southern Minnesota will be developed by the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration) transient relief division, to provide recreational areas for more than 1,000,000 people, L. P. Zimmerman, deputy administrator, has announced.

A permanent transient relief camp is to be teh nuceus for each recreational center, in order that labor may be available without cost to the communities participating in the projects.

The long-time planning and developement program will involve the protection of lakes and watersheds, the planting of timber and conservation of scenic resources.

The work on one of these areas was started recently at Cannon Falls, with the establishment of a 200-man camp, the 26th in the state. A dam is to be constructed on the Little Cannon river by these men, now lodged on the fairground, where camp facilities are available.

Expressive Words

The Zandelanders who live in the Congo district of Africa refer to a key as "the lock's son," to a white man as "the father of cloth" (they wear practically no clothes), and have names among themselves such as "More Words," "the Spirit of His Father," and one which means literally, "What's His Name!"

Used Smooth St. Bernards

The St. Bernards used by the monks in Switzerland for rescue work were of the smooth coated variety. It has been suggested that possibly the smooth coated dogs could work best in the snow.

"Specialization" Old Stuff

Specialization is nothing new in industry; Roman writers tell of workmen who made only parts of statues, of certain garments for the clothing trade.

HIGHWAY PATROL OFFERS AID IN ORGANIZATION OF SCHOOL POLICE GROUPS

The state highway patrol will assist any community in the establishment of school patrols to protect pupils crossing the streets and highways, according to an announcement by the state highway department.

While 160 Minnesota communities now have regular school patrols in operation highway department officials believe there should be more such safety groups among school children. Officers of the highway patrol will be assigned to aid any locality in getting this type of safety work under way in the most effective manner.

The Minnesota department of the American Legion is stressng sponsorsip of school patrols by Legion posts as a desirable activity. Various other civic organizations also are active in encouraging this form of school safety work.

School patrols have proved their value in both rural and urban districts, according to N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner.

ERLING SWENSON TALKS TO IOWA WALTONIANS

Measures that are being used to bring back and conserve the state's wild life resources were explained to delegates attending the annual convention of the Iowa Division of the Izaak Walton League of America at Des Moines, by Erling Swenson, Director of the Division of Game and Fish. Mr. Swenson was on the program Saturday morning.

Chares Horn, Minneapolis sportsman, and Dr. Preston Bradley, Chicago, National president, were included on the interesting program.

Mr. Swenson urged hunters to keep their bag of wild ducks to a minmum because of the threatened depletion of several species. With a full program of restoration of nesting grounds there is urgent need of conserving a sufficient breeding stock to repepulate these areas and produce birds for future years, Director Swenson pointed out.

"Do not be misled by local concentration of ducks on the larger bodies of water," he cautioned. "Drought and severe sand storms caused a heavy loss of young birds. It is important that all crippled be retrived and that every cooperation be given game wardens against illegal hunting practices."

The campaign is now drawing to a close and will soon be over. Extravagant claims and promises will be made. There will be rumors and gossip during the last few days. Do not be misled by boastful circulars and other propaganda that may be sent out. So far as I am concerned I wish to say and promise that if I am elected County Attorney I shall give the office my personal attention, and shall discharge all the duties of the office with common sense, in a careful, efficient and economical manner. I shall be fair and impartial, and give a square deal to everybody. I shall try to save the taxpayers money wherever possible, and safeguard the interests of the county in every way. That is all that anyone can do in public office. The vote and support of all voters will be highly appreciated. At this time I want to ask my friends throughout the county to be on the watch and give me their active support during the closing days of the campaign. Do not be misled by extravagant claims, or by campaign propaganda of any kind.
Sincerely yours,

To the voters of Marshall County

I regret very much that I will not have sufficient time to call upon all the voters in the county as I would have liked to. The best recommendation I can offer those who do not know me is the the splendid vote given me at the primary election in those sections of the county where I am best known.

Your vote and support at the general election Tuesday, November 6th will be greatly appreciated.

Ontario Has Low Rates With Their Publicly Owned Power Plants

Veteran Minneapolis Solon Explains Power Set up in Canadian Province

S. A. Stockwell, the author of the accompanying article is the veteran member of the Minnesota House of Representatives, entering that body in January 1891, now 43 years ago. He has been a consistent progressive, always found in the van as a fighter for the interests of the people. He has made a thorough study of public ownership and its application to power and light development. He is the author of the act passed by the last regular session of the legislature, allowing municipalities to extend publicly owned lines beyond the confines of their city limits. Ed.

By S. A. Stockwell

On a number of occasions the Republican candidate for Governer has attempted to discredit the Farmer-Labor Platform because it declares in favor of introducing the Ontario system of electrical production and distribution into Minnesota. He says, in substance, that "the Ontario system is a failure and that it would be the height of folly and very destructive to attempt its introduction in our state.'

Just what is the Ontario system? And what has it accamplished?

About thirty years ago the Parliament of Ontario created an electrical Commission to study and investigate the desirability of a public Ownership Power and Light system of production and distribution of electricity. The commission reported favorably on the project, and a permanent Hydro-Electric Commission with Sir Adam Beck, a wealthy and prosperous business man of New London, Ontario, was appointed Chairman. This Commission acquired for the people, a small plant of 100,000 h. p. at Niagara Falls. From this small beginning, a wonderful system covering all of Ontario has been developed. The people of Ontario now own a property worth $394,661,542.90. The generating and distribution system is worth $285,003,969.26, and the municipal distributing systems are valued at $109,657, 573.64. The total reserves of the production and distributing system are $69,433,260.25 and the reserve of the municipal systems stand at $59,736,819,76. The total reserves $129,170,080.01. This splendid property never cost the people of Ontario a single cent in taxes. It has been built out of rates, the lowest on this continent. There are many rates for light and power in important centers as low as two cents top rate, 1¼ cents second rate,, ¾ to ½ cent third rate. Our neighbor city of Fort William, Ontario, has a rate of 8 mills per k.w.h.

It is interesting to note that before public ownership was adopted by Ontario the rates were just as extortionate as they are in the United States today. What has caused this remarkable change?

The answer is the Public Ownership System adopted 30 years ago

The Ontario System is a perfect system in that it provides for the cheapest possible production and distribution and preserves local self-government in the municipalities and districts.

The Republican candidate for Governor has out of his own lips told the people of Minnesota whose candidate he is. It is plain the Power gang are interested in his candidacy. Nothing could be more certain. He has, in my judgement, perhaps willfully, misrepresented the system of our friendly neighbors in Ontario. It is outrageous that he should deceive the people of Minnesota and attempt to discredit the perfectly sound and solvent institution of a neighboring people, and all for a few votes. Mendacity could hardly stoop lower. Public ownership is the only way to handle a natural monopoly, of you expect to secure justice for the people. Regulation of a naturol monopoly has utterly failed and, in my judgement, always will. It is so in the very nature of the case. It is so int he verynatu re of the case.

I have received a letter from the Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission, who states there has been a decline in the income of the Commission due entirely to the depression but all of this decline has been absorbed by a Contingent Rate and Stabilization fund set up for just such an emergency. as we are passing through. Not a penny has been charged against taxes, as there was no occasion for it. As a matter of fact some of the municipalities who were entirely free from debt on their distribution system, have reduced rates during the depression. That all electric light and power companies have had a decline in revenue is well known.

The MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE on October 9 has this item: "Northern States Earnings Drop"

"New York, Oct. 8 (AP) Net earnings of the Northern States Power Co. (Minnesota) and subsidiaries during the fiscal year ended June 30 totaled $12,031,713, compared with the $12,783,602 in the preceding 12 months."

The people of Ontario are proud and justly so, of their "hydro." And such wild statements as are made by the Republican candidate for Governor lead them to think that the people of the United States are just plain liars. Ontario is not the only country blessed with low rates. Our neighboring city of Winnipeg has a domestic rate of .89 of a cent per k.w.h. as against an average rate of 5½ cent per k.w. for domestic service in this country. U. S. Senator Homer T. Bone of Washington lives in Tacoma, where they have a very fine municipal plant for which Mr. Bone lives in a modern 11-room home, entirely electrical, heat, refrigeration, and all the rest. In the month of December, last, he consumed 2,265 k.w.h. and his bill for this service $16.44. This amount of service at the most favorable domestic rate now given to me as a patron of the Northern States Power Co., would be over $53.00, or about $600 for a year's service. That of course is positively prohibitive. The Farmer-Labor people of Minnesota, if given control of the government at the coming election, will take a forward step in bringing this marvelous servant of mankind to the homes and farms of the people of the state of Minnesota at rates that they can afford to pay. A vote for the Farmer-Labor candidates is a vote to introduce into the homes and farms of Minnesota the most useful servant of humankind so far developed.

I feed deeply grateful for the very large primary vote given me, being in excess of fifteen thousand, nine hundred votes, and wish to take this occasion to thank you, the electors of this District, for your splendid endorsement.

Because of the work of the office this fall, it will be impossible for me to make a personal campaign of this extensive district, and all that I can expect to do is to meet voters at such public gatherings as I shall have an opportunity to attend.

Since I have held the office of District Judge for but a few months, it is my hope that I may be privileged to serve in this capacity for a full term, striving to merit the confidence of your favorable votes November 6th.

Influence of the Moon

One need only remember that the weekly change of moon phase necessarily comes near the same time with a large per cent of weather changes, and these coincidences are remembered, while a large number of failures to coincide are overlooked and forgotten. Weather, too, is very different at different localities, and probably there is always a marked change going on somewhere when the moon is advancing from one phase to another. Investigation fails to reveal a decided preponderance either one way or the other, and any seeming influence of the moon upon weather is a natural result of pure chance.

THE READER'S ROSTRUM

To the Editor:

The election is now just around the corner, and the people will again have decided who shall be at the helm of our state government for another two years.

We are of course all agreed that Governor Floyd B. Olson will be returned to the gubernatorial chair, which he justly deserves. Olson should be re-elected in order to further put into practice the program which he has laid out.

But to re-elect Olson is not enough! We must give him a friendly legislature, because the work he has laid out calls for legislative acts to make it possible to put into practice his program. So you can plainly see that by re-electing Olson and giving him a legislature of an opposing party would be like an individual that hired one man to manage his business and then hire assistants for him that would put every obstacle in the way. None of you would do this because you knew beforhand you would get nothing done. This then brings me to the point that I wish to call to your attention.

We have for this district our regularly endorsed candidates for the legislature, W. E. Day, J. O. Melby, and Paul A. Harris. Day and Melby have their legislative records to back them up, while Harris was drafted on his record of being a progressive in his private and public life

Now, we have also Mr. E. L Tungseth who was drafted by the Republican element of our city, and who also has, I understand, tried to tell different people that he feels a Farmer-Laborite when he feels that this will give him the desired votes. We also know that Tungseth does not always weigh his statements very carefully and that he is a bitter opponent of Governor Olson, as was shown in his editorial in the Zion Messenger last spring regarding Olson's stand on liquor control.

The editorial begins, "Now our Minnesota Governor, according to the late press, places control as a secondary matter and revenue the main thing." For this statement, Tungseth had no other foundation than alluding to the "late press" and it has not even appeared there as he failed to submit evidence when offered a donation to the Thief River Falls relief fund by Governor Olson if he could show any such statement made by any paper in the United States purporting to quote Gov. Olson as saying such.

Olson's statement to the control committee at their first meeting was "The possibility of revenue from the sale of liquor is entirely secondary to the consideration of temperance."

Yes, "God give us men!" Men who will stand for what is true and who will work for the interests of the common people.

Vote for Paul A. Harris for state senator on November 6th!

Yours for a better Minnesota,
T. H. Bjorke.

The Modern Slant

By ELLANOR HARRIS

WNU Service

JOYCE peeped hurriedly into boxes and drawers in a last minute search for things she might have overlooked in her packing; important little things, accessories upon which hung the individuality or charm of many of her frocks. The task completed, she put her compact, lipstick and handkerchief into her handbag, and tucked it under her arm, as she gave herself a final admiring survey in the long cheval glass.

Her mind was not wholly upon herself, she was thinking of the costume ball to be held that night at the Country club, wishing she had waited to name her going-away day until after the date for the ball had been announced. Not that she cared anything about the dance. It was Jim.

She tried not to wonder whom he would take, with whom he would dance most and sit out dances. Of course he would do these things. They had both agreed that they would go on doing the things they had been doing. Go on living their own lives right up to their wedding day. They both had had a modern slant on things, were both above petty jealousies; and the friendships they had made were not to be broken just because they were to be married.

The gently stirring breeze wafted sounds of laughter up to her. Her friends were gathering on the lawn to see her off. Hurrying below she stood beside Jim on the long shadowy veranda, looking irresistible in her cool white linen ensemble, as she answered a nod here, a wave of hat or handkerchief there.

Her eyes fell upon Betty's new maroon roadster, and Betty, herself, waving a hand at her. Behind Betty's car was Anita's green coupe. Anita on the running board, her shining taffy colored curls blowing in the breeze. Joyce eyed them askance. Betty and Anita were both in love with Jim, or so it had been hinted to her.

She looked at Jim, followed the direction of his gaze. There stood Helen. Once he had been engaged to Helen. It was rumored that a silly quarrel had terminated that romance. Such a trifling thing should have made no difference to people in love, which, of course, they were. Jim had never mentioned Helen's name. But he wouldn't. He rarely ever spoke of people.

Joyce felt dizzy. She had never before realized how many beautiful girls there were in Hampton, and Jim, the most desirable young man in their set still unmarried. She had often wondered which of the lovely creatures would have finally won him, had she not happened to come there.

"Time's up! Only fifteen minutes left to make your train," came the voice of her father from the baggage laden car parked at the gate. Jim caught her hand and they raced down the walk and crowded into the front seat with him. As they sped along, Joyce thought of a trip to come. A trip in Jim's car, with old shoes tied on behind and rice showered over everything. Or would there be such a trip coming if she went away on a long visit now? She was not certain she wanted to make this extended visit. Her happy anticipation at the thought of it was gone.

With affected cheerfulness she settled herself into her compartment, while Jim and her father stowed away her luggage and piled magazines and candy within easy reach. As she kissed them goodby, she choked down the lump in her throat. Would Jim be taken home in her father's car? If not, which of the cars would take him home, or perhaps somewhere else—and where?

At the next station, a perturbed young woman in a cool white linen ensemble left the train, and summoned a taxi to take her to Hampton. There she smuggled herself into her father's house, and that night she attended the ball at the Country club, a bewitching Spanish dancer in a ravishing costume, a stranger whom no one seemed to recognize.

Jim, in his courtly Louis XVI dress, was completely captivated by the fascinating stranger, cut in on her dances again and again, sat out dances with her. Whispers behind fans and soft white hands became a part of the atmosphere. The romance of it was glamorous!

Came the moment to unmask and Jim hovered over her eagerly, for she was trying to escape him. His hand fell lightly upon her arm.

"Don't be shy," he whispered softly in her ear. "Hurry and take that disfiguring thing from your face. You know I'm dying to look at you. You dream dancer from Fairyland! I know you are beautiful, you goddess girl. I knew you were my dream girl the moment that I laid my eyes on you."

Joyce felt as if a piece of ice had suddenly been wedged into her heart. So this was her man with a modern slant on things! Her man who was free to go his own gait until their wedding day! The light of life seemed to flicker and die out. Joyce was crushed.

Again he was whispering in her ear. "Please hurry. I can't wait another second. I haven't seen your face since I put you on a north bound train this morning."

She snatched the mask from her face, her body tremulous with joy.

"Oh, Jim!" It was all she could say.

Pendulum Clocks

Pendulum clocks did not come into being until the discoveries of Galileo, just after 1600, that a weight swinging on a string or rod took almost exactly the same time to cover one oscillation as it did another, despite the fact that the length of the swings, or the amplitude, might be very different, says a writer in the New York Herald Tribune. The rachet wheel and escapement mechanism as used on pendulum clocks are arranged so that the small impulse to keep the pendulum swinging was applied at the lowest point of the swing. During the rest of the swing the mechanism was moving under its own momentum.

Freed Slaves in Church

Henry Ward Beecher freed a mulatto girl in a Brooklyn church in 1848. He appealed to the congregation thus: "This is a marketable commodity. Such as she are put into one balance and silver into the other. I reverence woman. For the sake of the love I bore my mother I hold her sacred even in the lowest position and will use every means in my power for her uplifting. What will you do now? May she read her liberty in your eyes? Shall she go out free?" The congregation responded generously with money to free the girl. Subsequently the noted minister freed other slaves in his pulpit.

Insanitary, Unsanitary

Insanitary is the preferred form although unsanitary also is found in most dictionaries. This is but one of many instances (such as inactive, inapt, inacapable) in which un- is giving way to in- as a prefix meaning not.

Ants Protect Aphids

The aphid has a best friend as well as an enemy, observes a writer in the Kansas City Star. It is the honeydew ant, which is fond of a sweet substance called honeydew, given off by the aphids. The ants carefully tend the aphids, driving enemies away. In winter the ants sometimes carry the aphids or their eggs into ant nests and protect them there until spring. The presence of excited ants on a plant is considered one of the best signs of the presence of the minute plant lice. The aphids sometimes are called "ants' cows" because of this relationship.

Beavers Ban Lazy Ones

Lazy animals will not be tolerated in a beaver colony and those which shirk their share of the work are driven from the lodge and compelled to live alone along the river banks in mud holes. They are known as "bank" beavers.

Indianapolis Laid Out in 1821

The city of Indianapolis was laid out in 1821 by Alexander Ralston from the plans of Major L'Enfant with whom Ralston was associated at the time Major L'Enfant laid the plans for Washington, D. C. The plan is a happy combination of the "spider web" of Versailles and Thomas Jefferson's plan of the federal city of regular squares. Indianapolis was incorporated as a city in 1853.

Frog Has Quick Tongue

In capturing its food, the frog whips out its long, sticky tongue, nabbing the fly before it has had a chance to stretch a wing. Since the tongue is attached to the front of the mouth the frog can flip it out quickly, nab its prey, and "swallow" both tongue and food.

POISON NOW USED TO COMBAT POISON

Six grains of strychnine injected into a normal person would cause violent convulsions and death. Yet this dose of poison actually saved the life of a woman found unconscious after taking 225 grains of veronal, which is 12 times a fatal dose. She was unconscious for 60 hours.

Nothing in modern medicine is more astonishing than the use of deadly poisons to cure disease, says Tit-Bits Magazine. Curare, used by the Indians of South America to tip their blowpipe darts, is being tried as a cure for the convulsions which occur in lockjaw, hydrophobia, and similar ailments; snake venom has been found useful in cases of epilepsy, St. Vitus' dance, neuritis and rheumatism.

One of the most deadly reptiles in the world is the gila monster, a blunt-headed, hideous lizard which inhabits the deserts of Arizona. The poison of this lizard in very minute doses is used in cases of the paralysis known as locomotor ataxia. Bottled bee stings act magic in cases of rheumatism, and in some cases of neuralgia, while a new drug called digoxin, made from the very poisonous foxglove, is valuable in a form of heart disease. Strangest of all, mustard gas is being employed as a cure for the common cold and for controlling the infection of influenza, while that horribly poisonous gas known as Lewisite is used in the treatment of paresis (paralysis of the insane).

LAPPETS RULED OUT AS BRITISH DRESS

Lappets are no more.

And in case you should want to know what a lappet is, they were once officially described as "graceful headdresses worn at court" in the Victorian era, reports the UP. Service.

In fact, lappets were all the rage then. Now, by an order of Queen Mary herself, they have become extinct. Until recently the dress regulations for those attending court included the words "Lace lappets may be worn." In the new copies of these regulations, however, the statement is missing.

"We deleted it because women going to court frequently asked us what lappets were, and we did not know," said an official of the lord chamberlain's office in an interview. "The queen decided that this old headdress was obsolete, and the sentence was struck out. The fashion has not been seen at court for thirty years."

But it does not matter, anyway, for it is impossible to buy a lappet here. They just don't know what they are, although one of the very oldest of the assistants said that they used to be worn across the front of the hair, falling over the ears on either side.

Elephants Defy Eviction Notice

Persuasive powers of circus elephants are not rated so highly in the suburbs of Umtali, Rhodesia, as they were prior to the visit of a herd of wild members of the trunked family. Fierce bush fires recently drove the nomadic herd to the outskirts of the city, and the suburbanites became frightened. Police placed a cordon around the elephant area, but when the huge visitors overstayed their welcome six trained elephants were borrowed from a traveling circus to persuade their wild brethren to leave peacefully. Instead of retiring the unwelcome guests charged the educated elephants and then made a drive against the sightseers, causing a stampede of suburbanites. Finally the police lighted the suburb's bush and the flames drove the invaders away.

Huge U. S. Map

After nine years of labor by expert topographers, about one-third of a huge map of the United States has been completed at Wellesley, Mass. When finished, this map will be 63 feet long, 46 feet wide and will show every mountain and valley in the country reproduced exactly to scale in height and size. Eventually, it will contain 900 blocks. When the map is completed, it is expected to be of invaluable service to rail and air-line engineers in mapping new routes. It is constructed on a curved surface representing the exact curvature of the earth.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Grammar

"Why don't you put an occasional epigram into your speeches?"

"I haven't a literary constituency," answered Senator Sorghum, "the folks out home demand charts and figures. What they want is a diagram."

Where the Kick Comes In

"Doc, what I need is something to stir me up—something to put me in fighting trim. Have you put anything like that in this prescription?"

"No. You'll find that in my bill."

The Wrong Time

He (on the dance floor)—I wish I were in your shoes.

She—Perhaps, but I wish you would refrain from attempting to get into them now.

Quite So

Young Doctor—I found him quite delirious. He kept begging me to spare his life!

Wife—But that was lucid enough, wasn't it?

How "A Great Financial Empire" Was Built

Synopsis of Testimony Developed in the Hearings On The Northwest Bancorporation

Independent Bankers Are Thorn in Side

The Independent Bankers' Association of Minnesota presided over by Harry Lee as president, seems to have been a thorn in the side of Northwest Bancorporation. It would appear that the activities became obnoxious to the chain bankers, with the result that when they were sure that Rudolph Lee, a writer on the Minneapolis Journal, was a brother of the president of the Independent Bankers Association, an attempt was made to get Rudolph Lee to "talk to his brother, Harry Lee" to the end that they might see what could be done about getting the Independent Banker's Association into line. A letter to this effect was introduced in the course of the hearing. As the activities of the Independent Bankers' Associaton of Minnesota continued against chain banks, this plan does not seem to have met with success. Perhaps the idea that Rudolph Lee could, or would, attempt to influence his brother, Harry Lee, was more a thought than a reality. At any rate there appeared no reason why the Independent Bankers' Association should traffic with the enemy, and the meeting was never held. The activites of this organization of which Mr. Lee was president continued unabated against the group bank fallacy.

It is self-evident that the control of banking resources of the northwest, carried with it the control of the borrowers of money who found it essential to have bank credit in order to keep their factories open and their business going.

While the investigation was in progress, E. W. Decker, who was chairman the board of directors of Northwest Bancorporation, was slated, according to the press to be re-elected to this position at the annual stockers meeting. Startling disclosures were made in the testimony produced before the department of commerce, and a few days after the daily press carried the announcement that Mr. Decker was to be re-elected as chairman of the board of directors, he found it convenient to announce that he would not seek re-election and would retire on account of his age, and to attend to other matters. The same daily press which had carried to their readers the glowing stories of Northwest Bancorporation's future, then proceeded to carry to their readers much publicity on Mr. Decker's retirement, and the reason for it, less perchance, the public might feel it had been induced by the disclosures which were made in the course of the investigation. In any event, the service which he had been to the company was promptly rewarded by placing him upon a pension out of the fund of Northwestern National Bank, one of their subsidiaries. In the meantime his note for money that he had borrowed to finance his operations in the stock market, so far as the record discloses, continued to be "slow and non-breakable" and due and owing to the Union Investment Company, a wholly owed subsidiary of Northwest Bancorporation.

Hearings Not Completed

Hearings in connection with this matter have not been completed. Because of the startling nature of the disclosures, Governor Olson has ordered the county attorney of Hennepin county to present the facts to the grand jury for their study as to what, if any, criminal statutes of the state of Minnesota have been violated. Commissioner S. Paul Skahen forthwith laid before E. J. Goff, county attorney of Hennepin county, all evidence that had been introduced in the course of the hearings. The services of Mr. Watson, counsel for the commission, were asked for in connection with any possible prosecution and he is now cooperationg with the officials of Hennepin county in conection with the matter.

To the stockholders of Northwest Bancorporation the New Empire has been a tragedy. A tragedy to the tune of eighty-five million dollars or thereabouts. To the general public, the disclosures which have been made during the investigation call aloud for action, prompt, vigorous, and effective.

To the promotors and rulers of the New Empire, the future does not seem to be as full of alluring promises as were the statements that were made to investors in their stock.

According to the daily press of Minneapolis, the rulers of the New Empire during June, 1934, notified their stockolders who had confined their savings to these men, that it would be necessary to re-value the worth of the stock and suggested fixing the stated value of the 1,600,000 shares which had been sold at prices as high as $100 a share, at approximately $5.00 a share, or $8,000,000 in the aggregate. In 1929 and 1930 the company's financial statement boasted of ninety odd million dollars, and of the wonderful savings that were to be made in the institutions affiliated with them by reason of their marvelous management. Over $7,000,000 the dividends were paid and in the meanwhile $85,000,000 of their capital assets have either evaporated or become reserves for contingencies, or outright losses, or "slow and unbankable" loans to their own officers and directors. At any rate the assets have lost their value. The record discloses that at the height of their stock selling campaign dinners for the directors costing hundreds of dollars were paid out for, out of the company's funds belonging to stockholders. Entertainers were hired, and paid for out of the treasury, that these directors might make merry. A dinner for Martin Insull, now under indictment in connection with the greatest stock selling operation that this country has ever known, was tendered at the Minneapolis Athletic Club by certain officers and directors, and paid for by the stockholders out of their funds. No doubt these dinners and entertainers contributed much toward putting the promotors in a frame of mind so that they in turn could perform the functions of their office, and properly conserve the assets of the stockholders, and manage the business affairs of these 135 chain banks which were bringing the New Financial Empire to the Northwest.

Nazis Bludgeon Church members IntoSubmission

Stuttgart (TIS)—The newly enthroned primate of Germany's Nazified Evangelical Curch, Reich Bishop Ludwig Mueller, is at present feverishly busy with bludgeoning the dissenting church elements in Western and South Germany into the folds of Nazism. The Wuerttemberg church administration has already been reorganized so as to destroy the independence of the synod formerly elected by the church members. The synod has been replaced by a body made up chiefly of appointees submissive to the will of the Nazi church masters.

At a meeting in Stuttgart, seat of the once independent Wuerttemberg regional church of which 90 per cent of the pastors are opposing the Nazi claims, the Reich Bisop declared that it is essential to bring Nazi experience and Nazi methods into the Church. The bishop's assertion was greeted with enthusiastic shourts of "Heil" by the assembled hand-picked church delegates.

The Reader's Rostrum

Editor, Thief River Falls Forum,
Thief, River Falls, Minnesota.

Dear friend,

I wish at this time to congratulate the editor for the splendid paper he is putting out, and for the valiant fight the Forum is waging for the Farmer-Labor cause, the boys in Pennington county and for that part the entire 65th, Legislative Dist. can be proud of their paper, and here is wishing good luck and lots of it to Mr. Harris, Mr. Day and Mr. Melby, and that the voters of Dist, 65 will put you over the top November 6th.

Since the Forum has so many subscribers in Marshall county, I will with the editor's permission write a few words about the political situation here. I am out some with Mr. Richard Rice, our candidate for State Senator in 67th, and the voters are showing keen interest in his campaign, and every indication is that both Mr. Rice, and Mr. Evans will be elected with big majorities; both are men we can feel proud of.

I now will try to write about the sheriff deal in Marshall county when former sheriff Bordewich passed the board of county commissioners appointed Mr. M. C. Hanson of Viking, Minn. to fill out the former sheriff's term, but at the time of his appointment the county board members entered into what I would call a gentleman's agreement with him that he was not to cause them trouble by becoming a tsicker candidate for sheriff later on, and at about the same time he came out in the press that he was not to run for sheriff in the fall election, but now he forgets all and every promise and enters into an intensive sticker campaign as one can well think of. I have known Mr. Hanson for a good many years and always found him to be an honest and truthful, but now he must have gotten into bad company and you know the old saying, "hansome is as handsome does," and that applies in this case. He is a rank, republican and as such mix with that rotton crew, and I advise every true Farmer-Laborite to leave him alone.

I would at this time urge every Farmer-Laborite to be true to their party, vote the Farmer-Labor ticket from top to bottom. Why should we go and elect republicans who will try to hurt us at every turn, heap lies and slander at us at all acasions? No, let's leave them alone and in Marshall county let's all turn out and give Rice and Evans the glad hand and a bumper vote. We did a fairly good job at the primary let's turn out and complete the job now.

Very truly yours,
G. A. SUSTAD

ADDITIONAL ROUTES.

Whenever, either by reason of the creation of a new county, or by reason of the change of the county seat of any existing county, any city or village not a county seat at the time of the adoption of this amendment is lawfully constituted the county seat of any county, the legislature is authorized to add to the trunk highway system such additional routes connecting such newly constituted county seats with other county seats and other points in the state.

When after at least seventy-five (75) per cent of the total number of the miles of the routes embraced in the trunk highway system hereinbefore specified shall have been constructed and permanently improved, the legislature shall have authority to add new routes to such trunk highway system; provided, however, that no such new routes shall be added until and unless the funds available for the construction, improvement and maintenance of such additional routes shall be sufficient therefor in addition to the construction, improvement and maintenance of the several routes hereinbefore specifically described."

If amended as proposed by the legislature this section will read exactly the same as it now reads except that the last paragraph now appearing in this section will be omitted therefrom, and in the place of and instead of the paragraph so omitted will appear a paragraph which reads as follows:

"The legislature shall have authority to add new routes to such trunk highway system. All new routes added to the trunk highway system by act of the legislature during the session of 1933, are hereby ratified and confirmed. Provided, however, that no such new routes shall be added after the adoption of this amendment, until and unless at least seventy-five (75) per cent of the total number of the miles of the routes embraced in the trunk highway system heretofore created and established either by Article 16 of the Constitution of the State of Minnesota or by the legislature under and pursuant to said Article 16 shall have been constructed and permanently improved."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment

The purpose and effect of this amendment is to ratify and confirm the establishment of all new routes added to the trunk highway system by the 1933 legislature, and to give the legislature unrestricted authority to add new routes to the trunk highway system after seventy-five (75) per cent of the total number of the miles of the routes established by Article 16 of the State Constitution and established by the legislature acting pursuant thereto prior to the time this amendment was proposed, have been constructed and permanently improved.

By the adoption of Chapter 441 of the Laws of 1933, the legislature has proposed an amendment to Section 10 of Article 9 of the State Constitution. This section now reads as follows:

"The credit of the state shall never be given or loaned in aid of any individual, association or corporation, except as hereinafter provided. Nor shall there be any further issue of bonds denominated 'Minnesota State Railroad Bonds,' under what purports to be an amendment to section ten (10) of article nine (9) of the Constitution, adopted April 15, 1858, which is hereby expunged from the Constitution, saving, excepting and reserving to the state, nevertheless, all rights, remedies and forfeitures accruing under said amendment. Provided, however, that for the purpose of developing the agricultural resources of the state, the state may establish and maintain a system of rural credits and thereby loan money and extend credit to the people of the state upon real estate security in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by law, and to issue and negotiate bonds to provide money to be so loaned. The limit of indebtedness contained in section 5 of this article shall not apply to the provisions of this section, and the purposes for which the credit of the state or the aforesaid municipal subdivisions thereof may be given or loaned as herein provided are declared to be public purposes."

If amended as proposed by the legislature this section will read as follows:

"The credit of the state shall never be given or loaned in aid of any individual, association or corporation, except as hereinafter provided. Nor shall there be any further issue of bonds denominated 'Minnesota State Railroad Bonds,' under what purports to be an amendment to Article 9, Section 10 of the Constitution, adopted April 15th, 1858, which is hereby expunged from the Constitution, saving, excepting and reserving to the state, nevertheless, all rights, remedies and forfeitures accruing under said amendment. Provided, however, that for the purposes of developing the agricultural resources of the state, the state may establish and maintain a system of rural credits and thereby loan money and extend credit to the people of the state upon real estate security in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by law, and to issue and negotiate bonds to provide money to be so loaned. The limit of indebtedness contained in Section 5 of this article shall not apply to the provisions of this section, and the purposes for which the credit of the state or the aforesaid municipal subdivisions thereof may be given or loaned as herein provided are declared to be public purposes.

The legislature may authorize the taxing of any lands, title to which is acquired by the state through the operation of such system of rural credits, during the period such lands are held by the state, and for the assessment thereof for benefits arising from improvement, and may provide for the payment of such taxes and assessments out of the operation of such system of rural credits. In lieu of such taxation the legislature may appropriate to the school districts, towns, counties, cities, villages and boroughs in which such lands are located sums of money not exceeding the amounts which would have been realized by such governmental subdivisions from the assessments against or taxation of such lands if privately owned."

It will be noted that the present Section 10 of Article 9 remains unchanged as the first paragraph of the proposed amendment but that a second paragraph is added to said section.

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment

The purpose of the proposed amendment is to give the legislature the power to do one of two things which it now lacks the constitutional power to do, namely: first, to authorize the taxing of any land, and the assessment of benefits for improvements against any land, which the state has acquired and owns or may acquire and own through the operation of the system of rural credits and to provide for the payment of such taxes and assessments out of the funds of the Rural Credit Department; or, second, to appropriate to the counties, towns, school districts, cities, villages and boroughs in which are located lands acquired and owned by the state under the rural credit acts sums of money not exceeding the amounts which would be realized by said governmental subdivisions from the taxation of such lands and from the assessment of benefits against such lands if owned by private persons.

Under the Rural Credit Act the state has become the owner of thousands of farms located in various counties of the state. As our State Constitution now stands, such land, being owned by the state, cannot be taxed. It naturally follows that other land within the same taxing district must pay higher taxes.

Likewise, the legislature does not now have the power to appropriate to the counties, towns, school districts, cities, villages and boroughs any funds of the Rural Credit Department to reimburse them for losses suffered by them because large areas of land acquired by the state under the rural credit law thereby have been removed from the tax rolls.

The effect of the passing of this amendment, if the power thereby given is acted upon by the legislature, will be to make good to these local subdivisions, in whole or in part, the loss they now suffer because they cannot tax rural credit land.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 3.

By the adoption of Chapter 442 of the Laws of 1933, the legislature has proposed an amendment to Section 1 of Article 9 of the State Constitution. This section now reads as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200, for each household, individual or head of a family, as the legislature may determine: Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads."

If amended as proposed by the legislature, this section will read as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200, for each household, individual or head of a family, and household goods and farm machinery, as the legislature may determine:

Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment

The purpose and effect of this amendment is to grant to the legislature, in addition to the power now granted by said section to exempt personal property, the authority to exempt from taxation, such household goods of each household, and such farm machinery of each farm, as it may see fit. By the present Section 1 of Article 9 the legislature is granted the authority to exempt from taxation unspecified personal property not exceeding in value $200 for each household, individual, or head of a family.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 4.

By the adoption of Chapter 443 of the Laws of 1933 the legislature has proposed an amendment to Article 8 of the State Constitution. This amendment will not add to or alter any existing section of the Constitution, but will add a new section to be known as Section 8 of Article 8. The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"Any of the public lands of the state, including lands held in trust for any purpose, may, with the approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor, be exchanged for lands of the United States and other privately owned lands as the legislature may provide, and the lands so acquired shall be subject to the trust, if any, to which the lands exchanged therefor were subject, and the state shall reserve all mineral and water and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment

The purpose and effect of this amendment is to authorize the legislature to provide for exchanging any of the public lands of the state for lands of the United States and land privately owned, such exchanges to be made with the approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor. Such exchanges of land cannot now be made because the State Constitution does not permit the legislature to authorize the sale of school lands, state swamp lands and state internal improvement lands except by public sale. One immediate purpose in granting such authority is to make it possible for the state to acquire compact areas of land for forestry and other conservation purposes by exchanging land outside of such conservation areas for lands of the United States and privately owned lands within such areas.

The amendment requires that all mineral rights, water rights and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state shall be reserved. The land so acquired will become subject to the same trust, if any, as the land disposed of. For example, if school land is given in exchange, the land received will become school land.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 5.

By the adoption of Chapter 444 of the Laws of 1933, the legislature proposed an amendment to Section 1 of Article 9 of the State Constitution. At present Section 1 of Article 9 reads as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200, for each household, individual or head of a family, as the legislature may determine: Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads."

If amended as proposed by the legislature, said section will read as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200, for each household, individual or head of a family as the legislature may determine. Academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning shall be construed to mean the property actually and exclusively used in the instruction and housing of the students thereof, and residences on the campus actually occupied by instructors of such institutions. Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of a railroad."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment

The purpose and effect of this amendment is to mention specifically and define definitely the property of academies, colleges, universities and seminaries of learning which shall be exempt from taxation. The present Section 1 of Article 9 provides that academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning shall be exempt from taxation, but does not specifically state what property of such institutions shall be tax exempt. If the proposed amendment is adopted the only property of said educational institutions which will be exempt from taxation under this section will be the property actually and exclusively used in the instruction and housing of the students thereof and residences on the campus actually occupied by instructors of such institutions.

Your respectfully,
HARRY H. PETERSON
Attorney General

for Superintendent of Schools

MARSHALL COUNTY

My program has been:

1. To build up the incomes from state sources. (This is the only income tending to equalize costs between the school districts of the state.)
2. To direct the buying of essentials and to keep fads and frills out of the schools.
3. To build up regularity in grading and promotions. (Our standards are the same as the graded schools.)
4. To build up the school libraries to meet the needs for the required reading.
5. To improve regularity of attendance by emphasizing its value rather than through criminal prosecution.
6. To give the rural school graduate an adequate foundation for carrying on high school work should he attend.

If re-elected I propose to carry on the same program and to enrich the activities as much as may be without saddling a burden on pupils and teachers.

I assure you that your vote and support will be appreciated and remembered. Sincerely yours, NELS M. ENGEN way, he said, the amount of the taxes paid by the person or firm would then fluctuate with economic conditions and you would not be penalized for not making the cost of production such as we are under our present tax system. The farmers and the home owners now pay a tax on real estate which is based on a fixed valuation and the tax never varies regardless of economic conditions while the railroads, telephone companies etc. pay a gross income tax which fluctuates with economic conditions. If we are afraid to change the system that produces misery and want then we can resort only to the income tax and the inheritance tax to level out the inequalities of the system.

ELECT

JUDITH LOCKREM

County Superintendent of Schools

I have been requested by my friends to announce myself as a sticker candidate for County Superintendent of Schools.

I am sorry it is impossible for me to do any campaigning personally. I am sending no stickers as that is unecessary expense and work. It is lawful just to write my name in the blank space on the ballot. If you find my name hard to remember, please take it with you to the polls for reference, or ask my friends for stickers.

I was born in Pennington County 28 years ago; am a graduate of Lincoln High School and Teachers Training Department at Thief River Falls; have one year at the Moorhead State Teachers College which I attended a year ago. While there, I was elected a member of the Lambda Fraternity of the College. I have taught five years in Pennington and one in Clearwater Counties.

My home is with my parents who are taxpayers of this county.

If you, my friends, elect me, I pledge to faithfully fulfill the duties of this office without an assistant, with the strictest economy and efficiency, and with a sincere impartial service.

I shall greatly appreciate your support and vote on Nov. 6th. Please remember my name. Thank you!

General Election

Nov. 6, 1934

In my former announcements, I have enumerated the work that I have done during my first term in office. I feel than I can be of even greater seavice if given another term. Make your own comparisons, then decide.

There is no need of sympathy in this campaign. Close doesn't count except in the game of horse-shoe; nor was the last election decided only on the draw after the tie vote. There was an election contest and a recount of the votes, that now seems to have been forgoten. All this, of course, is immaterial. The important thing is what was done while in office.

I have tried to be fair, active and alert in the handling of all county business. I have maintained my own office and paid my own clerical help.

I am asking for your vote and support upon facts, not upon polished promises and high sounding phrases.

If you feel that my first term entitles me to re-election please say a good word in my behalf to your friends.

JUDITH LOCKREM
County Superintendent of Schools

I have been requested by my friends to announce myself as a sticker candidate for County Superintendent of Schools.

I am sorry it is impossible for me to do any campaigning personally. I am sending no stickers as that is unecessary expense and work. It is lawful just to write my name in the blank space on the ballot. If you find my name hard to remember, please take it with you to the polls for reference, or ask my friends for stickers.

I was born in Pennington County 28 years ago; am a graduate of Lincoln High School and Teachers Training Department at Thief River Falls; have one year at the Moorhead State Teachers College which I attended a year ago. While there, I was elected a member of the Lambda Fraternity of the College. I have taught five years in Pennington and one in Clearwater Counties.

My home is with my parents who are taxpayers of this county.

If you, my friends, elect me, I pledge to faithfully fulfill the duties of this office without an assistant, with the strictest economy and efficiency, and with a sincere impartial service.

I shall greatly appreciate your support and vote on Nov. 6th. Please remember my name. Thank you!

General Election Nov. 6, 1934

In my former announcements, I have enumerated the work that I have done during my first term in office. I feel than I can be of even greater seavice if given another term. Make your own comparisons, then decide.
There is no need of sympathy in this campaign. Close does'nt count except in the game of horse-shoe; nor was the last election decided only on the draw after the tie vote. There was an election contest and a recount of the votes, that now seems to have been forgoten. All this, of course, is immaterial. The important thing is what was done while in office.
I have tried to be fair, active and alert in the handling of all county business. I have maintained my own office and paid my own clerical help.
I am asking for your vote and support upon facts, not upon polished promises and high sounding phrases.
If you feel that my first term entitles me to re-election please say a good word in my behalf to your friends.

TUNGSETH'S DEFENSE

In response to my offer of the use of the columns of the Forum, for any defense that he may wish to make in regard to charges I have made against him, Mr. Tungseth brought me the following statement this morning:

> WHAT HAVE YOU?
> Through the columns of this paper I hereby challenge the publishers of the Thief River Falls Forum, or any other responsible party to make a definite charge which can be subjected to prosecution.
> Insidious suggestions and questions do not constitute any charge, but only form a part of a dirty political game played by my opposition.
> I regret very much that men like Paul Harris and H. O. Berve and others who are responsible for the publication of the Thief River Falls Forum use an irresponsible person to throw the dirt they do not dare to throw themselves. You men can not hide behind the person who is in your employ and think you can get away with it.
> E. L. Tungseth

Your challenge is childish Mr. Tungseth. A charge which "can be subjected to prosecution" would be a false charge. A true charge can not be prosecuted. I deal only in true charges. My statements in regard to yourself are a matter of record. Copies of the Forum containing them are on file in my office, in the Carnegie Public Library in this city, and in the Minnesota Historical Society at St. Paul. I have already signified my willingness to prove my statements, in court, if you wish to take them there.

I have no retractions to make. Neither have I any further charges to make, nor would I make them at this late stage of the campaign if I had.

I have made certain criticism of your conduct of public affairs. I have asked you some questions, which to my mind, the voters of this district have a right to expect a reply to. You choose to evade the questions, and reply to the criticism with a statement of empty words. Calling me a "mud-slinger" and "an irresponsible person." I must therefore assume, and the voters must assume, that you have no defense to enter.

As to my responsibility: I will say for your benefit, and for the benefit of the editorial pen-pusher who parrots your pet phrase in a belated attempt to defend you, by making insinuations against me, thru the columns of the Thief River Falls Times, that I, and I alone, am the owner, publisher, and managing editor of the Forum. The opinions reflected there are my own, except insofar as they may coincide with the opinions of others who have reached the same conclusions. They are not paid for at so much per week, strange as that may seem to those who are in the habit of writing from the dictation of others.

If the gentlemen whom you mention in your letter, are friendly toward me and my publication, they have that sentiment in common with thousands of people thruout the territory. They have no control over me, nor over my newspaper.

THE EYES OF THE NATION ARE ON MINNESOTA

It seems to be generally understood, that the battle between Progress and Reaction, centers in Minnesota this year. The reason for this is quite obvious; Minnesota is the only state where the party of Progress has attained to some measure of power, and having attained that measure of power, has thrown down the gauntlet to the forces of Entrenched Greed by adopting a program, declaring for a change in the economic set-up, to the end, that the Common Man may enjoy the fruits of his labor, and live the full, happy, secure life that our country with its bountiful resources and the wonderful development of the machine age can supply in such plenty.

The forces of Reaction are desperate. Money has been spent without stint to discredit the Farmer-Labof party and its platform of social and economic justice. Truth has been raped in an effort to besmirch the character of our fearless, peerless leader. He has been accused of every misdeed in the catagory of crime, and the church and the burried and mouldering dead have been ravished to bring false witness against him.

But in its desperation, Greed has over-reached again. The venom of its attack has stung the Farmer-Laborites to the most determined efforts ever brought forth on behalf of a people's government. Three percent? The lousy cheapskates! Do they think we are pikers? One hundred percent, we give, and gladly, in defense of justice and the birthright of Humanity! Scores are donating their time and their vehicles; hundreds have taken leave of absence from their work and thrown themselves into the fray. thousands are drawing on their meager earnings and savings to defray the cost of printing. For the people shall know the truth, and the truth shall make us free.

The eyes of the nation are on Minnesota. The dwellers in the sandcaves of the Mississippi river banks and the dumpground cities appeal to Minnesota—three hundred and fifty thousand homeless, wandering children implore of Minnesota—millions of unemployed workers; millions of dispossessed farmers pray of Minnesota, DO NOT FAIL US NOW!

Voters of Minnesota: the men whose chilblained feet left bloody prints in the spotless snow of Valley Forge did not fail us; the men whose glassy eyes stared Heavenward, unseeing, on the fields of Gettysburg did not fail us; The men who sleep where poppies blow, in Flanders Field, did not fail us; the pioneers whose unremitted toil gave us our own fair state, did not fail us. Let future generations record,

WE DID NOT FAIL THEM.

PENN. CO. DRY LEAGUE BACKS DIST. JUDGES

Rev. E. A. Cooke is Elected President, Rev. Fjelstad Vice-President

The Pennington County Dry League and the local unit of the Women's Christian Temperance Union held a jointmeet ing at a one o'clock luncheon today at noon at the Trinity Lutheran church parlors which was served by Circle No. 4 of the Trinity Ladies' Aid.

Rev. E. A. Cooke, president of the Pennington County Dry League, presided as chairman for the occasion.

Mrs. J. M. Bishop spoke on the subject "Crime," stating that crime is not afraid of law, and is the result of the lack of law enforcement. Mrs. Bishop urged that we organize as well as the gangsters, extortionosts, and murderers have organized, and elect men to office who are unafraid.

"Christion Citizenship" was discussed by Mrs. Alma Levens of Crookston, who said in part that the present standard is blamed for crime.

Hon. M. A. Brattland spoke of the indulgence of money-making motives in the liquor traffic and quoted that "love of money is the root of all evil." To make progress for good citizenship, he suggested to strike at the root of money-making.

In the election of officers for the Dry League for the ensuing year, Rev. E. A. Cooke was re-elected president; Rev. R. M. Fjelstad was elected vice-president; and G. H. Mayor-Oakes and Miss Hannah Gustafson were re-elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Following is a lst of resolutions endorsed and submitted by the Pennington County Dry League and the WCTU unit:

First: that we indorse and urge the election of dry candidates for our State Legislature, both in Senate and House, and such legislators are elected, we pledge them our ment.
continued support and encouragement.

Second: We most earnestly urge the retention of our county and local option laws and more stringent regulations and increased penalties for violations of same.

Third: We commend the adoption of the legislation setting forth the educational program in our public schools teaching the effects of alchol on the human system. and urge its immediate and intensive use.

Forth: We urge the coming session of the legislature to strengthen all laws for curtailing and restricting the sale and use of alcoholic beverages.

County Officers

We urge election and pledge our support to candidates for county office who will enforce and uphold all laws restricting liquor traffic.

We especially urge the election Sheriff, and County Attorney and Judges of the Dist. Court who are in sympathy with and will uphold the dry legslation.

Whereas we believe the time will soon come when the sentiment of this nation will swing back to the dry cause, we urge the election at this time of congressional candidates who are favorable to revised legislation expressing this sentiment.

We deplore the increasing number of drunks both old and young, men and women brought about by the sale and use of so called non-intoxicating beer, also advertising of same over radio and in movies and believe that such advertising should be prohibited.

The Dry League and WCTU unanimously endorsed Hon. M. A. Brattland and Hon. J. E. Montague for district Judges. The secretary of the organization was instructed to spread this enforcement on the minutes and to forward copies of the same to the newspapers of the county for publication.

Senator R. T. Buckler, Polk County dirt farmer, and Farmer-Labor nominee for congressman from the ninth district, is especially well qualified and fitted to represent the agricultural Northwest in the national congress as shown by the past legislative record in the State Senate. He is generally credited with more legislation in behalf of the farmer than any other legislator during the past two decades.

In his campaign for election Senator Buckler is particularly stressing the need for agricultural legislation, fixing a minimum price for his produce, favoring the Swank-Thomas act; stressing the Frazier-Lemke bill offering the farmers new federal loans at 1½% amortization payments.

He is also urging the payment of soldiers' bonus and fairer treatment for disabled war veterans. national federal old age pension legislation preventing the issuance of tax exempt bonds and returning the control and regulation of money and credit to the federal government, according to Mr. Hagen an associate of Senator Buckler. Senator Buckler has just received word, according to a news bulletin received here, that he has received the full endorsement of the Railroad Brotherhoods legislative board and recognized standard railroad labor organizations and auxiliaries in Minnesota; and that he has also received the endorsement of the Soldiers' Bonus certifians Association, because of his declaration and stand for the payment of the Soldiers' Bonus sertificates and for his support of fairer treatment towards disabled veterans. TRUCK HEARING STARTS WED.; BRIEFS FILED

Plaintiff Holds that City Didn't Have Authority To Buy Truck

Testimony was taken Wednesday before Judge Brattland in the case of Harry Brumund and others against the city council's purchase of the fire truck. It was agreed by the parties of the case to submit briefs for the consideration of the court.

The plaintiff, represented by P. Lundgren, contended that the city administration had no right to enter into contract with Oen Mercantile Company for the purchase of the truck because there was no tax levy or any other arrangements made for the payment of the truck; and the anticipated earnings of the water and light department could not be brought into the consideration of this purchase.

The city, represented by city attorney Theo. Quale, contended that the city had sufficient funds on hand, or receivable during the remainder of the year to warrant the purchase of the fire equipment. P. G. Pederson, city clerk, was called upon to testify as to the earnings of the municipal light plant for the past several years by H. O. Chommie, attorney for the Oen Mercantile company, co-defendant, vendor of the truck.

Ministers Endorse Educational Plank Of F-L Platform

Because of a statement issued by the opponents of the Educational Plank of the Farmer-Labor Platform and signed by some of the Pastors of Lutheran Churches in Minneapolis, a group of local Ministers signed a statement to offset the opinion expessed by Rev. Sletten and others.

The ministers, signing this statement, expressed their desire to have this statement made by them published in the paper in order to show that they are not in accordance with the opinion expressed in the Minneapolis papers.

The statement follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

Our attention has been called to a statement by Rev. Sletten and one or two other Lutheran Ministers of Minneapolis, in regard to the Educational plank of the Farmer-Labor Platform, and particularly to that part which relates to the State Printing of School Books.

We are familiar with the Educational Plank of the Farmer-Labor Platform, and we want to assure the people of this section of the state that in our opinion there is no reason to fear the Educational Plank, or the Printing of Text Books for our children. We can see no harm in having the state print the school books. On the other hand if books can be furnished to the pupils of our schools at a lower price by the State, it would be a distinct advantage to the children and their parents. We believe that if the State printed school books they could be furnished more cheaply than they are now, and this would make it a great deal easier for many children to secure an education. The object and purpose of the Text Book Plan in the Farmer-Labor Platform is simply to reduce the cost of education to the pupils and their parents. This, to our minds, should be a commendable object, which can be approved by all who have the education and welfare of our children at heart.

Signed: M. H. Dahle, N. L. Minister, St. Hilaire; O. O. Bjorgan, Lutheran Pastor, Goodridge; J. K. Lerohl, Lutheran Pastor, Oklee; Hallvard Lee, Lutheran Pastor, Fisher; A. M. Ripple, Supt. of Schools, Plummer (high school) John A. Berling, Salvation Army Captain.

I have no retractions to make. Neither have I any further charges to make, nor would I make them at this late stage of the campaign if I had.

I have made certain criticism of your conduct of public affairs. I have asked you some questions, which to my mind, the voters of this district have a right to expect a reply to. You choose to evade the questions, and reply to the criticism with a statement of empty words. Calling me a "mud-slinger" and "an irresponsible person." I must therefore assume, and the voters must assume, that you have no defense to enter.

As to my responsibility: I will say for your benefit, and for the benefit of the editorial pen-pusher who parrots your pet phrase in a belated attempt to defend you, by making insinuations against me, thru the columns of the Thief River Falls Times, that I, and I alone, am the owner, publisher, and managing editor of the Forum. The opinions reflected there are my own, except insofar as they may coincide with the opinions of others who have reached the same conclusions. They are not paid for at so much per week, strange as that may seem to those who are in the habit of writing from the dictation of others.

If the gentlemen whom you mention in your letter, are friendly toward me and my publication, they have that sentiment in common with thousands of people thruout the territory. They have no control over me, nor over my newspaper.

THE EYES OF THE NATION ARE ON MINNESOTA

It seems to be generally understood, that the battle between Progress and Reaction, centers in Minnesota this year. The reason for this is quite obvious; Minnesota is the only state where the party of Progress has attained to some measure of power, and having attained that measure of power, has thrown down the gauntlet to the forces of Entrenched Greed by adopting a program, declaring for a change in the economic set-up, to the end, that the Common Man may enjoy the fruits of his labor, and live the full, happy, secure life that our country with its bountiful resources and the wonderful development of the machine age can supply in such plenty.

The forces of Reaction are desperate. Money has been spent without stint to discredit the Farmer-Labof party and its platform of social and economic justice. Truth has been raped in an effort to besmirch the character of our fearless, peerless leader. He has been accused of every misdeed in the catagory of crime, and the church and the burried and mouldering dead have been ravished to bring false witness against him.

But in its desperation, Greed has over-reached again. The venom of its attack has stung the Farmer-Laborites to the most determined efforts ever brought forth on behalf of a people's government. Three percent? The lousy cheapskates! Do they think we are pikers? One hundred percent, we give, and gladly, in defense of justice and the birthright of Humanity! Scores are donating their time and their vehicles; hundreds have taken leave of absence from their work and thrown themselves into the fray. thousands are drawing on their meager earnings and savings to defray the cost of printing. For the people shall know the truth, and the truth shall make us free.

The eyes of the nation are on Minnesota. The dwellers in the sandcaves of the Mississippi river banks and the dumpground cities appeal to Minnesota—three hundred and fifty thousand homeless, wandering children implore of Minnesota—millions of unemployed workers; millions of dispossessed farmers pray of Minnesota, DO NOT FAIL US NOW!

Voters of Minnesota: the men whose chilblained feet left bloody prints in the spotless snow of Valley Forge did not fail us; the men whose glassy eyes stared Heavenward, unseeing, on the fields of Gettysburg did not fail us; The men who sleep where poppies blow, in Flanders Field, did not fail us; the pioneers whose unremitted toil gave us our own fair state, did not fail us. Let future generations record, WE DID NOT FAIL THEM.

PENN. CO. DRY LEAGUE BACKS DIST. JUDGES

Rev. E. A. Cooke is Elected President, Rev. Fjelstad Vice-President

The Pennington County Dry League and the local unit of the Women's Christian Temperance Union held a jointmeet ing at a one o'-clock luncheon today at noon at the Trinity Lutheran church parlors which was served by Circle No. 4 of the Trinity Ladies' Aid.

Rev. E. A. Cooke, president of the Pennington County Dry League, presided as chairman for the occasion.

Mrs. J. M. Bishop spoke on the subject "Crime," stating that crime is not afraid of law, and is the result of the lack of law enforcement. Mrs. Bishop urged that we organize as well as the gangsters, extortionosts, and murderers have organized, and elect men to office who are unafraid.

"Christion Citizenship" was discussed by Mrs. Alma Levens of Crookston, who said in part that the present standard is blamed for crime.

Hon. M. A. Brattland spoke of the indulgence of money-making motives in the liquor traffic and quoted that "love of money is the root of all evil." To make progress for good citizenship, he suggested to strike at the root of money-making.

In the election of officers for the Dry League for the ensuing year, Rev. E. A. Cooke was re-elected president; Rev. R. M. Fjelstad was elected vice-president; and G. H. Mayor-Oakes and Miss Hannah Gustafson were reelected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Following is a lst of resolutions endorsed and submitted by the Pennington County Dry League and the WCTU unit:

First: that we indorse and urge the election of dry candidates for our State Legislature, both in Senate and House, and such legislators are elected, we pledge them our ment. continued support and encouragement.

Second: We most earnestly urge the retention of our county and local option laws and more stringent regulations and increased penalties for violations of same.

Third: We commend the adoption of the legislation setting forth the educational program in our public schools teaching the effects of alchol on the human system. and urge its immediate and intensive use.

Forth: We urge the coming session of the legislature to strengthen all laws for curtailing and restricting the sale and use of alcoholic beverages.

County Officers

We urge election and pledge our support to candidates for county office who will enforce and uphold all laws restricting liquor traffic.

We especially urge the election Sheriff, and County Attorney and Judges of the Dist. Court who are in sympathy with and will uphold the dry legslation.

Whereas we believe the time will soon come when the sentiment of this nation will swing back to the dry cause, we urge the election at this time of congressional candidates who are favorable to revised legislation expressing this sentiment.

We deplore the increasing number of drunks both old and young, men and women brought about by the sale and use of so called non-intoxicating beer, also advertising of same over radio and in movies and believe that such advertising should be prohibited.

The Dry League and WCTU unanimously endorsed Hon. M. A. Brattland and Hon. J. E. Montague for district Judges. The secretary of the organization was instructed to spread this enforcement on the minutes and to forward copies of the same to the newspapers of the county for publication.

Senator R. T. Buckler, Polk County dirt farmer, and Farmer-Labor nominee for congressman from the ninth district, is especially well qualified and fitted to represent the agricultural Northwest in the national congress as shown by the past legislative record in the State Senate. He is generally credited with more legislation in behalf of the farmer than any other legislator during the past two decades.

In his campaign for election Senator Buckier is particularly stressing the need for agricultural legislation, fixing a minimum price for his produce, favoring the Swank-Thomas act; stressing the Frazier-Lemke bill offering the farmers new federal loans at 1½% amortization payments.

He is also urging the payment of soldiers' bonus and fairer treatment for disabled war veterans. national federal old age pension legislation preventing the issuance of tax exempt bonds and returning the control and regulation of money and credit to the federal government, according to Mr. Hagen an associate of Senator Buckler. TRUCK HEARING STARTS WED.; BRIEFS FILED

Plaintiff Holds that City Didn't Have Authority To Buy Truck

Testimony was taken Wednesday before Judge Brattland in the case of Harry Brumund and others against the city council's purchase of the fire truck. It was agreed by the parties of the case to submit briefs for the consideration of the court.

The plaintiff, represented by P. Lundgren, contended that the city administration had no right to enter into contract with Oen Mercantile Company for the purchase of the truck because there was no tax levy or any other arrangements made for the payment of the truck; and the anticipated earnings of the water and light department could not be brought into the consideration of this purchase.

The city, represented by city attorney Theo. Quale, contended that the city had sufficient funds on hand, or receivable during the remainder of the year to warrant the purchase of the fire equipment. P. G. Pederson. city clerk. was called upon to testify as to the earnings of the municipal light plant for the past several years by H. O. Chommie. attorney for the Oen Mercantile company, co-defendant, vendor of the truck.

Ministers Endorse Educational Plank Of F-L Platform

Because of a statement issued by the opponents of the Educational Plank of the Farmer-Labor Platform and signed by some of the Pastors of Lutheran Churches in Minneapolis, a group of local Ministers signed a statement to offset the opinion expessed by Rev. Sletten and others.

The ministers, signing this statement, expressed their desire to have this statement made by them published in the paper in order to show that they are not in accordance with the opinion expressed in the Minneapolis papers.

The statement follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

Our attention has been called to a statement by Rev. Sletten and one or two other Lutheran Ministers of Minneapolis, in regard to the Educational plank of the Farmer-Labor Platform, and particularly to that part which relates to the State Printing of School Books.

We are familiar with the Educational Plank of the Farmer-Labor Platform, and we want to assure the people of this section of the state that in our opinion there is no reason to fear the Educational Plank, or the Printing of Text Books for our children. We can see no harm in having the state print the school books. On the other hand if books can be furnished to the pupils of our schools at a lower price by the State, it would be a distinct advantage to the children and their parents. We believe that if the State printed school books they could be furnished more cheaply than they are now, and this would make it a great deal easier for many children to secure an education. The object and purpose of the Text Book Plan in the Farmer-Labor Platform is simply to reduce the cost of education to the pupils and their parents. This, to our minds, should be a commendable object, which can be approved by all who have the education and welfare of our children at heart.

Signed: M. H. Dahle, N. L. Minister, St. Hilaire; O. O. Bjorgan, Lutheran Pastor, Goodridge; J. K. Lerohl, Lutheran Pastor, Oklee; Hallvard Lee, Lutheran Pastor, Fisher; A. M. Ripple, Supt. of Schools, Plummer (high school) John A. Berling, Salvation Army Captain.

ADOPT AMENDMENT NO. 1 HIGHWAY CHIEFS URGE

Voters will protect the recently increased mileage of st te trunk roads in this county by voting for the adoption of the constitutional amendment affecting the trunk highway system. This amendment will be the top one on the list of proposed constitutional changes appearing on the ballots to be marked November 6. It is described on the ballot as "Allowing additions to trunk highways."

The effect of the amendment will be to ratify the expansion of the trunk system authorized by the 1933 legislature. If the amendment is adopted all the county roads taken over by the highway department at the end of 1933 will be ratified as permanent charges of the state. If the amendment shohld fail of adoption it may raise a question as to the legality of the new roads.

The amendment also provides no further additions be made to the state trunk routes until the present system shall be 75% constructed and permanently improved.

Minnesota counties are being saved road bills of approximately $2,000,000 a year through the state taking over of the new trunk routes. It would be extremely unfortunate, therefore, if the voters fail to ratify the act of the 1933 session. As the amendment must receive a majority of all votes cast at the general election, failing to vote for it is equivalent to voting aainst it.

PROEHL EXPLAINS WHY TAX INCREASE CHARGE IS FAR FROM THE TRUTH

By Fred C. Proehl

It is rather amusing to see and hear some of the would-be statesmen running up and dawn the state yelling at the top of their voices that the state taxes have increased tremendously, during the last four years. Nothing could be farther from the truth. I have read article after article, in regard to this matter making these same false charges and each time these "tax experts" blame the Farmer-Labor party for this fictious increase.

Up until I heard Mr. John E. Regan, the Democratic candidate for governor make these statements in a speech in Thief River Falls, I paid little attention to them. I could not believe that any candidate for the high office of governor could be so untruthful. Yet according to the press, Mr. Nelson, the Republican candidate for governor is making the same glaring mis-statements.

I often wonder if these men actually believe that the voters of Minnesota are so dense that they swallow such fairy tales. You will of course note that when they talk about taxes they are always careful to talk about the levy, and then to phrase their talk so that the people shall be led to believe that this amount was paid into the state treasury, when in fact they are simply talking about the levy and not about the amount of money actually collected.

When I asked Mr. Regan, (he suggested that anyone might ask questions of him. He would in fact invite them to) to give me the amount of tax money paid into the state treasury in real, personal and special taxes for the years 1925, 9126, 1927, 1928, 1930, 1931, 1932 and 1933, I was surprised to hear him admit that he did not know, and did not have the figures. The only figures he had, he said was for 1932. When I asked him what the figures for 1932 were, he replied that they were $113,000,000. Perhaps he thought he could get away with that statement. When I asked him if that was the amount paid in he promptly admitted that it was not. They represented the levy, he said. When I asked him to give the figure actually paid in he did not have them and didn't know. When I then asked him if he knew the amount of delinquent taxes in the state of Minnesota he stated that they are $76,000,000. That makes a lot of difference to the whole tax picture.

While it is true that the mill levy at present is the highest in the history of the state, it is also true that in 1933 the taxpayers of Minnesota paid over $7,000,000 less than in any year since 1925. Six of these years were Republican years. Disregarding money paid out for relief, the state disbursements have fallen more than $16,000,000 during the Farmer-Labor administration. Some of the reasons for the high levy are becouse very few people had income during this depression and were unable to pay the inheritance taxes had fallen to low levels; gross earnings taxes has fallen off tremendously.

If you will consider the staggering amount of $76,000,000 delinquent taxes you will realize that if this sum could be collected noone would have to pay taxes at all for quite a while.

The following are the totals paid to the state in the form of real personal and special taxes during the years listed:

1925	$43,832,797.00	Repub. year
1926	39,603,962.00	Repub. year
1927	44,588,125.00	Repub. year
1928	41,853,890.00	Repub. year
1929	45,423,223.00	Repub. year
1930	43,671,272.00	Repub. year
1931	44,245,261.00	F-L year
1932	38,974,250.00	F-L year
1933	37,306,647.00	F-L year

These figures are taken from the record of the Minnesota Tax Comimssion and can be verified by anyone who wants to take the trouble to do so. They prove that their highest point under the administration of "Tight Teddy" Christianson, the Republican "Watchdog of the Treasury" and have declined since under Floyd B. Olson's administration, an amount in excess of $7,000,000.00 below the high point of 1929.

TOWNLEY'S CAMPAIGN BEING FINANCED BY MINN. REPUBLICANS

Republican leaders are financing A. C. Townley's campaign for governor, it was disclosed when Frank B. Ohlquist, secretary of the Committee of One Hundred, and until recently associated with Townley's candidacy as secretary announced that "Townley's rainy day bank is getting nice and bulgy, the funds for which are coming from the higher-ups in the Republican party."

Ohlquist involved Sam Haislett, former secretary of the Repuican State Central Committee, as one of the contributors to the fund, stating "I acted as a messenger in this respect between Townley and Haislett."

Simulaneously, Dan Richter, Minneapolis attorney, brought suit against Mike Holm, Sam Haislett, and A. C. Townley for libel on behalf of a client, Sam Abrams, whose name, it is charged, was forged on the Townley petition which nominated him for governor. In addition, Richter asserted that the whole Townley petition is a fake, adding that the Constitutional Defense Alliance, an organization of which Richter is president and which took an active fight against Townley during the height of his power in North Dakota, is making a check of the petition through a return postcard system. Richter asserted that over 1500 names on the petition are either forgeries, persons under age, or persons that do not exist at all.

Richter, acting in behalf of the Constitutional Defense Alliance and as a representative of the Republican National Speakers Bureau, toured North Dakota in 1919 campaigning against Townley. He said that he brought the Constitutional Defense Alliance into this campaign for the protection of the Republican party of which he has always been a member. He said that the earmarks are present which indicate that before long Townley will control the Republican party in Minnesota the same as he did in North Dakota, and warned Minnesota Republicans that the present leaders are "singing the requiem for Republicanism in Minnesota through the innovation of fake schemes conducted by racketeers." He warned that the public is becoming disgusted with the manner in which all of these fakes are being carried on.

Upon discovering the Townley-Haislett plot, the Committee of One Hundred denounced Townley and are now campaigning for the re-election of Governor Olson.

"One evening, Townley instructed me to meet Haislet on the mezzanine floor of the West hotel," Ohlquist asserted in an affidavit. "I was ordered to bring back an envelope which Haislett would hand me. Haislett appeared and gave me an envelope which contained money. I brought the envelope and the maney to Townley."

NATIONAL SAFETY DIRECTOR PRAISES MINN. DRIVERS LICENSE ADMINESTRATION

The "very intelligent and energetic administration" of the Minnesota driver's license law has caused the National Safety Council to raise Minnesota's standard in the field of traffic safety endeavors according to notice received from Sidney J. Williams of Chicago by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

Mr. Williams is director of the public safety division of the National Safety Council. Mr. Williams stated in his letter that although Minnesota's driver's license law is much below standard in many respects, the "excellent administration of it" makes this state much higher in accomplishments than some other states with similar substandard laws.

MINISTERS' TEXTBOOK STATEMENT IS BRANDED AS POLITICAL DOCUMENT

In a reply to a statement issued by three Lutheran ministers signing themselves as a committee of the General Lutheran Pastoral Association of Minneapolis, Governor Olson charges they were inspired by political motives in their attack on his plan for free text books.

Since that statement was issued by the ministers, one of the three members has tendered his resignation stating that he should not have joined in the attack on the free text book plan and that the church should stay out of politics. At the same time several other ministers and persons active in educational circles, both public and parochial, issued public statements in favor of Governor Olson's plan, which involves merely the physical printing of text books and distribution of them to students free of charge, but leaves the selection of text books in the same hands as they are today.

"Having been reared in a Lutheran home and taught in a Lutheran church," said Governor Olson, "I would be the last one to censure any statement that reflected the opinion of the Lutheran church. But because of the well known Republican affiliations and political activities of the gentlemen who signed the public statement purporting to represent the attitude of the Lutheran church toward that plank of the Farmer-Labor platform concerning the publication of text books by the state, I regard their statement as a political document rather than as a church document.

"I am personally acquainted with a number of Lutheran ministers who have, in conversation with me, approved the plan of the Farmer-Labor administration to print text books selected by the same school authorities that now select the text books.

"It was perfectly proper for a Republican administration under Governor Pillsbury, to print the text books of the state, and it was deemed entirely proper for a Democratic governor, and an outstanding Lutheran of Minnesota, John Lind, to advocate state printing of text books after the book trust had induced the legislature to suspend such printing. But when the Farmer-Labor party proposes to do so for the benefit of the children of the poor of Minnesota it seems to become a threat against the church."

1,000 HIGHWAY WORKERS GET SAFE DRIVING AWARDS

Nearly 1,000 employes of the state highway department have been awarded honor certificates and emblems this month for safe driving records. Those whose record is clear of accidents for three years number 440. There are 62 who received two year awards and 477 who received one-year awards. Commissioner N. W. Elsberg last week attended a safety celebration at Marshall headquarters of Maintenance District No. 15, which won first plact in the department's district safety contest. F. O. Nelson, district superintendent, and his men were praised for their fine showing.

469,164 ACRES STATE LANDS IN NATIONAL FOREST AREAS; OPPEL

When considering how to vote on amendment No. 4 at the general election Tuesday, November 6, Minnesota citizens should bear in mind tthathere are 469,164 acres of state-owned lands located within the boundaries of national forests in the state, A. F. Oppel, deputy director of the division of Forestry and Fire Prevention, points out. Adoption of this amendment would make it possible to exchange all or part of this acreage for lands of the United States government which are preferably located within state conservation areas, he said.

"Records of the national forest service in Minnesota list 261,063 acres as state-owned within the boundaries of the Superior National forest and 34,534 acres of state owned land within the boundaries of the Messaba Purchase unit, which eventually will be included in the forest proper," Mr. Oppel said. "Here are a total of 295,597 acres of state owned lands within one national forest area that should be excluded with federal lands so that forests might be more compact.

"State owned lands within the present Chippewa National Forest total 81,268 acres with 92,299 acres of state land located within the Chippewa Purchese unit, in all 173,567 acres that are owned by the state and situated within national forest araes. How much simpler would forest management and fire protection be if these lands could be included in present conservation areas controlled by the state.

"These figures of state owned lands within Minnesota's two National Forests and the two purchese units were furnished by R. U. Harmon and J. M. Walley, Federal forest supervisors. Both of these men would like to secure control of the present state owned acreas within these national forests so that the forest program could be made more efficient and more economical."

KEEP CATTLE OFF HIGHWAYS

"The drouth is over. Please keep your cattle off state highway right of way to avoid accidents."

This is the plea of state highway engineers to Minnesota farmers. A number of accidents have occured recently on the highways as a result of farmers grazing stock along the right-of-way. Valuable cattle have been killed and motorists endangered. The highway department encouraged farmers to cut hay and grass off the right-of-way during the summer but the practice of turning stock loose along the roads is too dangerous to continue, says a department bulletin.

JOHN DEWEY, EDUCATOR, SUPPORTS F-L PLATFORM

"The only way to preserve, as well as to extend whatever is good in the Rooseveltian measures is to support the Farmer-Labor party," declares John Dewey, America's great educator and philosopher of Columbia University, in an official release of the League for Independent Political Action made yesterday from the national offices in the Hotel Frederic, St. Paul, by Howard Y. Williams, national director.

"Ravings about Bolshevism, Communism, Socialism, are irrelevant to the axiomatic truth of this statement. They come either from complaissant ignorance or from the deliberate desire of those in possession of power and rule to perpetuate their privilege," continues Dr. Dewey.

"We are in the midst of the third great crisis that has occured in this nation. The first was in the revolutionary and post-revolutionary days. The second was the Civil war which 'freed' black slaves and began the entrenchment of wealth. Because of the greater size and bigger population of the country an dthe complexity of social affairs, and the abundant life for all, the present economic crisis overshadows in importance both of the others. We make the choice between a continuation of anarchy disguised and externally suppressed—for a time—by what is called Fascism, leading to inevitable catastrophe, and a political revolution by which the people will resume power—that is to say, not tinkering with the details of legislation and administration, but taking over the means of power."

Thomas R. Amlie, able former Wisconsin Congressman, declares, "The two old major parties have refused to recognize fundamental truths and to adopt a program accordingly. They are more concerned with property rights than with human rights. I urge all workers, and farmers and other liberal-minded people to join the Farmer-Labor party, a party with a definite program of justice and permanent prosperity for all."

R. T. Buckler

Leaders of District and State Endorse Buckler for Congress

"I hope that you will be elected."—Leonard Houske, Sec'y Minn. Creamery Operators & Managers' Association.

"I am pleased to testify to the splendid and progressive legislative record of Senator R. T. Buckler. His senate record for 12 years is perhaps the most outstanding in behalf of the farmer of any man ever to sit in that body." Governor Floyd B. Olson.

"Senator R. T. Buckler of Crookston has served the interests of the masses well in the Minnesota Legislature and he should be sent to Congress. He is a man of EXPERIENCE and MATURE JUDGMENT, a fine gentleman to meet, and knows the needs of the farmer and worker, in whose behalf he has voted and worked in the Minnesota Legislature. He will do likewise at Washington."—Rep. Hjalmer Peterson, Askov.

"Sen. Buckler deserves well of the people of the 9th District. We regarded him as the outstanding champion of the interests of the farmers in the state senate, and he would no doubt carry on if promoted to Congress. Have several times seen him put up a desperate fight against what appeared to be great odds, winning out on the floor by his emphatic presentation of his cause." —Victor E. Lawson, Senator and Newspaper Editor, Willmar.

"On the face of returns, I concede you the nomination on the Farmer-Labor ticket in the Ninth Congressional District and also your election in November. On behalf of Mrs. Nycklemoe and myself, we want to extend our congratulations and assure you of our whole-hearted ad undivided support."—Judge Henry Nycklemoe, Fergus Falls.

"Sen. Buckler has a fine record and is an outstanding friend of the farmer. I believe that he would lay down his life if need be for the betterment of the depressed farmers of his district. His efforts in futherance of a reduction of taxes for northern Minnesota is one of the outstanding accomplishments in the last four years His heart beats in harmony with the common people and I know that they will find a true friend in him."—Sen. Geo. H. Lommen, Eleveth.

"From my observation I have always found that you have consistently voted for the interests of agriculture as well as other progressive measures. Being a real 'dirt farmer' you are in a position to really understand the needs and problems of the farmers. You are therefore deserving of the united support of everybody who desires on ABLE, HONEST and AGGRESSIVE Congressman, who will in turn fight for the best interests of the people at large."—R. A. Trovatten, Commissioner of Agriculture.

"To the voters of the 9th Congressional District: I take this means to urge every progressive to vote for Buckler for Congress. Having served with him in the State Senate for eight years I am familiar with his efforts in behalf of the people of Minnesota. He is the man who is directly responsible for the legal rate of interest being reduced from ten to eight per cent in this state. He also, almost signle-handed, fought for and secured the passage of a bill that required the State Prison to reduce the price of prison made machinery and binding twine. It is my judgment to the best interests of the people of the district to elect Sen. Buckler to Congress."—Sen. H. A. Bridgeman, Bemidji.

"Sen. R. T. Buckler stands for the things which the farmers want. The record which he has already made is proof of this statement. He is in favor of the Frazier-Lemke Bill to refinance farm loans at a low rate of interest and other progressive legislation. Men like him will make it possible to carry thru legislation which will give the relief to the farmers which is so essential at this time. Recovery must begin with the farmer. Agriculture is the basic industry, anid there can be no national prosperity unless the farmer is prosperous. A vote for Buckler is a vote for farm relief and national recovery." Harry H. Peterson, Attorney General.

"Senator Buckler—Some friends of mine have asked me regarding my opinion of you and your qualifications for election to Congress. Your fine record in the state senate and your constant efforts on behalf of farmers and laboring people should entitle you to an overwhelming victory in November. I admire your stand for immediate payment of Adjusted Service Certificates (soldiers' bonus), for the Frazier Farm Refinancing bill and for social legislation in general. It is with pleasure that I give you my endorsement and wish you every success in the campaign." Congressman Ernest Lundeen.

"To the voters of the 9th District: You will soon face the responsibility of sending to Congress a man who will truly represent the people and the best interests of the district. Having the election of Sen. R. T. Buckler in mind, I must go on record for a man who has served the people of his district and state both loyally and well. He has never once left the rank and file of the common people of our state on major issues. For this reason this election will be in the right direction."—Congressman Magnus Johnson.

"My Dear Senator: Congratulations upon your endorsement for Congress. As farmers, both of us have naturally taken a keen interest in agricultural measures before the legislature for consideration, and I recall with much satisfaction the valiant fight you made for the Mortgage Moratorium, and for the reduction in the price of prison-manufactured farm machinery and twine. The only relief the farmer and worker has realized in interest rate reduction is due entirely to your untiring efforts. I am sure, Senator, that your many years of experience as a lawmaker in our state legislature, coupled with your aggressiveness, ability and full understanding of the problems of the farmer and worker will make you a valuable representative of the people of the 9th District in Congress."—Charles Munn, Speaker of the House.

AND Further endorsed and recommended by Representative Edgar L. Nordstrom of Becker county; John Whaley, Newspaper publisher of Moorhead, Paul A. Rasmusson, Dean of men at Concordia college, Moorhead; Lieut. Gov. K. K. Solberg; Rep. Gustaf Erickson of Lake of the Woods county; Representative Elmer Holm of Dilworth; and thousands of farmers, laborers, clerks, professional men, independent merchants,, storekeepers, and business men who know him to be the best man to represent all the people of the agricultural 9th district. Sen. Buckler is a member of the Farm Bureau and the Farmers' Union and hundreds of members of these organizations are helping to elect Buckler to Congress.

Sen. Buckler has been officially endorsed and is being 100% supported by the National Veterans Association because he stands for the immediate payments of the "Soldiers' Bonus" and fairer treatment for disabled war veterans. Buckler has been given a 100% rating by the Minnesota department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. because of his favorable stand on the bonus question and other proposed legislation being sponsored by the veterans.

For Character and honesty, courage and fearlessness, ability and efficiency, aggressiveness and experience, vote for R. T. Buckler for Congress on Nov. 6th.

Trovatten, Commissioner of Agriculture.

"To the voters of the 9th Congressional District: I take this means to urge every progressive to vote for Buckler for Congress. Having served with him in the State Senate for eight years I am familiar with his efforts in behalf of the people of Minnesota. He is the man who is directly responsible for the legal rate of interest being reduced from ten to eight per cent in this state. He also, almost signle-handed, fought for and secured the passage of a bill that required the State Prison to reduce the price of prison made machinery and binding twine. It is my judgment to the best interests of the people of the district to elect Sen. Buckler to Congress."—Sen. H. A. Bridgeman, Bemidji.

"Sen. R. T. Buckler stands for the things which the farmers want. The record which he has already made is proof of this statement. He is in favor of the Frazier-Lemke Bill to refinance farm loans at a low rate of interest and other progressive legislation. Men like him will make it possible to carry thru legislation which will give the relief to the farmers which is so essential at this time. Recovery must begin with the farmer. Agriculture is the basic industry, anid there can be no national prosperity unless the farmer is prosperous. A vote for Buckler is a vote for farm relief and national recovery." Harry H. Peterson, Attorney General.

"Senator Buckler—Some friends of mine have asked me regarding my opinion of you and your qualifications for election to Congress. Your fine record in the state senate and your constant efforts on behalf of farmers and laboring people should entitle you to an overwhelming victory in November. I admire your stand for immediate payment of Adjusted Service Certificates (soldiers' bonus), for the Frazier Farm Refinancing bill and for social legislation in general. It is with pleasure that I give you my endorsement and wish you every success in the campaign." Congressman Ernest Lundeen.

"To the voters of the 9th District: You will soon face the responsibility of sending to Congress a man who will truly represent the people and the best interests of the district. Having the election of Sen. R. T. Buckler in mind, I must go on record for a man who has served the people of his district and state both loyally and well. He has never once left the rank and file of the common people of our state on major issues. For this reason this election will be in the right direction."—Congressman Magnus Johnson.

"My Dear Senator: Congratulations upon your endorsement for Congress. As farmers, both of us have naturally taken a keen interest in agricultural measures before the legislature for consideration, and I recall with much satisfaction the valiant fight you made for the Mortgage Moratorium, and for the reduction in the price of prison-manufactured farm machinery and twine. The only relief the farmer and worker has realized in interest rate reduction is due entirely to your untiring efforts. I am sure, Senator, that your many years of experience as a lawmaker in our state legislature, coupled with your aggressiveness, ability and full understanding of the problems of the farmer and worker will make you a valuable representative of the people of the 9th District in Congress."—Charles Munn, Speaker of the House.

AND Further endorsed and recommended by Representative Edgar L. Nordstrom of Becker county; John Whaley, Newspaper publisher of Moorhead, Paul A. Rasmusson, Dean of men at Concordia college, Moorhead; Lieut. Gov. K. K. Solberg; Rep. Gustaf Erickson of Lake of the Woods county; Representative Elmer Holm of Dilworth; and thousands of farmers, laborers, clerks, professional men, independent merchants,, storekeepers, and business men who know him to be the best man to represent all the people of the agricultural 9th district. Sen. Buckler is a member of the Farm Bureau and the Farmers' Union and hundreds of members of these organizations are helping to elect Buckler to Congress.

Sen. Buckler has been officially endorsed and is being 100% supported by the National Veterans Association because he stands for the immediate payments of the "Soldiers' Bonus" and fairer treatment for disabled war veterans. Buckler has been given a 100% rating by the Minnesota department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. because of his favorable stand on the bonus question and other proposed legislation being sponsored by the veterans.

For Character and honesty, courage and fearlessness, ability and efficiency, aggressiveness and experience, vote for R. T. Buckler for Congress on Nov. 6th.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

One of the most peculiar things about the present campaign is the fact that no referrence has been made by Republican candidates, speakers or newspapers to the Republican platform. Unless our memory fails us, the Republicans adopted a platform in their convention last spring, but we have failed to see it mentioned, or hear it mentioned by the exponents of 'ragged individualism'.

One would assume that inasmuch as the Farmer-Labor platform wah drafted by the Farmer-Laborites, that they would be in the best position to speak upon it, and illucidate its meaning if any explanation should be required. However, it appears that the Republicans and Regan Democrats feel that they know much more about our platform than we do ourselves, they have talked about it to the exclusion of everything else (except our debased morals), even their own platform.

Which prompts the question: What is their platform? What do they propose to do if the voters return them to power? Do they wish to return to the diabolical whirlpool of death America went thru in the period from 1929 to 1932? Would they again drive unemployed ex-servicemen come to petition their government, out into the highways, the byways and the jungles with fire and sword as Hoover did with the Bonus Army? Would they turn the forces of Greed and Corruption loose again to perpetrate more Teapot Dome scandals; more ocean mail frauds, Would they again make 80 million dollar gifts to racketeers like Dawes? Would they again loot the treasury as Mellon did, with two and three billion dollar income tax refunds to multi-millionaires?

What does Nelson propose to give Minnesota if he is elected governor? May we look for more fur farm gyps? Cochran Gold Note steals? Does he wish to turn the chainbankers loose to defraud the people with more 150 million dollar Banco and First Bank stock sales? Would the state's expenditures again rise to 45 million dollars per year as they were under Teddy Christiansen in 1929?

HAS THE LEOPARD CHANGED ITS SPOTS?

Do Republicans favor the income tax now? Do they agree that the chainstore tax is just? Do they admit now, that the mortgage moratorium was enacted as a fair measure of protection for the people, that were losing their homes? Are we to understand that the homestead tax law meets their approval?

They fought all those things in the legislature of 1933. Hitchcock, Quinlivan, Kern, Norton, Dahle, Dunn, and all the rest of the reactionaries in the House. McKenzie, Sullivan, Rockne, Lightner, Anderson, Weber, Widell and all the rest of the reactionaries in the Senate. They all fought those measures passed by the 1933 Legislature, which have brought some small measure of relief; made life more bearable for the common people of Minnesota. These laws were passed over these men's strenous objections.

Unless they have changed their minds since, they would, if they and their kind are elected to power again in Minnesota, repeal all those laws.

We have heard no rumor of a Republican change of heart. We haven't heard them talk about their own platform. All we've heard is character assassination. False charges.. And interpretations purporting to explain the Farmer-Labor platform and telling us what they think our platform means.

Tungseth stock has dropped so low in Thief River Falls that when he wanted some "yesmen" to sign a statement backing up his administration of city affairs, he had to go out into the country and get four farmers, none of whom live within five miles, and one of whom lives 25 miles from the city to do it. What these men do not know about the affairs of Thief River Falls would fill quite a volume

The World Peace Association has this to say: "To the platform and policy of the Farmer-Labor Party, the World Peace Association gives its complete endorsement and whole-hearted support. We know the Farmer-Labor Party is earnestly working to advance the welfare of all mankind and we want each and every reader of this message to join us in doing everything that can be done to make the Farmer-Labor Party victory in the November 6th election, the greatest success in history. Help us brush the poisonous scum of the old political machines aside and to build new and clean. Help us build on a permanent foundation of honor and justice and to leave mankind a world at peace and not a scheming, lying, thieving Wall Street dictatorship that deceives, debases and enslaves. Your help is needed now."

Charles A. Lindbergh spoke prophetically long ago as follows:

"Heretofore the false economy of things have been executed on a more gradual scale—each succeeding year the wealth grabbers have dug deeper into our earnings—but it was all done in such an adroit and "slick" fashion, that there was never enough of us at any one time that realized it was done, to make us act simultaneously to relieve ourselves of it. It is perfectly apparent to us all now that when there is so much waste as the (World) war has shown, that there would be wealth for us all if we managed properly."

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP MARCHES ON

Union Advocate

While the prostituted press continues to drool at the mouth whenever public ownership of power utilities is mentioned, the principle of public ownership marches on to gain new victories for the common people.

Two weeks ago the city of Los Angeles approved a charter amendment which makes it possible for the city to take over the properties of the Los Angeles Gas & Electric Corporation without the formality of a bond issue. At the same time, with an overwhelming vote, the people of that progressive city voted down proposals to extend the franchises of privately-owned public utilities.

Seattle, which owns one of the finest power plants in the world, is now considering the outright purchase of the entire system of the Puget Sound Power and Light company at a cost of $95,000,000. The "book value" claimed by the power company is $129,000,000. By completing this purchase the city of Seattle will not only come in full control of a vast power and light system, but it will squeeze out $30,000,000 of watered stock upon which the people of that trade territory have been paying annually a high rate of return.

And at the same time many of the larger cities of the middle west are gaining drastic rate reductions under threat of municipal ownership. Louisville, Kentucky, secured rate reductions of approximately 32 percent under threat of public ownership; Akron, Ohio, received a 23 percent reduction and Cincinnati,, Ohio, secured reductions ranging from 28 percent to 39 percent.

TEST OF LIBERALISM

Minnesota Democrat

Liberals of Minnesota are facing a real test in the campaign against Stafford King, state auditor, and C. J. Laurisch, member of the state railroad and warehouse commission, both Republicans, both ultra-conservatives, and both key men in the Old Guard Republican machine of by gone days in Minnesota.

Ridding the state of these two men, according to political observers, would go a long way toward advancement of liberal government in this state.

The only logical move for the liberals to make is to unite on one of the two candidates opposing each of these men and elect him, it is pointed out.

To date, of the two candidates opposing Stafford King, John T. Lyons of LeCenter, has been the most aggressive, has carried on the best campain, political observers say.

Of the two candidates opposing Laurisch, Speaker Charles Munn of the state house of Representatives has carried on the strongest campaign and is the leading candidate.

Both of these men are seen as excellent timber for the offices they seek and merit the support of liberals. This is the reason liberal leaders have swung to them their whole-hearted support in the closing days of the campaign.

MILK VS MILLIONS

Northfield Independent

Repeal may have given a temporary stimulus to barley prices, but it seems to have had no such favorable effect on milk prices. In New York state, which was a leader in the movement for repeal, the dairy industry, with an investment of 10 billion dollars, an annual gross income of 111 million dollars, and half a million people directly engaged in it, is described as being in a "ruinous" situation, and a huge campaign is now being launched to induce the people of the Empire State to drink more milk. But to do that the milk producers will have to compete with the beer and liquor industries which are spending millions and millions of dollars in newspaper and magazine advertising to promote the use of beers and whiskeys. And if advertising is a force in creating appetites and desires—and we know it is,—the booze interests have a start of the milk producers which it will be well-nigh impossible to overcome. It is also self-evident that people who drink beer with their meals are not going to be heavy consumers of milk.

Our next representative in Congress from this district will be R. T. Buckler of Crookston. This is once the farmers and their friends will have an opportunity to work and vote for a man who makes his living by working on the farm and send him to Congress."—Northern Minnesota Leader

In Minnesota the voters pay less attention to the naming of judges of the supreme court than they do to the election of township clerks. This is because the supreme court judges as a general rule, make few campaigns. Their friends take care of this important matter.

This year the industrial and chain bank interests will be more open in their campaigning for their choices for the supreme bench. That is because three well-known liberals are candidates. These candidates are Chief Justice John Devaney, Justice Julius J. Olson and William A. Anderson, indorsed by the Farmer-Labor party's central committee.—Union Advocate

Its a good thing Albert Pfaender wasn't given the Democratic nomination for governor. A letter he wrote has been made public in which Pfaender explained to a critic of his legislative record that the increase in the rate of state taxes doesn't mean that the state is spending more money; that the decrease in corporation taxes, increase in delinquency and lowering of assessed valuation is the cause of the increase in the mill rate. If business conditions were the same now as a few years ago the state tax rate could ve cut to 3 mills, instead of raised to 11 mills, he said. So if Pfaender was running for governor he couldn't tell about Olson's extravagance as Regan and Nelson are doing. This letter would make him out a liar—Park Region Echo

FARMER-LABOR PRESS SERVICE

By

Senator H. G. Teigan

All indications point to a sweeping victory for the Farmer-Labor ticket next Tuesday.

The attendance at meetings addressed by Governor Olson and by other Farmer-Labor candidates and speakers, is the largest on record in this state. The fact is that Governor Olson's meetings have been more largely attended than any meetings ever addressed in this state by any candidate for political office. Moreover, the enthusiasm of the crowds is also indicative of success for the Governor as well as for the ticket as a whole.

Mud-Slinging Causes Reaction

The mudslinging tactics of the opposition, especially of the Republican newspapers and their gubernatorial candidate, is not making votes for the G. O. P. candidates. Even opposition newspapers are showing a resentment at the tactics used.

In this connection it is well for the voters to bear in mind that a political group that has to resort to mudslinging, slander, and villification, has little to offer the people. What is more, the voters still have a too vivid recollection of the kind of administration Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover, and the Republican party gave this country over a long period of years.

Nelson's Disgraceful Tactics

Mr. Nelson's own disgraceful attacks upon the Governor are being resented everywhere. It was Nelson who first made the charge that Governor Olson was responsible for the Guilford murder. This charge was later taken up by lesser ligts in the political arena most of whom have since retreated from the attack, realizing that it was making votes for the Governor.

Straw votes do not always indicate the political trend, and yet they bear some significance when honestly conducted. The so-called newspaper poll conducted under the auspices of 24 daily newspapers was, it is true, a fraud and is so recognized by the people of the state. On the other hand, other polls conducted honestly may indicate something of the outcome.

Straw Votes

In Monday's issue of the Minneapolis Journal a poll of one-third of the voters of the village of Mound shows that the voters there are turning to the Farmer-Labor ticket. This precinct gave Earle Brown 52 percent of the vote in November 1932. In the straw vote conducted by the local newspaper last week the Republican nominee had slipped to 43 percent, with a gain for the Farmer-Labor nominee and also a fairly strong increase in the Democratic vote.

Out of 138 straw votes taken by the Mound Pilot, Floyd Olson received 53 to 59 for Nelson, 25 for Regan and 1 for A. C. Townley. The percentage is approximately 39 percent for Olson, 43 percent for Nelson, and 18 percent for Regan. Two years ago the percentage was: Olson 38 percent, Brown 52 percent and Regan 9 5 percent.

G. O. P. Vote Slumps

The Daily Star also took a poll of registrants at the City Clerk's office on the closing day of regiscast. Of this vote, Olson received 507 votes to 182 for Nelson, and 64 for Regan. Surely no better method of taking a straw vote could be found than to poll persons registering for the election.

One thing more is certain, the vote will be the straightest ever cast in Minnesota. Undoubtedly Governor Olson will lead the Farmer-Labor ticket as he has done in the past, but the other candidates for state and congressional offices will run up well with him in all parts of the state.

Candidate for County
Attorney

The campaign is now drawing to a close and will soon be over. Extravagant claims and promises will be made. There will be rumors and gossip during the last few days. Do not be misled by boastful circulars and other propaganda that may be sent out. So far as I am concerned I wish to say and promise that if I am elected County Attorney I shall give the office my personal attention, and shall discharge all the duties of the office with common sense, in a careful, efficient and economical manner. I shall be fair and impartial, and give a square deal to everybody. I shall try to save the taxpayers money wherever possible, and safeguard the interests of the county in every way. That is all that anyone can do in public office. The vote and support of all voters will be highly appreciated. At this time I want to ask my friends throughout the county to be on the watch and give me their active support during the closing days of the campaign. Do not be misled by extravagant claims, or by campaign propaganda of any kind.
Sincerely yours,

for Superintendent of Schools

MARSHALL COUNTY

My program has been:

1. To build up the incomes from state sources. (This is the only income tending to equalize costs between the school districts of the state.)
2. To direct the buying of essentials and to keep fads and frills out of the schools.
3. To build up regularity in grading and promotions. (Our standards are the same as the graded schools.)
4. To build up the school libraries to meet the needs for the required reading.
5. To improve regularity of attendance by emphasizing its value rather than through criminal prosecution.
6. To give the rural school graduate an adequate foundation for carrying on high school work should he attend.

If re-elected I propose to carry on the same program and to enrich the activities as much as may be without saddling a burden on pupils and teachers.

I assure you that your vote and support will be appreciated and remembered. Sincerely yours, NELS M. ENGEN

To the voters of Marshall County

I regret very much that I will not have sufficient time to call upon all the voters in the county as I would have liked to. The best recommendation I can offer those who do not know me is the the splendid vote given me at the primary election in those sections of the county where I am best known.

Your vote and support at the general election Tuesday, November 6th will be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

Vote for

OLE L. IHLE

For Sheriff of Pennington County

To the Voters of Pennington County:

I wish to announce that I will be a candidate for the office of sheriff on Nov. 6. This may seem strange to you. After the primaries I have been approached by a great many people from all parts of the county who have told me that they voted for someone of the other candidates in the primaries through misapprehension or because they had been misinformed. Today I was called before a group of about twenty-five representative citizens from all parts of the county and urged by them to come out on stickers. I finally agreed to do this and I am in the race to stay until the last vote has been cast on the 6th of November.

It will be impossible for me to reach all the voters personally in the one week that remains before election. I will see as many as I can but I will have to rely on this letter and the efforts of my friends to get the facts up to the voters.

I want the office. Any statements to the contrary are entirely without foundation.

I am sure that my past records demonstrate that I am not controlled by any click or bunch. In the past since I have been Sheriff, I have tried to bear in mind my responsibility to all of the people of the county. If I should be elected I will owe no debt to any political group.

During the time I have been Sheriff there has never been a time when the total fines collected did not much more than pay the expenses of prosecution, in criminal cases. The sheriff does not have a great deal of discretion in the prosecution of criminal matters. I have however, always tried to discourage prosecution where it was evident that it would result in nothing but expense to the county. If I am re-elected I shall continue to use my best judgment. Experience and acquaintance with the people and conditions of the county are of value in this as in all other respects.

One of the problems which confronted the officers of the county during the last four years was the large amount of real estate on which the taxes were delinquent. A great deal of this property, especially land, which is unimproved is owned by non resident owners. During the year 1933 there was collected on tax attachments and turned into the county treasury the sum of $7,289.68. This is net over and above expenses for collections. This year there has already been turned over $7,000, the total for 1934 should amount to between $10,000 and $12,000 when all collections are in. With proper handling the collections for 1936 should amount to eighteen to twenty thousand dollars. I feel that the knowledge and experience that I have gained in the past in this item alone should be of enough value to the taxpayers of this county to merit a favorable consideration. It has taken me several years to become familiar with the character, value and location of these delinquent tax lands. A new man will take just as long.

Arrangements will be made to have stickers distributed at every polling place in the county on election day. The voters can also write my name in the blank space provided on the ballot immediately below the printed names of the other candidates. I have fully appreciated the kindness of the voters of this county to me in the past. I assure you that I am very grateful for this.

I solicit your vote and your support next Tuesday. If I am elected I shall continue to give my full time to the office as I have in the past. I shall try to give a square deal to all. Do not let them tell you I do not want the office.

I am not out to beat anyone. I am out to get votes for myself, and I assure you that I shall appreciate every one of them.

Very truly yours,
O. L. IHLE

HARRY L. FOWLER

Candidate for Re-election

County Auditor

To the Voters:

In soliciting your support for re-election to the office of County Auditor, I stand on my record during my first term.

I was elected to my first term on my pledge of an economical administration of the office. This pledge I have fulfilled.

Being an experienced accountant and auditor has enabled me to conduct my office during my first term without the expense of an experienced accountant for deputy. I have used only part time clerk hire and have operated my office at one-third the expense for Clerk Hire that my predecessor required, thereby effecting a saving of about $1,000.00 per year. My revision of the accounting system in the Auditor's office has effected other large savings. There is no substitute for experience.

If my administration of the office during my first term has met with your approval, your vote and support will be appreciated.

WARNING! BEWARE!

The campaign is now entering its final stages. We understand a determined effort is going to be made to defeat all the Farmer-Labor candidate, and all candidates friendly to the Farmer-Labor movement. We have reason to believe that a swarm of Old Party politicians will be sent out during the last days to see every voter in Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater counties, in a desperate attempt to stem the Farmer-Labor landslide and to defeat all the Farmer-Labor candidates. We believe they will try to visit every farm and every home.

Do not be misled by Republican propaganda· Look out for the last few days. Keep your eyes on the opposition workers and candidates when they come into your neighborhood. They will be especially anxious to defeat Governor Olson, and Paul A. Harris, W. E. Day and J. O. Melby, but they will of course try to defeat all Farmer-Laborites. THIS IS A WORD OF WARNING! Let every Farmer-Laborite in Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater counties be on the watch from now on until after election, and especially during these last few days. The opposition will soon open up its drive. Do not be fooled by their last minute propaganda.

I have been reading your paper for some time. In your last issue I find a letter from Gust Sustad stating that I had made a gentlemen's agreement that I would not make them any trouble by becoming a sticker candidate for sheriff. Now this is an absolute falsehood, I was appointed sheriff by the board, wholely unsolicited and there was never any quesions made by the board, whether I would run or not. True, I did not intend to at that time but pressure was made from all directions that I get in the game. I finally consented. Mr. Sustad knows that it is not the truth, as he was called on it by one of the commissioners at Newfolden when he tried to get the temperance association to indorse Mr. Toftner for sheriff. He then stated that I had promised the commissioners that I would not run and Mr. Rokke, one of the commissioners called him on it and he said there was no agreement made. Mr. Sustad got sore at me last summer as I would not let him talk politics in our church. He does not belong to our church but his family attends regular, for which we appreciate very much. Mr. Sustad never fails when he comes to our church, to jump me, the minister, and everybody about politics, I told he had to cut out politics in our church its not the place for that. I was the president of the congregation. I hope you would be kind and publish this letter in your paper. Send me your bill and I will pay for it. I call this rotten politics and Mr. Sustad can not impair my character where I am known.

Yours very truly,

FOREWORD

Floyd B. Olson thinks, talks and acts with the viewpoint of the average man. His is essentially the philosophy of the so-called common people—the rank and file.

Product of the school of hard knocks, he has a comprehending brain and a big heart. This explains his easily understandable vocabulary.

Alert, resourceful, clever, able, honest, shrewd, calm and courageous, his theory of government is different from that of the founders of the republic, in that he thinks, talks and acts in up to date, present day style.

Many years of intimate relationship as next door neighbor and friend enables me to measure and estimate his gualiteis and virtues, his shortcomings and errors in qualified manner. To know Floyd Olson is to love and admire him for his virtues, his faults, his ambitions and his accomplishments.

When our fair state of Minnesota was in the depths of depression, and despair was written on every countenance, the people demanded vigorously a change from the old order. Too long had the reactionary forces in control of government at Washington and St. Paul held sway with results so far reaching that oppression and subjection had all but replaced those things near and dear to every heart—"life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Down into the sloughs of financial ruin despondency and actual want and privation went millions of our people.

Came a change in 1930, the advent of Liberalism vs Conservation Into the state house at St. Paul the people placed a new leader, young, broad-minded and big-minded. To vigerous, courageous, tolerant Floyd B. Olson the people gave a mandate at a time when disaster threatened Minnesota as it has never threatened before. Here was opportunity for the man, yes, but greater opportunity for the people.

Economic slavery, established by the old order—selfishness and greed that made a few rich and the many starve, found a worthy foe—the people at last found a friend willing and unafraid to tackle the problems that beset him on every side and bedevilled the men and women and boys and girls of Minnesota. As soon as he had been entrusted with authority, the Governor set about to do the things necessary to be done to abolish social slavery, to establish economic recovery and to restore prosperity in so far as the governor of a state has jurisdiction.

Floyd B. Olson did the things that immediately needed to be done to avert impending collapse. No voice was raised against the measures immediately necessary. Calmly, dispassionately, studiously the Governor plodded the difficult way. And it was a weary way. In due course, like a pack of jackals, the old reactionary bosses and repudiated leaders barked and snapped at this heels. The new government, with a mandate from the people, was hard put at the outset, but it set about to establish the new order that had as cardinal principles the greatest good to the greatest number. Some of the corrective legislation was frankly experimental. Some acts were experiments called forth by the sad consequenses of the old order. New opportunity was given those previously left out of the government's thinking.

Improvement has come. The needy are being taken care of. There is agreement that we are on the up grade despite the great havoc wrought as a natural result of the old order.

Better government and the indications of recovery however, are now hearing voices that long were silent. They are being raised against every effort and every constructive move for a change from the old order that threatened ruin. Some of these are the voices of partisans. Some are those of the unthinking. Some are those of special privilege. Some are merely voices of reaction. Some are voices of prejudice. Some are voices of those who can believe only in the old school of politics, economics and social relations "that brought on the deluge". The sounds that these voices are sending forth have the familiar ring of all protests when serious arguments and sound thinking is abandoned. Doing away with the constitution," "socialism" "communism" "revolution." These are some of the names applied to measures and programs that merely mean to make the world easier to live in, to prohibit exploitation, to save for investors their life's accumulations, to prevent reckless speculation. Those proposals should be studied critically.

Americans may not be in agreement as to the wisdom of all details, but Americans eager for a better ordered state, should resent and do resent the nature of some of the attacks now being directed against it.

Surely no true Minnesotan, no true American, wishes to change the basic form of America's government and no such proposal is or has been or will be made by that alert, staunch, generous and patriotic American now gracing the Governor's chair. Neither he nor his program essay to destroy private initiative when that private initiative is lawful, humane and American. What is attempted is the establishment of laws that are in strict conformity with American ideals as enunciated in the Constitution by our forefathers so that capitalism may continue in the welfare of all of the people, not only for a selfish few. Governor Olson's philosophy has been and is "the greatest good to the greatest number." What is wrong with that? "Liberalized capital" may be, as one writer has said, "the only hope of the entire capitalist system and those who are liberals, or progressives, or radicals, if you please, may prove to be the true patriots and the honest champions of our present form of government."

The Money Changers of the Temple will not interpret the Constitution as you and I, as the farmer in the fields, the worker at the bench, the school teacher the clerk, the stenographer and the small merchant and the small home-owner.

All want recovery, but how fiercely against recovery do those fight who want their old ideas and their old system that brought disaster and broken heart left alone!

Hope for a better order and the New Day lies in a rigid espousal of a truly liberal and honest American doctrine of economics and social relatios.

The biggest battle ahead is the fight against the forces of reaction. Those who believe in things as they always have been and now are opposed to those who have the courage and the stamina and the stamina and the fortitude to work for the betterment of their fellowman's condition and his right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Let us have criticism, but let it be the criticism that seeks to end instead of restore an' intolerable and unbearable disaster and which, if restored, will bring suffering to every individual and every nation that has ot learned its lesson.

Let us have leaders who are alert, unselfish, progressive and liberal. We need today as never before advanced thinkers and fearless doers. To turn aside from those leaders who have given us the service of "the greatest good to the greatest number" is unthinkable.

The eyes of the Nation are on Minnesota as never before.

The mills of the Gods grind slowly but they grind exceedingly fine. When all is said Minnesota will go forward with Olson in 1934 to a new and better day.

Twin City Ministers Endorse Textbook Plan

The folowing statements approving of the free text book plan have been received by Governor Olson:

Rev. Cas. L. Grant, Faith Lutheran Church, St. Paul.

"The best proposal in the interest of the common people made within the past thirty-five years is the plan advanced by the Farmer-Labor party to print and distribute text books to the boys and girls of our state. There is not a word of truth in the assertion that the Lutheran church is against such a plan. I cannot conceive of a more sensible thing than the providing of free text books. While I attended public school in Pensylvania my parents were never obliged to buy a single text beck, scratch tablet, pencil or pen * * * *

"Any move that promotes education for the masses should be adopted. Are we in favor of free text books? Yes, a thousand times, yes."

Rev. Sam Carlsen, East Immanuel Lutheran Church, St. Paul.

"I heartily approve the plank calling for free text books in the Farmer-Labor platform. To me it is a tragedy that 5,000 children in St. Paul alone must look to charity institutions to furnish them text books in this country where we boast of free education."

Paul A. Rasmussen, Dean of Men, Concordia College, Moorhead, Minn

"The knowledge of the exploitation characteristic of monopolistic book companies causes me to say that the printing of text books by the state is merely a means of protecting the taxpayers' dollar."

Thomas M. Kelly, Former Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus, Minneapolis.

"As a purchaser of text books for my family in the parochial schools of Minneapolis I am interested in the possibility of free text books.

"I am confident that the state authorities are interested only in providing the mechanical means of producing the text as supplied by the Catholic school authorities, the same as is being done in Louisiana and New Mexico."

Mrs. . F. Werschem, Executive Mrs. J. F. Werschem, Executive Committee, Parent Teachers' Counsel, Minneapolis.

"I regard the free text book proposal one of the best measures ever advanced in the cause of education."

Farmer-Labor Club Held Successful Pep-Fest Sat.

Te Pennington Co. F. L. Associatoin staged a successul rally last aSturday night at the F. L. Headquarters in the P. O. building; there were approximately 200 people present at the meeting and all of them seemed very optomistic about the outcome of the election next Tuesday.

H. O. Chommie, chairman of the All Party, Olson for Governor Club, gave the opening speech in which he stated that we are now at a cross roads to recovery; to follow one of these roads would lead us back through the same door from which we came to enter this depression while to use the other door would be to progress. According to Mr. Chommie the only way to get out of this depression is to turn to the left because this left turn would lead us into a new and untried era, which might prove to eb what we are seeking.

The banking plank of the F-L Platform was discussed thoroughly by F. C. Prochl who explained why he thought that the depression could be laid directly to chain banks and the "International Bankers."

Paul A. Harris, candidate for State Senator from this district, cited the amount of money being paid out annually in the form of interest on bonded indebedness of the various units of government in the state amounting to over 16 million dollars from which we derive no benefit.

A piano solo was given by Miss Halland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Helmer Halland of this city, immediately after Mr. Harris' talk.

H. O. Berve, spoke in behalf of all the endorsed F-L candidates. He stated that the F-L candidates have a program which will attempt to carry out definite plans whereas the opposition has no plans at all.

T. J. Welch, of the Minnesota Conservation Dept. was the final speaker on the program; he cited the need for dwellings stating that in some of the larger cities people now construct dwelling in the city dump grounds "The battle is," according to Mr. Welch, " a battle of those whom are for organized greed and those who believe in justice for all.

General Election Nov. 6

In making my final appeal through the columns of this paper, for your vote and support, I ask that you reduce the campaign to the real issue, which after all is only "service to the County."

I am now serving my first term. I have tried in former issues to give statements of what has been accomplished, not in tricky generalities, but in facts and figures. I feel that the work which I have done on tax collections alone should merit re-election.

I further pledge myself to a policy of strict law enforcement, and will continue to co-operate with the County Board.

I wish to thank my many friends for the work they have done in my behalf, and ask that they kindly continue the work until election day.

Sincerely, PAUL A. LUNDGREN

Mr. Sustad got sore at me last summer as I would not let him talk politics in our church. He does not belong to our church but his family attends regular, for which we appreciate very much. Mr. Sustad never fails when he comes to our church, to jump me, the minister, and everybody about politics, I told he had to cut out politics in our church its not the place for that. I was the president of the congregation. I hope you would be kind and publish this letter in your paper. Send me your bill and I will pay for it. I call this rotten politics and Mr. Sustad can not impair my character where I am known.

Yours very truly,
H. C. Hanson

FOREWORD

Floyd B. Olson thinks, talks and acts with the viewpoint of the average man. His is essentially the philosophy of the so-called common people—the rank and file.

Product of the school of hard knocks, he has a comprehending brain and a big heart. This explains his easily understandable vocabulary.

Alert, resourceful, clever, able, honest, shrewd, calm and courageous, his theory of government is different from that of the founders of the republic, in that he thinks, talks and acts in up to date, present day style.

Many years of intimate relationship as next door neighbor and friend enables me to measure and estimate his gualiteis and virtues, his shortcomings and errors in qualified manner. To know Floyd Olson is to love and admire him for his virtues, his faults, his ambitions and his accomplishments.

When our fair state of Minnesota was in the depths of depression, and despair was written on every countenance, the people demanded vigorously a change from the old order. Too long had the reactionary forces in control of government at Washington and St. Paul held sway with results so far reaching that oppression and subjection had all but replaced those things near and dear to every heart—"life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Down into the sloughs of financial ruin despondency and actual want and privation went millions of our people.

Came a change in 1930, the advent of Liberalism vs Conservation Into the state house at St. Paul the people placed a new leader, young, broad-minded and big-minded. To vigerous, courageous, tolerant Floyd B. Olson the people gave a mandate at a time when disaster threatened Minnesota as it has never threatened before. Here was opportunity for the man, yes, but greater opportunity for the people.

Economic slavery, established by the old order—selfishness and greed that made a few rich and the many starve, found a worthy foe—the people at last found a friend willing and unafraid to tackle the problems that beset him on every side and bedevilled the men and women and boys and girls of Minnesota. As soon as he had been entrusted with authority, the Governor set about to do the things necessary to be done to abolish social slavery, to establish economic recovery and to restore prosperity in so far as the governor of a state has jurisdiction.

Floyd B. Olson did the things that immediately needed to be done to avert impending collapse. No voice was raised against the measures immediately necessary. Calmly, dispassionately, studiously the Governor plodded the difficult way. And it was a weary way. In due course, like a pack of jackals, the old reactionary bosses and repudiated leaders barked and snapped at this heels. The new government, with a mandate from the people, was hard put at the outset, but it set about to establish the new order that had as cardinal principles the greatest good to the greatest number. Some of the corrective legislation was frankly experimental. Some acts were experiments called forth by the sad consequenses of the old order. New opportunity was given those previously left out of the government's thinking.

Improvement has come. The needy are being taken care of. There is agreement that we are on the up grade despite the great havoc wrought as a natural result of the old order.

Better government and the indications of recovery however, are now hearing voices that long were silent. They are being raised against every effort and every constructive move for a change from the old order that threatened ruin. Some of these are the voices of partisans. Some are those of the unthinking. Some are those of special privilege. Some are merely voices of reaction. Some are voices of prejudice. Some are voices of those who can believe only in the old school of politics, economics and social relations "that brought on the deluge". The sounds that these voices are sending forth have the familiar ring of all protests when serious arguments and sound thinking is abandoned. Doing away with the constitution," "socialism" "communism" "revolution." These are some of the names applied to measures and programs that merely mean to make the world easier to live in, to prohibit exploitation, to save for investors their life's accumulations, to prevent reckless speculation. Those proposals should be studied critically.

Americans may not be in agreement as to the wisdom of all detalls, but Americans eager for a better ordered state, should resent and do resent the nature of some of the attacks now being directed against it.

Surely no true Minnesotan, no true American, wishes to change the basic form of America's government and no such proposal is or has been or will be made by that alert, staunch, generous and patriotic American now gracing the Governor's chair. Neither he nor his program essay to destroy private initiative when that private initiative is lawful, humane and American. What is attempted is the establishment of laws that are in strict conformity with American ideals as enunciated in the Constitution by our forefathers so that capitalism may continue in the welfare of all of the people, not only for a selfish few. Governor Olson's philosophy has been and is "the greatest good to the greatest number." What is wrong with that? "Liberalized capital" may be, as one writer has said, "the only hope of the entire capitalist system and those who are liberals, or progressives, or radicals; if you please, may prove to be the true patriots and the honest champions of our present form of government."

The Money Changers of the Temple will not interpret the Constitution as you and I, as the farmer in the fields, the worker at the bench, the school teacher the clerk, the stenographer and the small merchant and the small home-owner.

All want recovery, but how fiercely against recovery do those fight who want their old ideas and their old system that brought disaster and broken heart left alone!

Hope for a better order and the New Day lies in a rigid espousal of a truly liberal and honest American doctrine of economics and social relatios.

The biggest battle ahead is the fight against the forces of reaction. Those who believe in things as they always have been and now are opposed to those who have the courage and the stamina and the stamina and the fortitude to work for the betterment of their fellowman's condition and his right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Let us have criticism, but let it be the criticism that seeks to end instead of restore an intolerable and unbearable disaster and which. if restored, will bring suffering to every individual and every nation that has ot learned its lesson.

Let us have leaders who are alert, unselfish, progressive and liberal. We need today as never before advanced thinkers and fearless doers. To turn aside from those leaders who have given us the service of "the greatest good to the greatest number" is unthinkable.

The eyes of the Nation are on Minnesota as never before.

The mills of the Gods grind slowly but they grind exceedingly fine. When all is said Minnesota will go forward with Olson in 1934 to a new and better day.

Twin City Ministers Endorse Textbook Plan

The folowing statements approving of the free text book plan have been received by Governor Olson:

Rev. Cas. L. Grant, Faith Lutheran Church, St. Paul.

"The best proposal in the interest of the common people made within the past thirty-five years is the plan advanced by the Farmer-Labor party to print and distribute text books to the boys and girls of our state. There is not a word of truth in the assertion that the Lutheran church is against such a plan. I cannot conceive of a more sensible thing than the providing of free text books. While I attended public school in Pensylvania my parents were never obliged to buy a single text book, scratch tablet, pencil or pen * * * *

"Any move that promotes education for the masses should be adopted. Are we in favor of free text books? Yes, a thousand times, yes."

Rev. Sam Carlsen, East Immanuel Lutheran Church, St. Paul.

"I heartily approve the plank calling for free text books in the Farmer-Labor platform. To me it is a tragedy that 5,000 children in St. Paul alone must look to charity institutions to furnish them text books in this country where we boast of free education."

Paul A. Rasmussen, Dean of Men, Concordia College, Moorhead, Minn

"The knowledge of the exploitation characteristic of monopolistic book companies causes me to say that the printing of text books by the state is merely a means of protecting the taxpayers' dollar."

Thomas M. Kelly, Former Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus, Minneapolis.

"As a purchaser of text books for my family in the parochial schools of Minneapolis I am interested in the possibility of free text books.

"I am confident that the state authorities arc interested only in providing the mechanical means of producing the text as supplied by the Catholic school authorities, the same as is being done in Louisiana and New Mexico."

Mrs. . F. Werschem, Executive Mrs. J. F. Werschem, Executive Committee, Parent Teachers' Counsel, Minneapolis.

"I regard the free text book proposal one of the best measures ever advnced in the cause of education."

Farmer-Labor Club Held Successful Pep-Fest Sat.

Te Pennington Co. F. L. Associatoin staged a successul rally last aSturday night at the F. L. Headquarters in the P. O. building; there were approximately 200 people present at the meeting and all of them seemed very optomistic about the outcome of the election next Tuesday.

H. O. Chommie, chairman of the All Party, Olson for Governor Club, gave the opening speech in which he stated that we are now at a cross roads to recovery; to follow one of these roads would lead us back through the same door from which we came to enter this depression while to use the other door would be to progress. According to Mr. Chommie the only way to get out of this depression is to turn to the left because this left turn would lead us into a new and untried era, which might prove to eb what we are seeking.

The banking plank of the F-L Platform was discussed thoroughly by F. C. Prochl who explained why he thought that the depression could be laid directly to chain banks and the "International Bankers."

Paul A. Harris, candidate for State Senator from this district, cited the amount of money being paid out annually in the form of interest on bonded indebedness of the various units of government in the state amounting to over 16 million dollars from which we derive no benefit.

A piano solo was given by Miss Halland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Helmer Halland of this city, immediately after Mr. Harris' talk.

H. O. Berve, spoke in behalf of all the endorsed F-L candidates. He stated that the F-L candidates have a program which will attempt to carry out definite plans whereas the opposition has no plans at all.

T. J. Welch, of the Minnesota Conservation Dept. was the final speaker on the program; he cited the need for dwellings stating that in some of the larger cities people now construct dwelling in the city dump grounds "The battle is," according to Mr. Welch, " a battle of those whom are for organized greed and those who believe in justice for all.

Pennington County
General Election Nov. 6

In making my final appeal through the columns of this paper, for your vote and support, I ask that you reduce the campaign to the real issue, which after all is only "service to the County."

I am now serving my first term. I have tried in former issues to give statements of what has been accomplished, not in tricky generalities, but in facts and figures. I feel that the work which I have done on tax collections alone should merit re-election.

I further pledge myself to a policy of strict law enforcement, and will continue to co-operate with the County Board.

I wish to thank my many friends for the work they have done in my behalf, and ask that they kindly continue the work until election day.

Sincerely, PAUL A. LUNDGREN

Farmer-Labor State Candidates Sweep to Victory in Record-Breaking Vote in Tuesday Election

Rev. Daley Relates Story of Tabernacle

Rev. E. N. Daley, pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle has compiled the following condensed history of the progress of the Tabernacle for this week's issue.

Rev. Daley says in part: "I came to Thief River Falls in August, 1931, and began preaching in the Methodist church east of the river. A small handful of folk having no church affiliations pledged themselves to do all in their power to support any work promoted to the betterment of the community and the salvation of men's souls.

From time to time, we have held special Evangelistic meetings, incurring labor and expense to bring the Gospel to men. Our growth as a church has been steady, yet not without many reverses. We are thankful for the steady growth of our Sunday school. No church can long remain a blessing and of benefit to men unless it continues to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ. Our primary aim was not so much to gain members for the church as it was to save the souls of men.

We are incorporated under the name, Thief River Falls GospelTabernacle, which name we first assumed when we began three years ago.

We wish to take this opportunity to thank all our friends who have made donations to our building fund, thereby showing their interest and desire to see this work go forward.

Meetings shall continue to be held in the basement room under the Union State Bank building."

"Eat More Cheese" Is Slogan During National Cheese Week, Nov. 11 - 17

November 11 to 17 has been designed as "Cheese Week" throughout the country, by the National Cheese Institute, according to innouncements received at University Farm St. Paul, from George L. Mooney, secretary of the Institute, at Plymouth, Wisconsin. The aim observance of the week on the part of all classes is to encourage the consumption of more cheese as a means of aiding the dairy producing industries.

Minnesota dairymen are interested, because the manufacture of cheese furnishes them an outlet for considerable quanties of their product, and might furnish a much larger outlet. Dean W. C. Coffey, Department of Ariculture, University of Minnesota, commenting on the plan, calls attention to the fact that the late Prof. C. H. Eckes at University Farm frequenty pointed out the need of finding other outlets for Minnesota's dairies than through the sale of milk and butterfat. The manufacture of cheese, he says, furnishes such an outlet. "As a people," says Dean Coffey, "we have not learned to appreciate as we should, the palatability and nutritive value

European countries are far in advance of us in the per capita consumption of this product. We can well afford to develop a discrimination palate for cheese, and to give it a much more prominent place in our day-by-day selections of food."

"About 18 distinct varieties of cheese, under more than 500 names are made in this country and abroad,' says W. B. Combs, acting head of the dairy division at University Farm. "Surely, with such a variety available, it is possible for the consumer to find one or more kinds of cheese that will meet the family taste. The American homemaker might well use more cheese. It is rich in proportion, fat mineral matter, and vitamins. It is readily digested, and can be cambined with other foods in many delicious ways."

LYONS GIVEN LEAD OVER KING FOR STATE AUDITOR

Mike Holm, only Republican On State Ticket Now Leading

Floyd B. Olson, Farmer-Labor governor of Minnesota, has received the endorsement of the voters of Minnesota for a third term as Governor of the State, by being returned to office with another substantial majority. With about half of the precincts counted Governor Olson is leading with 204,799, Martin Nelson second with 180,921 and Regan trailing with 68, 661, according to the unofficial newspaper count.

Returns from the rural precincts are incomplete and it is expected that the Governor's lead will increase greatly; the fate of the other two candidates hangs on the vote of the Minnesota farmers who seem to be largely for the reelection of Floyd B. Olson, according to leaders in the movement.

All other Farmer-Labor candidates are making strong bids for office also with Sen. Shipstead assured of reelection with approximately 56,000 vote lead over his nearest opponent Roidale, Demochrat. Indications are, at this time, that the entire State Ticket of the Farmer-Laborites will be elected. Only one F-L candidate is trailing at the time of writing and by a very small margin, that is K. K. Solberg who is trying to oust Mike Holm from the Secretary of State office. Hjalmar Petersen has a substantial lead for Lieutenant Governor, Harry Peterson is assured of re-election as Attorney General; ~~A. R. Kleffman~~ is leading J. A. Schmahl for state treasurer; J. T. Lyons is leading Stafford King for State Auditor; Chas. Munn, is leading C. J. Laurisch for Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner; and R. O. Gunderson is leading Grace Davis for Clerk of the state supreme Court.

John P. Devaney is assured reelection as chief Justice of the State Supreme Court on the basis of early returns. Chief Justice Devaney received the endorsement of the state farmer-labor association early in the campaign because of his progressive record. The Associate Justices Julius J. Olson and Clifford Hilton, present incumbents, are leading strongly in the early returns for re-election; Associate Justice Olson was appointed by Governor Olson to fill the vacancy and he was endorsed by the F-L Ass'n. for re-election. W. A. Anderson, the other F-L endorsed candidate was trailing by about 5000 votes.

In the race for congressional seats the following reports were given: First district, Andersen, Republican, was given the lead over his two opponents being about 5000 ahead of Feller, Democrat; in the second, Ryan, Dem. was given about 1500 votes lead over Ahrens, F-L in the third dist., Lundeen, F-L was given 1100 votes lead over Chase, Rep.; in the fifth, Christianson, Rep., was leading Johnson, F-L by about 5000 votes; the sixth gave Knutson, Rep., a lead of 2000 over M. Johnson, F-L, with 73 out of 535 precincts counted; 4000 votes lead was given to Kvale, F-L, over Daly, Dem., in the seventh district; in the eighth Pittenger, Rep., is leading Winterquist, F-L, by nearly 1500 votes, in the ninth district, of which Pennington County is a part, R. T. Buckler is leading Ole Sageng, Rep., by more than 8000 votes with about half of the district counted.

R. T. Buckler who has been Senator from Polk Co. for two terms, will be the second Farmer-Labor congressman from this district, Knud Wefald having served the distict before Congressman Conrad Selvig. With the lead he now has over Sageng at this time his election is virtually assured.

All returns are for from complete and the ninth district report is on the basis of about half the precincts.

Marshall Co. Casts Record Vote Tues.

Voters of Marshall County went to the polls in record numbers from 25 out of 60 precincts tabulated indications point to the election of A. A. Trost, county attorney, O. C. George T. Sands and Louis M. Olson race for register of deeds office with Olson having a small plurality. Trost holds a surprising two to one lead in the county attorney race according to the reports from 25 precincts.

O. C. Tofftner is leading in a three cornered race for the office of sheriff and is quite apparently assured of election. Hans C. Hanson, the "sticker" candidate and Evald Erickson bring up the rear.

Althrough the strong Evans district has not yet reported, it will be difficult for Evans to overcome the lead of F. A. Green for representative.

Farmer-Labor State Candidates Sweep to Victory in Record-Breaking Vote in Tuesday Election

Rev. Daley Relates Story of Tabernacle

Rev. E. N. Daley, pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle has compiled the following condensed history of the progress of the Tabernacle for this week's issue.

Rev. Daley says in part: "I came to Thief River Falls in August, 1931, and began preaching in the Methodist church east of the river. A small handful of folk having no church affiliations pledged themselves to do all in their power to support any work promoted to the betterment of the community and the salvation of men's souls.

From time to time, we have held special Evangelistic meetings, incurring labor and expense to bring the Gospel to men. Our growth as a church has been steady, yet not without many reverses. We are thankful for the steady growth of our Sunday school. No church can long remain a blessing and of benefit to men unless it continues to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ. Our primary aim was not so much to gain members for the church as it was to save the souls of men.

We are incorporated under the name, Thief River Falls GospelTabernacle, which name we first assumed when we began three years ago.

We wish to take this opportunity to thank all our friends who have made donations to our building fund, thereby showing their interest and desire to see this work go forward.

Meetings shall continue to be held in the basement room under the Union State Bank building."

"Eat More Cheese" Is Slogan During National Cheese Week, Nov. 11 - 17

November 11 to 17 has been designed as "Cheese Week" through out the country, by the National Cheese Institute, according to innouncements received at University Farm St. Paul, from George L. Mooney, secretary of the Institute, at Plymouth, Wisconsin. The aim observance of the week on the part of all classes is to encourage the consumption of more cheese as a means of aiding the dairy producing industries.

Minnesota dairymen are interested, because the manufacture of cheese furnishes them an outlet for considerable quanties of their product, and might furnish a much larger outlet. Dean W. C. Coffey, Department of Ariculture, University of Minnesota, commenting on the plan, calls attention to the fact that the late Prof. C. H. Eckes at University Farm frequenty pointed out the need of finding other outlets for Minnesota's dairies than through the sale of milk and butterfat. The manufacture of cheese, he says, furnishes such an outlet. "As a people," says Dean Coffey, "we have not learned to appreciate as we should, the palatability and nutritive value

European countries are far in advance of us in the per capita consumption of this product. We can well afford to develop a discrimination palate for cheese, and to give it a much more prominent place in our day-by-day selections of food."

"About 18 distinct varieties of cheese, under more than 500 names are made in this country and abroad," says W. B. Combs, acting head of the dairy division at University Farm. "Surely, with such a variety available, it is possible for the consumer to find one or more kinds of cheese that will meet the family taste. The American homemaker might well use more cheese. It is rich in proportion, fat mineral matter, and vitamins. It is readily digested, and can be cambined with other foods in many delicious ways."

Olson, Farmer-Labor governor of Minnesota, has received the endorsement of the voters of Minnesota for a third term as Governor of the State, by being returned to office with another substantial majority. With about half of the precincts counted Governor Olson is leading with 204,799, Martin Nelson second with 180,921 and Regan trailing with 68, 661, according to the unofficial newspaper count.

Returns from the rural precincts are incomplete and it is expected that the Governor's lead will increase greatly; the fate of the other two candidates hangs on the vote of the Minnesota farmers who seem to be largely for the reelection of Floyd B. Olson, according to leaders in the movement.

All other Farmer-Labor candidates are making strong bids for office also with Sen. Shipstead assured of reelection with approximately 56,000 vote lead over his nearest opponent Roidale, Demochrat. Indications are, at this time, that the entire State Ticket of the Farmer-Laborites will be elected. Only one F-L candidate is trailing at the time of writing and by a very small margin, that is K. K. Solberg who is trying to oust Mike Holm from the Secretary of State office. Hjalmar Petersen has a substantial lead for Lieutenant Governor, Harry Peterson is assured of re-election as Attorney General; ~~A. R. Rheinhart~~ is leading J. A. Schmahl for state treasurer; J. T. Lyons is leading Stafford King for State Auditor; Chas. Munn, is leading C. J. Laurisch for Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner; and R. O. Gunderson is leading Grace Davis for Clerk of the state supreme Court.

John P. Devaney is assured reelection as chief Justice of the State Supreme Court on the basis of early returns. Chief Justice Devaney received the endorsement of the state farmer-labor association early in the campaign because of his progressive record. The Associate Justices Julius J. Olson and Clifford Hilton, present incumbents, are leading strongly in the early returns for re-election; Associate Justice Olson was appointed by Governor Olson to fill the vacancy and he was endorsed by the F-L Ass'n. for re-election. W. A. Anderson, the other F-L endorsed candidate was trailing by about 5000 votes.

In the race for congressional seats the following reports were given: First district, Andersen, Republican, was given the lead over his two opponents being about 5000 ahead of Feller, Democrat; in the second, Ryan, Dem. was given about 1500 votes lead over Ahrens, F-L in the third dist., Lundeen, F-L was given 1100 votes lead over Chase, Rep.; in the fifth, Christianson, Rep., was leading Johnson, F-L by about 5000 votes; the sixth gave Knutson, Rep., a lead of 2000 over M. Johnson, F-L, with 73 out of 535 precincts counted; 4000 votes lead was given to Kvale, F-L, over Daly, Dem., in the seventh district; in the eighth Pittenger, Rep., is leading Winterquist, F-L, by nearly 1500 votes, in the ninth district, of which Pennington County is a part, R. T. Buckler is leading Ole Segeng, Rep., by more than 8000 votes with about half of the district counted.

R. T. Buckler who has been Senator from Polk Co. for two terms, will be the second Farmer-Labor congressman from this district, Knud Wefald having served the distict before Congressman Conrad Selvig. With the lead he now has over Sageng at this time his election is virtually assured.

All returns are for from complete and the ninth district report is on the basis of about half the precincts.

State Upland Game Bird Hunting Ends For Year

Last Saturday at sunset marked the close of all forms of upland game bird hunting in the state. At that time quail shooting stopped in ten counties and the season ended in 11 counties for the legal taking of ruffed grouse or native partridge.

Minesota gunners enjoyed an open season this fall on prairie chickens, ringnecked pheasants, bobwhite quail and ruffed grouse or native partride along with waterfowling.

In reviewing the upland game bird seasons, Erling Swenson, director of the division of game and fish, said that "generally speaking the past seasons of upland game birds proved successful although the number of young birds was extreme heat during the nesting season, the severe dust and sand storms and the continued drouth in many sections, especially where pheasants are numerous."

Director Swenson cautioned all hunters that game may not be retained more than five days after the close of the season unless tagged by him or a state game warden. Upland birds may be retained under a permit until Jan. 10,1934.

Slow Driving Necessary In Winter, Patrol Warns

Minnesota motorists were warned by the state highway patrol this week to begin adjusting their driving habits to the changed road conditions of fall and winter.

"Every year when the first winter storm of sleet or ice hits the state, the is toll of deaths and injuries among motorists who try to maintain summer driving speeds", said J. P. Arnoldy, chief of the patrol.

"It would almost seem that many drivers do not remember from one winter to the next so far as road dangers are concerned. When the first film of ice or slippery snow covers the highways, just make up your mind not to be in a hurry, and you'll get to your destination a lot quicker than if you take a speed detour to a hospital."

FRAZIER-LEMKE BILL PROTECTS RURAL CREDIT DEBTORS, SAYS PETERSON

Rural credit farms as well as farms clased from private owners are exempt from foreclosure under the aFrzier Lemke bill, according to a ruling issued by attorney General Harry H. Peterson. In reply to a question of the Rural Crediit Bureau, Attorney General Peterson stated that the state has no priority rights and has no privileges not granted private parties. "While the United State District Court of Maryland has found this act to be unconstitutional, we believe that it is constitutional and that it will ultimately be declared so by the United States Supreme Court," the opinion signed by Mathias N. Orfield, assistant attorney general read.

State Plans Winter Road Work Program

Graveling, bridge work and heavy grading projects will be carried on this winter by the state highway department to provide as much cold weather employment as possible, according to N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner.

This winter's program will not be as extensive as last winter's, because there is not as much federal money avalable. However, wherever practical construction will be kept going through the cold months.

SECRET NAZI CONFERENCE DECIDES AUSTRIA'S FATE

Munich (TIS) That a very important secret conference of prominent Nazi leaders and Austrian Nazis was held during the recent Nazi party convention at Nuremberg has been disclosed by reliable sources. The negotiations were lengthy and ended in an agreement which was communicated to a conference of 200 spetially invited Nazi Austrian officials. The instructions are as follows:

> To abstrain from all open acts and attacks against the Austrian Goverment until after the plebiscite in the Saar on January 13, 1935.
> To brand the present government as tyrannical and insist upon "free elections, in accordance with democratic ideals."

In connection with these instructions, the Austrians were told that the new leader of District No. 10 in place of the ignominously demoted leaders Frauenfeld and Habict, will be named at the beginning of November. District No. 10 means Austria in the Nazi language. The new man will be responsible only to Hitler' first lieutenant, Hess. A few days later a meeting of prominent Nazi Austrain refugees is scheduled to take place in Munich, where the new leader will give instructions and lay down the tactics to be followed after the Saar plebiscite.

CALIFORNIAN LIKES THE HIGHWAYS OF MINNESOTA

Californians are noted for their praise of California, but R. H. Henderson of Lone Pine, California is a booster for Minnesota as well In a letter to the state highway department Mr. Henderson says: With my family I recently had the opportunity to traverse several hundred miles of your highways from northern to southern Minnesota. Of the various states we have motored through, we have never had the pleasure of being so well directed by frequent highway designations as in Minnesota."

GAME AND FISH FUND IS OK SAYS ERLING SWANSON

Minnesota sportsmen can rest assured that funds of the Game and Fish division are being administered efficiently and economically, Erling Swenson, director said today. He cited a decrease of $101,000 in the operating expenses of the division for the fiscal year ending June 30, last, as compared to the previous fiscal year as evidence of rigid economy in the division.

Admitting that there is a decrease in the cash balance, Mr. Swenson stated that the assets of the division have materially increased since January 1, 1931, when the present state administration took over the affairs of the division. Acquisition of valuable consevation areas during the past three years will prove of inestimable value to wild life and other natural resources of the state, he said.

"Enactment of the Public Shooting Grounds law by the 1929 state legislature diverted one-half of the monies received from the sale of hunting livenses into a seperate fund which can be used only for the acquisition and improvement of land," Director Swenson said. fund of the division has been decreased by about $145,000 annually and approximately $560,000 was accumulated in this special fund.

"About $400,000 of the Public Shooting Grounds fund has been spent in land purchase and in physical improvements, leaving a balance in this fund of about $160,000 Such important conservation areas as Thief Lake in Northwestern Minnesota, Whitewater valley in the Southeastern part of the state, the Anoka County Game Refuge near the Twin Cities, King Williams Narrows in St. Louis county and the Kabetogema project have been acquired with money from the Public Shooting Grounds funds which under the old plan would have gone into the general operating fund of the division.

"Total receipts for the past three years amounted to $1,998,599.47 while actual operating expenses were held to $1,454,203.85 which left an excess of receipts of 1544,395.62 It must be remebered that during this three year period $54,569.00 was paid out in wolf bounties from the funds of the division and $25,000 for forest fire fighting purposes.

"Willful and malicious misstatements are being made regarding the Game and Fish funds without any basis of fact. It is readily apparent that these unwarranted attacks, made by a disgruntled office seeker who is a so-called conservation guardian in the state, are for political purposes only, an effort to discredit the present state administration."

CRIME CAUSES GREAT WASTE SAYS DEVANEY

Chief Justice John P. Devaney, chairman of the Minnesota Crime Commission, discussed activities of the commission in its efforts to reduce crime in this state in a radio talk over W. T. C. N., Wednesday evening and will speak over K. S. T. P., Friday, Nov. 2 at 1:15 p. m.

The addresses inaugurate a series of broadcasts over the same stations, sponsored by the Minnesota Crime Commission, and to be given by representatives of the bar, the police, the public schools, the University of Minnesota and the official world.

Chief Justice Devaney, in his addresses on the Minnesota Crime Commission, discusses generally the objectives and work of the commission and will call particular attention to the appalling waste, physically and economically, suffered by the nation through the ravages of crime.

Following these opening addresses, Harold E. Stassen, president of the Minnesota County Attorneys association, will discuss "Crime and the Prosecutor" over W. T. C. N., Nov. 7; Warren Moore, police commissioner of Duluth, will speak over K. S. T. P., Nov. 12, on the subject, "Police Training"; Miss Bertha Ferguson of the American Federation of Teachers will discuss "The Attitude of the Progressive School to Juvenile Delinquency" over W. T. C. N., on Nov. 14; Ben W. Palmer, past president of the Hennepin County Bar association, is the speaker scheduled for Nov. 19, over K. S. T. P.; Dr. E. D. Monachesi, assistant professor of sociology at the University of Minnesota, will discuss the subject, "Juvenile Probation" over W. T. C. N., Nov. 21; A. C. Lindholm, chairmun of the Minnesota Board of Parole, will speak on "The Problem of Parole" over K. S. T. P., Nov. 26; and Mrs. Blanche LaDue, chairman of the Minnesota Board of Control, will discuss "Crime Prevention" over K. S. T. P., on Dec. third.

These speeches, after the initial "talks" by Chief Justice Devaney will be broadcast over K. S. T. P., at 6:15 p. m. and over W. T. C. N., at 8:00 p. m.

WORK ON THE WHETSTONE DIVISION HAS STARTED

Diversiion of the Whetstone river from its normal course, into Big Stone lake, has been started by the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief admiistration), according to an announcement by L. P. Zimmerman, Acting administrator.

The river at present is a tributary to the Minnesota river, difficult to keep within bounds in the spring. The project will control flood waters in both rivers by raising the level of Big Stone lake. It will require a year to complete and will employ a maximum of 300 men. Fifty workers are already on the payroll. The estimated cost is half a million dollars.

Mr. Zimmerman also announced that surveys are being made on the $1,500,000 Lac Qui Parle flood control project, which is designed to curb the headwaters of the Mississippi river. Ultimately, this will result in an extensive conservation program for the Minnesota valley.

To establish a new channel for the Whetstone river, a dyke will be built from Big Stone to Ortonville It necessitates the construction of an inter-state highway of Big Stone lake, and connecting the two cities. The Minnesota highway department will plan and build the new highway.

The Lac Qui Parle project, on which preliminary construction has started, provides for a retaining wall accross the "Watson sag", to hold in Lac Qui Parle the flood waters of the Chippewa and Minnesota rivers.

"Conservationists have for years battled for these vital under-takings," adds Cr. Zimmerman. "They will be completed with relief labor, directed by the Minnesota SERA."

Raccoon Season In State Cut 10 Days

Added protection for Minnesota's raccoon is provided in the annual open season this year, Erling Swenson, director of game and fish stated this week. Ten days have been cut off the usual season, he said, with the opening scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 10, and the closing on Saturday, Dec. 1, both dates inclusive.

Director Swenson pointed out that pelts will be more prime because of the delay in opening the season.

Definite action was taken to provide additional protection for raccoon with the Minnesota Conservation Commission urging Governor Olson to curtail the regular season. The governor signed the executive order October 29.

Raccoon may be taken at any time of day or night. Dogs may be used except in territory inhabited or frequented by deer. It is illegal for any person to molest or take raccoon in any manner in a den or hollow tree or to cut down any tree inhabited or occupied by raccoon. No trap for raccoon may be set in or under water or in any muskrat runway.

WOOLERY APPOINTED TO TAKE CHARGE OF N. W. SCHOOL'S SHOP

Due to the unusually heavy enrollment in the first and second year classes at the Northwest School, it has been necessary to secure additional assistance in the Agricultural Engineering division. H. M. Woolery has been appointed to take charge of the work in gas motors and assist with tractor construction and farm shop. Mr. Woolery is a graduate of the University of Minnesota where he served as laboratory assistant for the past two years. The work in field machinery and tractors is under the direction of V. C. Kallal, a graduate of the University of Illinois, while A. M. Foker offers the work in blacksmithing, carpentry and mechanical drawing.

Progress in the mechanization of agriculture has caused an increasing number of students to elect courses in agricultural engineering. All lecture and laboratory work at the Northwest School has been outlined with a view to assisting the young people in this territory in the efficient operation of the farm and the farm home.

Forest Fire Losses Decreased By CCC

During the forest fire season to date, 31, 144 days have been spent by members of the state and federal Civilian Conservation Corps fighting fires in the forests of Minnesota, as against 56,798, the previous year. The burned over area in the National Forests alone was reduced by 2,332 acres, or 80% below last year, according to Grover Conzet, State Forester.

This great decrease was due in large part, Mr. Conzet explained, to experience gained in combating the tremendous toll of of the previous year; to rising public appreciation of the importance of fire protection in support of forest rehabilitation and resource development through the activities of the CCC; and to improved methods of fighting fire. This is in spite of the fact that the number of visitors to the national forests and other recreational areas of the state exceed that of last year. The pride built up among the CCC in protecting the public's forests is a great asset in keeping the forests green, and has reduced the necessity for the vast emergency appropriations for fire suppression, he said.

"Camps are rated upon accomplishment and appearance; forest protection takes priority in CCC work."

'More than 97 of the 103 fires occuring on the Superior and Chippewa National Forests this season were man-caused. Careless smokers and campers were responsible for 64 of these fires.

AUTO DEATHS EXCEED THE WAR TOLL WRITER SRYS

by W. G. Calderwood

So far as "killed and wounded" are concerned the automobile outmurders war. During the year and a half that U. S. troops were in action in the World War, the number killed in action was 37,541, to which should be added those who died of wounds, making a total of 50,475, or an average of 33,650 pr. year.

Based on the figures to date, the National Safety Congress, which held its ntaional gathering in Cleveland recently, the probable total of traffic deaths in which the auto will play a part, will reach the staggering total of 34,100 for 1934. Thus, the car in the U. S. outbutcers the bloody shambles of Mars when matched against our soldiers killed in the World War.

There were a total of 182,622 American soldiers wounded on the sunny fields of France during the year and a half, or an annual average of 121,748. Traffic tragedies ijured and maimed over a million persons on the highways of America in 1933, and the Safety Congress places the probable number of men, women and children who will be maimed i 1934 at 1,100,000. Some of these will be disabled for life, and others will carry serious life-long handicaps. On an annual basis, this is more than nine times the number of American soldiers which suffered non-fatal injuries in the great war.

How many of these deaths and disabilities are occasioned by the fact that John Barleycorn sometimes occupies a place at the steeringwheel no one can ever know. Dr. Walter R. Miles of Yale University, one of the leading authorities on the subject, recently stated that while the official figures indicate that the proportion is from 7 to 10 per cent, the informed traffic men believe that alcohol plays a part in one-third of the traffic tragedies.

Supposing that 10 per cent is approximately the correct figure, then alcohol is responsible for 3,365 deaths on the basis of the estimate of the Safety Congress above cited, and for 110,000 injured. The monetary loss, which is not worthy to be mentioned on the same pages with these figures of death and physical injuries, will total about $1,650,000,000 for 1934. Ten per cent of this would go far towards absorbing the next revenue after expenses of administration and enforcement are covered.

True it is that for the individual and the nation, the wages of sin is death, and the wages of gin is debt.

No Flawless Emeralds

The emerald, when large, clear, and dark, is the most costly precious stone in the world, despite the fact that a flawless one has never been found.

INTERIM HIGHWAY GOMM. HOLD FIVE OPEN HEARINGS

The Citizens' Interim Highway committee authorized by the 1933 legislature will hold five public hearings in November and December, according to an announcement by Fred Schilplin of St. Cloud, chairman of the committee.

Hearings have been scheduled as follows: Nov. 9, at Redwood Falls, Nov. 15 at Crookston, Nov. 20 at Duluth, Nov. 26 at Rochester and December 4 at St. Paul.

County and township officers are particularly invited to attend these hearings and present their views on proposals that town and county roads be taken into the state trunk highway system. The committee was appointed to study this phase of the state's highway problems particularly and to report before the next session of the legislature. Legislative authorization of the committee's investigation followed agitation for a consolidation of all local roads under the state highway department.

Surplus Gommodity Gifts Total Huge Sum

Commodities worth $1,100,000 have been given to Minnesota's needy families since October 1, 1933 reports F. A. Gilbert, director for the commodity division, Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration).

Meat allotments, shipped from the Twin Cities, reached the total of 6,000,000 pounds. Other important items are, in pound weight: smoked pork 2,600,000; salt pork 1,700,000; flour 1,380,000; butter 620,000; lard 444,000; fresh veal 435,000. Great quantities of mattress ticking have been provided, in addition to 39,000 blankets and 1,360,000 eggs.

All the commodities represent contribution to the SERA from the Federal Surp'us Relief corporation. The details of distribution, which still goes on, require the services of a thousand people.

CHRISTMAS TREE CUTTERS MUST KNOW FOREST LAWS

The annual Christmas tree harvest will soon be under way according to Grover Conzet of the Division of Forestry. Persons planning on cutting trees should become familiar with the laws regarding the cutting and transportation of these trees. Before any trees may be cut a report must be made to the Director of the Division of Forestry telling the legal subdivisions on which the logger proposes to cut and the name of the person or firm doing the cutting.

Before the trees may be transported to market the shipper must supply the truck driver with a copy of the bill of sale or the written consent of the owner of the land upon which the trees have been cut. This consent must contain the legal description of the land and the name of the legal owner of the land. This permit must be carried by the driver with each load transported and exhibited to any officer of the law, forest, ranger, forest patrolman, game warden, or any other officer of the Department of Conservation, upon demand.

If the owner ships by rail he must exhibit the written consent of the agent of the railroad who records the permit with the name and address of the shipper.

Copies of the above laws may be obtained by writing to the Director of the Division of Forestry, State Office Building, St. Paul, or by applying to the local ranger.

PARENTS DAY AT N. W. SCHOOL IS BIG SUCCESS SAYS SUPT. A. A. DOWELL

Good weather and ideal roads contributed to the success of the Parents' Day celebration held at the Northwest School last Saturday. According to Superintendent A. A. Dowell, over 350 parents from fourteen counnties were present, thus establishing a new attendance record for parents' day.

The following parents from Pennington county were in attendance: Mr. and Mrs. Owen Weckweth, and Mrs. John Anderson and son Harold. of Hazel: Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Dahlen, and Mr. and Mrs. Hans Solberg of Erie; Mr. and Mrs. William Holst, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Engelstad, Mr. Nick Hanson and daughter Christine, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Oen, and Mrs. Syvert Hanson and daughter Effie, all of Tihef River Falls; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yonke, and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Haugen of St. Hilaire; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Claussen, Mr. and Mrs. Ejnar Jenson, Mr. and Mrs. Torjus Hemmestvedt, and Mr. and Mrs John Kast of Goodrirge.

Special features included the visitation of classes, parents' day dinner in the dining hall at noon, a program presented by the students and inspection of the home project exhibits under the direction of E. R. Clark, R. J. Christgau, and Retta Bede. The student program, which featured the work of music, English, home economics and agricultural divisions, closed with the presentation of a one-act play, "A Wedding," under the direction of Dorothy M. Smith. A large number of parents remained for the Hallowe'en party arranged by a committee, of which R. S. Dunham charman.

HE'S ALREADY PAYING SALES TAX

By H. F. Proehl

A. H. Anderson states that the burden under a sales tax would be so heavy on the laboror, the farmer and the renter, that they would have to pass it to the bankruptcy courts.

This is exactly what has happened under the present system.

At this time, I am getting 30 cents a bushel for potatoes. The consumer pays about 80 cents. I contend that I am paying a sales tax of 50 cents a bushel because are after 50 cents has been added those potatoes are just as valuable when they leave my farm as they to the cost.

In 1900 a six-foot grain binder cost $110. Today that same machine costs $235. Here I am paying a direct income tax of $125 for the harvestor trust. Call them taxes or profits. They mean the same to me.

BIG GAME SEASON TO OPEN NOV. 15 IN STATE

Minesota's big game season is scheduled to get under way next Thursday, Nov. 15, at which time hunters may start out in quest of deer and bear. The season will close Nov. 25. Both dates are inclusive.

The counties that are open this fall to deer hunting are Cook, Lake, St. Louis, Carlton, Pine, Aitkin, Crow Wing, Cass, Itasca, Koochiching, Hubbard, Clearweatr, Beltrami, Lake of the Woods and Roseau, all that portion of Kittson and Marshall counties lying east of eth Soo Line railway tracks running from the northern boundary of Kittson county to the south boundary of Marshall county, and all of that portion of Becker county lying east of the Soo Line railway tracks running from the north to the south boundary of that county.

Itaska County is open to the taking of antlered male deer only. Does and fawns are given complete protection in this county.

A person may take one deer and one bear ta any time during the open season. Full protection in accorded moose, elk and caribou.

"Deer are reported as being plentiful in the areas open to big game hunting," Erling Swenson director of the division of Game and Fish, said. "Most of the sections open to deer hunting were outside the critical drouth areas and deer as a consequence have had plenty of food and clover.

"Hunters are cauntioned to abide by the game laws when hunting as the open areas will we thoroghly patrolled by the state game wardens. We are transferring a large number of wardens from southern and central parts of the state into the big game sections, not only in open counties but in counties which are closed and are known to have same deer.

"It must be remembered that hunters must accompany deer that are being transported home. Failure to do this will mean confiscation of the deer."

Resident big game hunting licenses cost $2.25 each and non-resident licenses for the taking of d eerand bear cost $50.25.

GERMAN WORERS PANIC-STRICEN BY NEW NAZI LAW

Frankfurt (TIS) The new Nazi labor regulations ordering the dismissal of young workers in favor of older men, preferably Nazi party members, has created a wave of resentment which cannot be overestimated. Even the coordinated press points to the panic which has taken hold of millions of young workers and tries to dispell their fears as unjustified and contrary to the labor policy of the Hitler Government.

These efforts, however, have not been successful, mainly on account of the sweeping and vague explanations of the law given by the Nazi authorities. The workers are being told that no legal resort is open to them. Neither are they in a position to appeal their dismissals to the labor courts and ask for a hearing of their cases. The courts are instructed to deny all such motions.

To soften the admission thot the German worker has become an out-and-out labor serf, the employers are enjoined to avoid all "unnecessary harshness."

Waterfowl Season Closes November 11

Sunday November 11, at sunset, will bring Minnesota's annual duck season to a close.

"That federal action taken to give added protection to all ducks and more so for certain threatened species was timely, was evidenged by the numbers of wild ducks in Minnesota," Erling Swenson, director of the game and fish division said. "Only good shooting reports came in from the scattered sections and in general duck hunting this fall was way below normal. Ducks were found to be concentrated on the larger bodies of water. There is no question but what the drouth has materially decreased the wild duck population and it would not surprise me if further federal restrctions are adopted another season."

Minnesota gunners only have the big game season now to look forward to after Nov. 11. Deer and bear will be sought from Nov. 15 to Nov. 25, both dates inclusive, in areas opened for this form of hunting.

My country 'tis for thee
Sweet land that used to be
Our pride and joy;
For thee our sad tears fall;
Confusion fills us all
As flames of alcohol
Our hopes destroy.

All eyes now fixed on thee
Great land of destiny,
Behold thy shame;
God raised thee up to lead
By righteous word and deed;
Against thy sins we plead,
In his dear name.

Let truth be told, today,
We face utter decay
In moral worth;
With grief our souls are dumb
Because the curse of rum,
Which over thee has come,
Will blight the earth.

Our father's God to Thee
Author of purity,
To Thee we pray;
O save our land from booze,
Save us before we lose,
All power of will to choose
The better way.

"SNART DAGES DET BRODER, DET LYSNER I ØST"
(Soon Dawn Breaks, Oh Brother, 'tis Light in the East.)

Thirty-six years ago, the writer stood on the curb of an Oslo (Norway) street, on the first of May and watched organized labor march past in the annual May Day demonstration. Each union with a band; every organization with its richly embroidered silken banner unfurled to the breeze. Eight abreast they came; heads up; and faces to the front; a parade miles long. Every trade and vocation was organized— street cleaners, laundry maids, janitors, as well as every craft and trade. Organization was the watchword and the cooperative commonwealth their goal.

And as they marched, they sang. Full-throated and clear the words of the Norwegian Revolutionary hymn, the first line of which captions this article, burst on the mild spring air, echoing the pent-up emotions and hopes of forty thousand marching proletariots.

How near the New Day seemed then. Labor was awakening and stretching his mighty and sinewy form. The freshness of the dawn was in his nostrils; his face to the east; gathering strength at every stride. Forward—forward to the New Day—into the dawn.

How slowly we progress. That was thirty-six years ago. Time and again we have started forward. And time and again we have fallen by the wayside victims of dissention, jealousy, greed of self-seekers, and the bogeys of the reactionaries.

In 1918, the embattled farmers of North Dakota and Minnesota gathered at Fargo to hear the late Charles A. Lindbergh. Thousands of farmers paraded in a stupendous show of power. There was a glow on suntanned and weatherbeaten faces. How lustily they cheered—the New Day—dawn was breaking—there was a streak of light in the east.

Now again we have set our faces to the east, and the sky is brightened with new hope for those who toil in fields and factories. In the skirmish of last Tuesday, we were in the main successful. Reactionaries were defeated all along the line from coast to coast. In spite of the most wanton use of money yet pitted against them, organized workers and farmers advanced their cause and drew a step nearer to equality of opportunity.

But even now after all these years of experience with the tactics of the opposition we have failed to hold our lines on all fronts. The legislative races are a fair example. With the C. L. Hansen episode of twelve years ago still fresh enough to be vividly remembered, many Farmer-Laborites allowed them selves to be misled by hired campaign workers and a couple of self labeled Farmer.Laborites who are not above selling their party and their candidates to the highest bidder. With Waldal's past record in the legislature shouting to high heaven of his vote on the carshed bill, the child labor amendment, the repeal of the Brooks Coleman law, the private detective bill and Nolan for speaker, the voters of Thief River Falls were still capable of giving him a majority over a man who has served them faithfully and efficiently for sixteen years.

Yes, we move slowly. But for the levelheaded and firm stand of the rural population, what a delegation the sixty-fifth district would have in the legislature.

THE OBSTRUCTIONISTS ARE HAPPY

The morning edition of the Minneapolis Journal chortles gleefully because of the fact that the Farmer-Labor party evidently failed to gain control of the legislature. Such is always the attitude of the reactionaries and the obstructionists. Having no program except the philosophy of Greed, they are not willing that anything should be tried to better the conditions of the American people. The fact that the people certainly endorsed Governor Olson's program when they elected him cannot be denied. He, more than anyone else stressed the Farmer-Labor program in his speeches to the voters. He more than anyone else appealed to the electorate for reelection on the basis of that program. Thru bickering and petty jealousies enough Farmer Labor candidates for the legislature fell by the wayside to assure the reactionaries of control of the legislature, and without doubt, we are in for another two years of hectic warfare between the Governor and the legislative branch of the government.

Good citizenship would dictate that the will of the people as expressed by their ballot be carried out. Certainly more can not be lost than the people have already lost thru the avarice of the reactionaries. But anyone that has read the Journal knows of course that, that infamy sheet is not interested in good government. They are interested only in keeping everything they have secured, regardless of how it was secured and grabbing as much more as they can get away with, without going to the penitentiary.

"Bootleggers are still selling 50 per cent of the alcoholic beverages consumed in this country today," says Joseph Triner of Chicago, chairman of the national code authority for the alcoholic beverage wholesale industry. We thought that liquor was brought back to solve the bootlegger problem.—Owatonna Journal.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

With the money that the world war cost we could build a $2,500 house, furnish it with $1,000 worth of furniture, put it on five acres of land worth $100 an acre, and give this home to each and every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany, and Russia."—The Readers Digest.

POLITICAL PROSTITUTION
New Ulm Review

Seated at his desk in the daily newspaper's telegraph or city room, the average well-trained journalist learns to evaluate newsw carefully, to prepare it understandingly, and to present it withoout bias. Sush matters are tofen neglected i the country weekly field, largely because experience here is limited and the news audience is of a personal nature.

But to the Minneapolis Journal practically all things sacred to true newspaperman's heart are so much decrepid tradition. With complete disregard for ethics, this paper has gone to great heights luring the past campaign in an effort to sway Minnesota's voters away from the Farmer-Labor ticket in the Farmer-Labor ticket in the interests of Martin A. Nelson and his colleagues. Although other Twin City papers are guilty of the same offense, let it be said to their credit that most of them confined their trades to the editorial page, where they belong.

Among self-resperting newspapermen, The Journal has undoubtedly lost many frieds during the present campaign. Time was when this publication merited great esteem around most Northwest copy desks, but such a day is gone. It's editor and publisher from 1908 to 1928, Herschel V. Jones, stated that "the principles that should govern the publication of a news paper are honestly and fairness. The decision on any question on any question should be subjected to this test—is it fair or is it honest?

Altho the quotation is still carried in the Journal's editorial page masthead, it has become meaningless.

Let it be known that a good newspaper does not consider a minister's statement on the textbook question deserving of a two-line eight column "banner" on page one. Let it further be know that personal opinion in any matter of public interest should be expressed from an editorial point-of-view and not under the disguised clothing of a news story. Grantled, a good newspaper will always try to mold opinion, but it should do so without resorting to deception.

These are merely two examples of the Journal's foul behavior during the current campaign. It has deliberately misrepresented the facts, and has degenerated itself from the Northwest's leading newspaper into a muck-raking political hack sheet.

MUZZLING RASMUSSEN?
The Country Press

The attempt of eight Lutheran ministers who passed a resolution objecting to the work of Paul A. Rasmussen, dean of men at Concordia College, has been doing in the interests of the Farmer-Labor party, has stirred up a storm of protest among the people of the Ninth Congressional District who are favorable to the party.

Dean Rasmussen's reply to the resolution deserves much praise and we doubt if there is a living soul in this section of the state who if they have an open mind cannot heartily endorse his stand on the matter.

His statement made to the press concerning the charges are as follows: "If the time has come when all men but professional politicians are to be muzzled, then it is time that an investigation be made to determine what freedom of speech actually is. My conception has always been that an active part in politics by all citizens makes for good government."

BUGHOUSE FABLES
American Guardian

Once upon a time there was a farmer who had raised more swine than he knew what to do with. This worried him so greatly that he grew thin worrying, whereas the swine grew fatter, which worried the farmer still more. After many sleepless nights the farmer thought out a plan by which he could rid himself of the swine he knew not what to do with. So he buried all the swine he knew not what to do with, for which he paid himself two coppers a pound. Then he charged himself twenty coppers a pound, which he called processing tax, for the swine he ate himself. In this manner, one swine he knew what to do with paid for two swine he had not known what to do with, whereupon the farmer lived happily ever afterwards.

TOWERS TO PEACE?
New Ulm Review

Sixteen years ago Sunday one of the world's most memorable events occured, and it was acclaimed alike with prayers and thanksgiving, and with the riotous celebration of a New Year's eve festival. From trenches along many European fronts, mud-laden daughboys pulled their weary frames. Heaven was praised, for an armistice had been signed to end a war transcending all others in gruesome slaughter and futile struggle.

In New Ulm next Sunday the American Legion will observe Armistice day in fitting manner. Joining with other service orgaizations, veterans of the last war will gather at the local cemetery, where a granite slab will be dedicated. Towering into the air, this monument will stand for years as a memorial to those who gave their lives in all armed conflicts.

The Legion's action in erecting this stone is commendable, and we could not evolve a more fitting method of showing honor to those who gave their lives as an offering to Mars. But at the same time we must admit that this consecrating memorial cannot help much to alleviate the suffering caused by war.

Let us, on this Armistice Day, not pass over lightly the purpose of its observance. Even now, the war clouds are recasting their shadows in the Saar basin and among the Balkans. Monuments to the dead are fitting and proper, but they become ironical towers of Babel if we forget their significance and let another war snuff out more lives.

Armed conflicts can be abolished if we possess the will power anl determination to forge a permanent pledge of peace. Wholesale slaughter should not be the undertaking of a civilized world. Rather should we undertake to establish an international amity founded upon sane reasoning. On Sunday, rededicate your life to peaceful intentions!

Any change from our present religious system, which is a relic rather than a utility, that would make for unity in the teaching and practice of Christianity would be at least basically sound for socalled Christian churches to adopt.—Dr. C.Grays.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

A letter to O. O. McIntyre in his column in the Minneapolis Journal of June 10, 1934:

"For more than 12 years I was a night nurse in a very exclusive sanitarium an hour's motor ride from New York. Our patients were mostly what novelists would call 'rich debauchees.' They were those addicted to drink and drugs, mostly drugs. I attended two young ladies who had made their debut but a few years before; beautiful finishing school products who came under my care with mottled complexions, roaming eyes and unclean bodies. I heard their ravings in the still hours of the night. Finally it was too much for a supersensative person and I wound up in a sanitorium of a different sort myself. I write this, now restored to health, because you have written frequently of cocktail parties in New York. They are the getaway barriers for most of these cases. Young girls graduate from them to the wild cafes and on into the hands of the dope peddlers, who have a sway over young folk of America that not even the narcotic division of our government grasps." — L. CAPITOL NEWS REVIEW
By
A. I. Harris

One of the newer developments in Minnesota is the spontaneous rising of the youth of the State to support Governor Olson and to demand a voice in problems effecting their own destiny. Some weeks ago Governor Olson delivered one of the most important messages ever delivered in the State. The youth of the State answered his challenge in a manner that has amazed all. Thomas Minehan, writer and leclectured on youth topics and formerly instructor of Sociosogy at the University of Minnesota, is the active organizer. Minnesota Youth movement meetings are being held throughout the State. Nineteen clubs more that 2500 members have be enrolled in different towns, cities, colleges. Temporary officers have been elected and arrangements made to hold meetings in every county. The organization is non-partisan and non-sectarian embracing all political beliefs and all faiths, after election day it intends to work for laws favorable to youth and to do something to reduce unemployment and discouragment among the young men and women.

We have written many words on Law and Order League, but in our efforts to descrbe the type of law and order uphels by this meretricious body of arm-chair vigilantes, we never attained the classic simplicity of a woman who writes seeking aid in her destitution. Here is a paragraph verbatim from her letter: "Some people talk about laws, but I know when a man has a full pocket book he is carrying the law with him. A poor man has no show. Some day this will all come out clear. This is the only thing that comforts me." Simplicity is sometimes devastating.

Cattle rustling has gone modern with times. Using large trucks, rustlers have made off with several hundred head of douth cattle from herds being pastured in the northern part of Minnesota. Special investigators are now preparing evidence against numerous rustling hundred head of drouth cattle from into court at an early date. Prosesuspects and the cases will be taken to the limit.

Some person with little sense of responsibility and a cruel turn of humor last week inserted and advertisement in a Minneapolis paper calling for telephone operators for the Capital switchboard, giving the name of "J. Y. Peterson" custodian, (whose initials are J. L.). Some three hundred girls, eager for work of any kind swamped the custodian's office, and were told that the ad was a fake. May of them had tears in their eyes as they realized that there was no job. Check with the newspaper that ran the ad showed that the ad had been telephoned in charged to the Capitol number. It was a thoroughly unscrupulous attempt to embarass Mr. Peterson and the Farmer-Labor administration at the expense 300 jobless girls.

Announcement was made last week by Commissioner John G. Rockwell, newly appointed commissioner of education, of the names of he persons engaged to write the supplementary material for the schools. In the list are such prominent people as Dr. C. A. Krey, of the History Department of the University of Minnesota, H. S. Quigley, head of the Department of Political Sciece at the University, and international authority on far-eastern problems, F. W. Rarig, chairman of the Department of of Political Science at the Univer-Lippincott, associate professor of political Science at the University and graduate of Yale University and the University of London, and others of equal prominence in their fields. "And these are the people that are accused of being communists." Dr. Rockwell said.

Mother Mooney

A recent letter from the Tom Mooney Molders' Defense Committee contains a tribute to mother Mooney, by her famous son, Tom. She died Sept. 2. Tom Mooney was refused permission to attend her funeral, and routing the procession through the prison was also denied.

She was once turned away from the White House door when Herbert Hoover lived therein. "She knocked in vain" when she came to intercede for her son, as H. H. Lewis, the proletarian poet, expressed it, " * * * as truth will ever knock, While there alone unaided at the lock."

It is a matter of record that bankers and industrialists gained ready admittance to Hoover's sanctum during those hectic times. The world will never forget.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

I BELIEVE

—when you're right, your chin is up.

—society is too backward to work as a unit for its good.

—major evils will come to an when we are interested in each other's good.

—pressure for profits should not be of greater importance than pressure for service.

—it is past time when the intolerance of nationalism should yield to international brotherhood.

—one may be sincere and honest and, at the same time, work against what would be better, thereby doing harm, through thinking they are doing good.

E. W. Backus

Edward Wellington Backus, lumber magnate, is dead. He, who went into the wilderness of Minnesota and Ontario and supervised the erection of sawmills and paper mills, who created an empire in the muskeg, who barged through to enormous riches through the violent develovment of our natural resources, is dead. We feel sure that he did not take any of his riches with him.

He was the type of capitalist that is rapidly passing,—the individual. International interlocking directorates are succeeding these old "rugged individualists," these gruff old slave drivers who nevertheless were more human than the machines that succeeded them.

"The House of Rothschild"

Another play which contained the elements of greatness, "The House of Rothschild," starring George Arliss, was released from the film factories of Hollywood. Rothschild, as portrayed by Arliss, was a platitudinous hypocrite. Not all Jews are thus, we feel. Mike Gold tells of the other kind in his novel, "Jews Without Money."

The picture of the Jewish pogroms in Germany was, we think always been used as an issue alwawyws been used as an issue by the ruling class to keep the lower classes from uniting effectively. Our ideal society would not contain a Hitler.

Nathan Rothschild, according to this picture, was somewhat of an idealist, using his money to end wars. Napoleon was refused a loan, even though he offered twice as much interest as the allies would offer. All through the ages, the Jews have been a peaceable race in this respect they are far ahead of most of us.

It occurs to us that is money can be used to stop wars, it can also be used to start them. By now, everyone should know that the World War was engineered by munition makers. But how many of us will remember this when the next murder-hysteria sweeps the country.

Sinclair and California

The daily funnypapers claim that if Sinclair is elected governor in California a great movement of capital will begin—out of the state. This may be true, but it is certain that a great influx of workers will occur—a great many more than California will be able to take care of. Sinclair's plan requires workers. It's a cinch that capitalists cannot carry "their" factories and natural resources out of the state. We figure that if anything happens, the moneymen will stay where they are and fight to the last ditch to retain their appropriative power.

The Liberal Digest

METHODISTS DENOUNCE CAPITALISTIC SYSTEM
—o—

Religious groups everywhere are attacking the inadequacy of our present economic system and promoting the Co-operative Democrecy. The following resolutions, passed by the Northern Minnesota Conference of the M. E. Church on Saturday, September 29, 1934, at Breckenridge, are the clearest indictment of the present order and indicate the necessity of the Farmer-Labor party program:

"We are nearing the end of five years of economic prostration. Into the inert form of our economic system the government has injected fifteen billions of dollars without reviving it. A few feeble flutterings of the pulse in response to this heavy stimulation are no assurance that the patient will carry on again and pay the doctor's bill. The best hope the doctors offer is a relapse every seven years or so. We are agreed with our presiding bishop that "An economic system that breaks down periodically with such appalling distress and disaster as we are witnessing everywhere about us must be fundamentally defective . . . . . to defend it is blindness; to continue it without change is folly." And we believe with the General Conference of 1932 that "the present industrial order is unchristian, unethical and anti-social.'

As ministers, calling from house to house and day by day, we have witnessed the tragic human wastage that has accompanied this collapse of the social structure. The unemployed father is not the same to his children. His constant presence around the house imperils domestic tranquility. The children of the unemployed become the victims of vice and crime. The unemployed themselves become unemployable in time, and our methods of public relief crush the last hope which has survived the despair of such times. We speak in a very special sense from the hearthsides of our country. Less than this we dare not say, . . . There must be a change in our economic structure more fundamental and far reaching than anything that has yet been proposed under the Nationel Recovery Act.

We believe that the production and distribution of thenecessities must be socialized, and that the government must assume responsibility for providing all the people with the chance to work at hopeful and remunerative employment. We see no point at which fundamental change can stop short of these two accomplishments.

First, as regards socialization of basic industries:

The root of our trouble is a chrronic inequity in our system of distribution. We have been trying to put the system back on its feet without curing the disease. We have attempted this by sabotaging production in the face of unsatisfied needs. More than twenty millions will be asking bread in this country this year, yet we will not deal with the cause, an unjust distribution of the fruits of human effort. The policy of destroying abundance to avoid rectifying a method of unequal distribution is revolting to the followers of Christ. We believe that every factory and every tillable piece of land sould be kept in production, and that the economic order should be held accountable for the distribution of the product. But we are convinced that no system depending upon the motive of private profit can or ever will provide such a distribution.

Second, as regards employment:

The individual can no longer choose the time or place or tools of his employment. Somebody must choose for him or create for him a reasonably range of choice. Industry has heretofore arrogated to itself the sole right to choose for him as the sovereign right of the employer. But industry is repudiating that responsibility for more than twelve million wokers. It has tossed them into the lap of demoralizing charity, at the hand of the government, without granting the governments a single field of hopeful employment for the great mass of them. We cite the case of the government's attempt to make shoes for the needy out of the hides of slaughtered cattle by employing idle workers in idle factories. This proposal met with such a storm of protest from business, which resents government entrance into any field of possible profit, that government has abandoned the effort and announced that the hides will remain in storage until some plan agreeable to all can be worked out. But not only has industry repudiated its responsibility for millions of workers, we believe it is incapable, under the present order, of discharging that reponsibility, should it undertake to.

There remains only government to provide the people work. But the goverment must provide a different kind of employment than it has heretofore offered. It must provide hopeful work which will stimulate an interest in living and reasonable expectations of advancement. Such meaningless labor as that offered under the C. W. A. and the F. E. R. A., a mere excuse for the receiving of the dole, can never create or maintain the self-respect of the worker. Work without a future is deadening and demoralizing. Our stand for the socialization of basic industries is grounded in part onthe need for providing creative constructive employment which has already been thrown to the government by our defaulting economic system.

We are calling attention to structural defects in the profit system. We are not abusing individuals who are themselves victims of an inexorable order of things. Neither are we offering any palliatives in the nature of temporary repairs. Many movements within the present order have our sympathetic support. We are glad to endorse the principle of unemployment, old age, sickness, and accident insurance, and to support any action leading to its adoption as progress in the desired direction. We sympathize with labor in its efforts to right, on its own behalf, the most glaring inequalities of our scheme of distribution, and we believe that to the extent that it succeeds it will remedy basic conditions. We also commend those employers and employees who are far-sighted enough t co-operate to this end. We seek a Christian order, based on principles of service and good will as the only secure foundation for co-operate living.

And we warn our preachers that we cannot retreat from the storm around us into some quiet fastness of the soul, where we can invite men to come apart with us and rest until it is over. The Cross has meaning in our times. We charge ourselves to seek the courage th t will enable us to follow Christ into those very situations which made him choose between the cross and betrayal of Himself and God.

Mother and Her Clubs
by
LAWRENCE HAWTHORNE

My mother's at the club today!
I don't know jus' which one;
But, anyhow, she's gone away
To have a lot o' fun!
She's got a dozen clubs, I guess,
An' every day or so
She's lookin' up some new address
Where she's supposed t' go!

When she's at home, she's busy, too—
She's always at the 'phone
Advisin' someone what t' do;
An' when she's left alone
She's writin' what the speaker said;
Or checkin' her accounts
T' find out why they're "in the red
In such absurd amounts."

Las' year my mother said that she
Was through for good an' all—
She simply wasn't goin' t' be
In any clubs that Fall!
But when she told 'em she was done,
An' all her friends got sore,
She kept her place in every one—
An' joined a couple more!

Hungarian Shepherd Dog Has Wavy, Silken Coat

The same inherent reasoning power that endows the herding dog with a superior type of canine intelligence also expresses itself in the Kuvasz, or White Hungarian Shepherd.

Through centuries and centuries of herding, writes an authority in the Los Angeles Times, his ancestors have imparted to offspring that highly developed mental process that has produced qualities now considered instinct.

By virtue of his heritage, the Kuvasz should prove worthy of the performance of duty required of any dog. Behind him is the ancestry of over a thousand years, according to research.

Like the closely related but more massive Great Pyrenees, with which he is often confused, he is cloaked with a deep ivory-white wavy silken coat. His splendid head is flanked with ivory or cream-tinged drop ears. But the Kuvasz is seldom over 28 inches in height, and his weight averages 70 pounds. -

His black eyes are more oblique and set closer together than those of the Pyrenees . . . his ears are rounder and more elevated and he is longer in the couplings. His black eyes, nose and lips form a pleasing contrast against his white background, making him one of the most beautiful of all dogs.

Famous Russian Library

The famous and magnificent state library at Leningrad which was founded in 1814 and early became one of the great treasure houses of the world has not lost much of its magnificence and value since the revolution. It still contains most of the valuable collections for which it was noted, including Voltaire's library, which was bought intact by Catherine II, many of the most celebrated copies of the Bible and the Koran, rare Hebrew manuscripts of the Pentateuch and the famous Codex Sinaiticus, which next to the one in the Vatican, is the oldest Greek manuscript in existence of the New Testament, having been found in an ancient monastery on Mount Sinai.

Spanish Language Came With Columbus' Outfit

The New world began to speak Spanish when Columbus colonized Hispaniola (the Island of Haiti). Long before the time of Jamestown and Plymouth, Spaniards were not only exploring and adventuring in this hemisphere, but diffusing their language and culture by planting permanent settlements, setting up printing presses, and founding universities. Spanish was a dominant language for our own Southwest less than a hundred years ago, asserts a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

Today in many Texas, New Mexico and Arizona communities near the Mexican border, Spanish is almost as necessary as English. Almost as many people of Mexican blood live in the states of the American side of our southern border as live in the Mexican states on the other side of it. Los Angeles is one of the largest Mexican populated cities in the world, with a Spanish speaking element larger than the entire population of Schenectady.

Indian words with first a Spanish, then an English twist in spelling also are part of our speech heritage from Spain. Potato and tomato, tobacco, mesquite, chocolate, quinine, henequin, maize, cannibal, canoe—these and other native terms the Spaniards took from Mexico, Peru, the Caribbean islands and elsewhere. They passed them on to us.

150 People Hear Tom Davis Make Plea for Election of Republican Candidates, Thurs.

Ole Segeng, republican candidate for congress from the ninth district, gave a campaign speech here Thursday night in which he charged the farmer-labor administration with an increase in taxes while the counties were reducing theirs. Mr. Segeng was merely used to fill time until the main speaker of the evening arrived, according to Mr. Quale, chairman of the Pennington Co. republicans.

By the time Tom Davis, who was advertised as the principal speaker of the evening, arrived there were approximately 150 people present of whom about one-fourth were Farmer-Laborites according to those who attended the meeting. The Pennington Co. Republican Committee hired the Red Lake Falls Municipal band to add color to the occasion while the American Legion Auxillary Drum Corps, from this city, was used in the city to stir up a crowd for the meeting.

Among the numerous statements made by Tom Davis was that there were no other Farmer-Laborites left since he deserted them and that he was the only true F-L in the whole state.

Those who heard him speak stated that, inasmuch that Tom Davis was well known to the voters of this section of the state, not much stock was put in his charges against the present administration.

150 People Hear Tom Davis Make Plea for Election of Republican Candidates, Thurs.

Ole Segeng, republican candidate for congress from the ninth district, gave a campaign speech here Thursday night in which he charged the farmer-labor administration with an increase in taxes while the counties were reducing theirs. Mr. Segeng was merely used to fill time until the main speaker of the evening arrived, according to Mr. Quale, chairman of the Pennington Co. republicans.

By the time Tom Davis, who was advertised as the principal speaker of the evening, arrived there were approximately 150 people present of whom about one-fourth were Farmer-Laborites according to those who attended the meeting. The Pennington Co. Republican Committee hired the Red Lake Falls Municipal band to add color to the occasion while the American Legion Auxillary Drum Corps, from this city, was used in the city to stir up a crowd for the meeting.

Among the numerous statements made by Tom Davis was that there were no other Farmer-Laborites left since he deserted them and that he was the only true F-L in the whole state.

Those who heard him speak stated that, inasmuch that Tom Davis was well known to the voters of this section of the state, not much stock was put in his charges against the present administration.

Advancing Market Will Assure Breeders Of Profit on Late Turkeys, Says Norby

The turkey outlook this fall is good, B. O. Norby of the Land O' Lakes plant here stated Wednesday. He warned the breeders against forcing their birds on the market too early, saying that proper conditioning will always be found to result in better prices and higher grades. The breeders in this territory are fortunate in having ample feed supplies to take care of their birds, he stated and later markets will be found favorable. This is due to the fact that acute feed shortages in other sections has forced the breeders there to market their birds early.

"We urge you to market only birds that are well feathered for the Thanksgiving pool. Remember that there is the Christmas and January pools still to come which will give you an opprtunity to hold you immature birds until they are ready for market, with assurance of a profitable return." Mr. Norby stated.

Success of your turkey enterprise depends upon the finished product," Mr. Norby continued "Breeders should adopt a feeding program, so that the time and money invested may bring a fair return." All feed should be in hoppers and there should be enough hoppers to allow all the turkeys to feed at the same time. A mash feed should be kept before them and if you have not already started such a feed, the following formula is a good one to use:

Equal parts of: ground corn, ground oats, middlings, meat scraps bran, 4½ percent bonemeal and 1 percent salt.

The hoppers should be so constructed that the turkeys can get into them but must feed thru openings in the side.

The first thing to consider when making selections for market is the weight of each bird. Toms should weight 16 pounds each, hens 12 pounds each in order to have a fair chance of grading number one.

All whole grain should be taken from the marketing pens at least 48 hours and all feeds 24 hours before the killing. It is necessary that the crop is empty or the bird will grade number two. The birds should be provided with an ample water supply.

If these precautions are taken and only mature birds are marketed the breeders should be able to eliminate to a great extent the grade two birds, Mr. Norby stated.

EMERGENCY ED. PROGRAM IS INAUGURATED

Individual Correspondence Courses Are Furnished at Nominal Prices

The offer of some special federal relief through the state of the E. E. P. (Emergency Education Program) makes it possible for the University of Minnesota, through its General Extension Division, to provide an additional plan of emergency education for University credit. These courses will be included in the Adult Education program for the Thief River Falls this Winter, if there is sufficient interest in the plan.

The new plan is to provide individual Correspondence Study instruction in certain college subjects at a greatly reduced cost. The state office of the E. E. P. will assume the cost of reading and grading the lesson papers and the money saved thereby will be applied to reducing the cost of the course. This reduction will amount to forty-two cents for each lesson of each course. The E. E. P. also offers to provide competent supervisor locally to see that the lessons are prepared and sent in on regular schedule. The approved lesson renders will be on duty at the University.

Registration will be made with Correspondence Study Department of the General Extension Division under the following regulations:

1. Registration: Students will register as individuals. Anyone interested should see Supt. Morris Bye November 10.
2. Persons Eligible: Unemployed high school graduates and adults whose primary purpose is to work for University credit.
3. Subjects Available: Basic freshman and sophomore subjects.
    - a. composition IV, V, VI.
    - b. Freshman Literature 1, 2, 3
    - c. Modern World History 1 and 2
    - d. Principles of Economics 1, 2
    - e. Higher Algebra
    - f. General Psychology 1 and 2

    Other subjects may be offered by special arrangement.
4. Size of Classes: Ten or more individuals.
5. Schedule of lessons: If a student devotes full time to this form of study and desires to an amount of work equivalent to full time residence, it will be necesary for him to submit at least six lessons per week. (A normal program is 15 hours, completed in 12 weeks; it takes 81 correspondence lessons to cover this work.) There lessons should be divided among several courses which carry a total of approximately 15 credits. Students who do not devote full time to study will submit a proportionately smaller number of lessons. It will be the function of the supervisor to see that a regular program is maintained by each student.
6. Examination: The regular course examination will be given and without additional supervisory cost.
7. Textbooks: The students or the school system will be required to furnish textbooks and supplies.
8. Cost: A three credit subject would cost the student $3.28, and a five-credit subject would cost him $5.66.
9. Time Limit for Decision on the Plan: Saturday, November 10, 1934.

River Level Raised Nearly 2 1-2 Feet In Month by CCC Clean-up of Bottom

One of the many benefits derived from the CCC boys has been shown to the people of this community by the work done by them for this city.

A group of these workers were brought in to clean up the river along the sides of the new bridge in order to put it in shape for a floral park next spring. This work wauld have cost the city a large sum if they were to have undertaken this work themselves but as it was done it has saved the city this item of expense.

Another fine job accomplished by this group is that of raising of the water level. It was not accomplished, as many people believe, by the opening of the dam at Red Lake altho this had something to do with it. The main thing keeping the water level too low was the condition of the river bottom between here and Red Lake. It was revealed today, from Mr. Frisbie's, office that in some places the bottom of the river was nearly on the same level as that of the top of the dam in Thief River Falls. This was the principal reason why the water level would not come up immediatly after the dam at Red Lake outlet was opened, according to the report.

The slough that used to exist as a breeding place for mosquitoes at Tindolph Park was also cleaned up this fall by the boys from the CCC camp, and the whole appearance of the place has been changed due to the efforts of this group. All the rocks and debrii which was found on the bottom of the swimming pool was piled up along the shore and will be disposed of next spring.

HIGHWAY DEPT. ASKED TO AID PARKWAY BLDG

City Park Board Meets With Council to Discuss Park Plan

At the regular meeting of the city council last Tuesday evening a resolution was adopted which asked the Minnesota Highway Department to condemn the property lying on both sides of the approach to the new bridge and on both sides of the river so that enough land could be had to claim a 100-foot right-of-way. It was further asked that the road on the west side of the river be paved up as far as the Soo Line tracks in two lanes each 20 ft. wide a parkway to be constructed between the two lanes which will be 20 ft. across. This resolution is to be sent along with a similar one made out and passed by the park board of the city.

An application for a building permit was read and laid on the table for further investigation. The applicant, W. E. Dahl, asked to remodel a boxcar at an approximate cost of $150; but, because of complaints made by neighbors, the application was not granted and will not be unless the structure is moved to the back of the lot according to E. Griebstein and other members of the council.

The mayor offered the following suggestions to the council. The first one had to do with a complaint from the Land O' Lakes about smoke and soot coming from the deisel engines' exhaust which is blackening the new building put up by the company last summer.

The City Council passed a resolu- instructing the city engineer to determine the cost of correcting the difficulty. The mayor further asked that the council consider the establishing of a Water and Light Commission for the purpose of putting the department on a more business basis; and to crate a sinking fund from the earnings of the light plant to purchase new equipment which was sure to be needed by next summer if the water level did not come up materially.

Te City Council pased a resolution inviting District Judge M. A.

Advancing Market Will Assure Breeders Of Profit on Late Turkeys, Says Norby

The turkey outlook this fall is good, B. O. Norby of the Land O' Lakes plant here stated Wednesday. He warned the breeders against forcing their birds on the market too early, saying that proper conditioning will always be found to result in better prices and higher grades. The breeders in this territory are fortunate in having ample feed supplies to take care of their birds, he stated and later markets will be found favorable. This is due to the fact that acute feed shortages in other sections has forced the breeders there to market their birds early.

"We urge you to market only birds that are well feathered for the Thanksgiving pool. Remember that there is the Christmas and January pools still to come which will give you an opprtunity to hold you immature birds until they are ready for market, with assurance of a profitable return." Mr. Norby stated.

Success of your turkey enterprise depends upon the finished product," Mr. Norby continued "Breeders should adopt a feeding program, so that the time and money invested may bring a fair return." All feed should be in hoppers and there should be enough hoppers to allow all the turkeys to feed at the same time. A mash feed should be kept before them and if you have not already started such a feed, the following formula is a good one to use:

Equal parts of: ground corn, ground oats, middlings, meat scraps bran, 4½ percent bonemeal and 1 percent salt.

The hoppers should be so constructed that the turkeys can get into them but must feed thru openings in the side.

The first thing to consider when making selections for market is the weight of each bird. Toms should weight 16 pounds each, hens 12 pounds each in order to have a fair chance of grading number one.

All whole grain should be taken from the marketing pens at least 48 hours and all feeds 24 hours before the killing. It is necessary that the crop is empty or the bird will grade number two. The birds should be provided with an ample water supply.

If these precautions are taken and only mature birds are marketed the breeders should be able to eliminate to a great extent the grade two birds, Mr. Norby stated.

EMERGENCY ED. PROGRAM IS INAUGURATED

Individ u a l Correspondence Courses Are Furnished at Nominal Prices

The offer of some special federal relief through the state of the E. E. P. (Emergency Education Program) makes it possible for the University of Minnesota, through its General Extension Division, to provide an additional plan of emergency education for University credit. These courses will be included in the Adult Education program for the Thief River Falls this Winter, if there is sufficient interest in the plan.

The new plan is to provide individual Correspondence Study instruction in certain college subjects at a greatly reduced cost. The state office of the E. E. P. will assume the cost of reading and grading the lesson papers and the money saved thereby will be applied to reducing the cost of the course. This reduction will amount to forty-two cents for each lesson of each course. The E. E. P. also offers to provide competent supervisor locally to see that the lessons are prepared and sent in on regular schedule. The approved lesson renders will be on duty at the University.

Registration will be made with Correspondence Study Department of the General Extension Division under the following regulations:

1. Registration: Students will register as individuals. Anyone interested should see Supt. Morris Bye November 10.
2. Persons Eligible: Unemployed high school graduates and adults whose primary purpose is to work for Unversity credit.
3. Subjects Available: Basic freshman and sophomore subjects.
   a. composition IV, V, VI.
   b. Freshman Literature 1, 2, 3
   c. Modern World History 1 and 2
   d. Principles of Economics 1, 2
   e. Higher Algebra
   f. General Psychology 1 and 2

   Other subjects may be offered by special arrangement.
4. Size of Classes: Ten or more individuals.
5. Schedule of lessons: If a student devotes full time to this form of study and desires to an amount of work equivalent to full time residence, it will be necesary for him to submit at least six lessons per week. (A normal program is 15 hours, completed in 12 weeks; it takes 81 correspondence lessons to cover this work.) There lessons should be divided among several courses which carry a total of approximately 15 credits. Students who do not devote full time to study will submit a proportionately smaller number of lessons. It will be the function of the supervisor to see that a regular program is maintained by each student.
6. Examination: The regular course examination will be given and without additional supervisory cost.
7. Textbooks: The students or the school system will be required to furnish textbooks and supplies.
8. Cost: A three credit subject would cost the student $3.28, and a five-credit subject would cost him $5.66.
9. Time Limit for Decision on the Plan: Saturday, November 10, 1934.

BUCKLER WINS CONGRESS RACE WITH BIG LEAD

Veteran Polk County Legislators Total Vote Given At 41,324

Crookston, Minn.—Senator Richard Thompson Buckler, Andover township farmer of Polk county, was elected U. S. Representative in Congress by a margin of 14,277 votes over Ole Sageng, Republican, of Dalton and 16,398 votes over Martin Brandon, Democrat of Fergus Falls, according to complete unofficial returns from the 618 precincts of the 15 counties of the 9th congressional district. The final tabulation of votes gave Buckler 41,324; Sageng 27,047; Brandon 24,936.

The Farmer-Laborite carried 12 counties of the 15 by margins ranging from 362 in Lake of the Woods to 4655 in Polk, his home count. Brandon was the winner in two small counties, Wilken and Red Lake, while Sageng carried his home county of Otter Tail by 2,566 votes over Brandon, who also resides in Otter Tail. Brandon nosed out Buckler by only 88 vates in Otter Tail county and Buckler beat Brandon by 4,655 votes in Polk county, Buckler's home. Sageng trailed Brandon by 115 votes and lost to Buckler by 4770 votes in Polk county.

River Level Raised Nearly 2 1-2 Feet In Month by CCC Clean-up of Bottom

One of the many benefits derived from the CCC boys has been shown to the people of this community by the work done by them for this city.

A group of these workers were brought in to clean up the river along the sides of the new bridge in order to put it in shape for a floral park next spring. This work wauld have cost the city a large sum if they were to have undertaken this work themselves but as it was done it has saved the city this item of expense.

Another fine job accomplished by this group is that of raising of the water level. It was not accomplished, as many people believe, by the opening of the dam at Red Lake altho this had something to do with it. The main thing keeping the water level too low was the condition of the river bottom between here and Red Lake. It was revealed today, from Mr. Frisbie's, office that in some places the bottom of the river was nearly on the same level as that of the top of the dam in Thief River Falls. This was the principal reason why the water level would not come up immediatly after the dam at Red Lake outlet was opened, according to the report.

The slough that used to exist as a breeding place for mosquitoes at Tindolph Park was also cleaned up this fall by the boys from the CCC camp, and the whole appearance of the place has been changed due to the efforts of this group. All the rocks and debrii which was found on the bottom of the swimming pool was piled up along the shore and will be disposed of next spring.

HIGHWAY DEPT. ASKED TO AID PARKWAY BLDG

City Park Board Meets With Council to Discuss Park Plan

At the regular meeting of the city council last Tuesday evening a resolution was adopted which asked the Minnesota Highway Department to condemn the property lying on both sides of the approach to the new bridge and on both sides of the river so that enough land could be had to claim a 100-foot right-of-way. It was further asked that the road on the west side of the river be paved up as far as the Soo Line tracks in two lanes each 20 ft. wide a parkway to be constructed between the two lanes which will be 20 ft. across. This resolution is to be sent along with a similar one made out and passed by the park board of the city.

An application for a building permit was read and laid on the table for further investigation. The applicant, W. E. Dahl, asked to remodel a boxcar at an approximate cost of $150; but, because of complaints made by neighbors, the application was not granted and will not be unless the structure is moved to the back of the lot according to E. Griebstein and other members of the council.

The mayor offered the following suggestions to the council. The first one had to do with a complaint from the Land O' Lakes about smoke and soot coming from the deisel engines' exhaust which is blackening the new building put up by the company last summer.

The City Council passed a resolution instructing the city engineer to determine the cost of correcting the difficulty. The mayor further asked that the council consider the establishing of a Water and Light Commission for the purpose of putting the department on a more business basis; and to crate a sinking fund from the earnings of the light plant to purchase new equipment which was sure to be needed by next summer if the water level did not come up materially.

Te City Council pased a resolution inviting District Judge M. A.

H.S. CHORUS WILL PRESENT OPERETTA FRI.

"In Old St. Louis" Directed By Irma Springen

Under the direction of Miss Erma Springen, the Lincoln High School chorus including a cast of 80 will present "In Old St. Louis," an operetta in three acts by Mc Laughlin and Breitenbach on Friday, November 23 at the municipal auditorium.

The operetta tells the story of Manuel Da Liza, wealthy French fur trader of St. Louis, who promises his daughter's hand to his partner, Chas. Sanguinet. Meanwhile, the daughter, Donna, has fallen in love with Capt. Rogers Clark, a young American officer. Thereupon, DaLiza, who is embittered against all Americans because he believes they have usurped the French fur trade, is so enraged that he challenges Clark to a duel.

An island in the Mississippi is chosen as the dueling place and there, after DaLiza's shot has gone wild, Clark by magnanimously firing into the air to avoid killing Donna's father, further embitters DaLiza.

How Donna is captured by pirates and rescued by her lover and how the young man in the end wins the girl's father's good will is beautifully told in the unwinding of the plot.

Members of the production staff include, Miss Erma Springen, music; Arnold Carlson, dramatics; Miss Marion Pierson, dances; Clarence Pope, James Koenker, Arnold Carlson, and J. Arthur Johnson are in charge of the scenery; Misses Ruth Fletcher, Alva Dixon, Harriet Lamson and Inez Lunder are in charge of costumes; Miss Manie Wise and Kendall Gustafson, tickets; Miss Adele Holmstrom, pompter; Walter Kinghorn, electrician; and Miss Helen Granum, accompanist.

Lighting Equipment Important in Retail Trade as Days Grow Shorter

Proper lighting equipment is becoming a factor of increasing importance as the days grow shorter and darker. Merchants anxious to increase their sales this fall and winter, may find it both timely and profitable to make a survey of their business properties from the standpoint of modernizing their lighting facilities, when reconditioning under the Better Housing Program.

Progressive business men have recognized that investment in scientifically correct lighting equipment frequently pays for itself many times over. It is a trade axiom that merchandise properly displayed sells more readily—and lighting is a vital point in proper display. Ligt experts qualified to give intelligent, scientific advice on commercial illumination should be consulted for suggestions.

In preparing the general lighting plans for the store, volume of light is not the only consideration. There can be too much light as well as too little, glare being a common defect. Consideration also should be given to the quality of light. It is possible for a brilliantly lighted room to appear cold and repellant, instead of warm and friendly.

The condition of illumination in a retail establishment has its effect on the store personnel as well as on the customers. The depressing atmosphere of a dark store, or the eyestrain of glaring lights may have adverse effects upon the disposition and the selling efficiency of the sales force. Installation of indirect illumination is now practical for most business properties. Its proper use can heighten the "quality" atmosphere of the establishment.

Modern show-case and counter lighting can add greatly to the effectiveness of merchandise displays. Concealed lighting should be substituted for showcase lights which are visible to the customer.

Show windows deserve special attention, and the carefully planned, well executed treatment is the one which will please the customer and increase trade.

URGES ADDED CAUTION IN BIG GAME HUNTING

Big game hunters in northern Minnesota are urged by Erling Swenson, director of the division of Game and Fish, to exercise added caution because of the thousands of young men engaged in Emergency Conservation Work in sections of the State that are open to deer hunting this fall. Carelessness in the use of high-powered firearms may mean the death of some Civilian Conservation Corps worker, Director Swenson warned.

Minnesota's foresters will cooperate in the campaign to decrease the number of big game hunting fatalities, according to Grover Conzet, state forester. Forest workers will be stationed at entrances and exits to forest areas where work is going on and hunters will be asked to exercise extreme care to avoid injury to the men at work, he said.

"Work areas will be posted and all roads leading to camp sites will carry caution signs," Mr. Conzet said. "Men in the various camps are being informed of the dangers during the big game hunting season and will be kept in groups as much as possible until the season closes.

"We urge hunters to be careful with fire in the wowods. Continued dry weather and lack of snow combined with the increased number of men in the woods greatly increases the fire hazard."

A few "Don'ts" listed by Mr. Swenson should be considered by every big game hunter.

"Don't drag a loaded gun, muzzle first, through a fence, out of a boat, or from an automobile."

"Don't lean, your loaded gun against a tree."

"Don't lay a loaded gun down in the bottom of a boat and then pick it up in excitement."

"Don't jump ditches with your gun swinging or walk in deep snow with the barrel pointed downward.'

"Don't shoot until you are sure that everything is clear in the line of fire."

"Don't shoot at every movement or patch of color in the undergrowth."

"Don't walk behind your hunting campanion with a loaded gun pointing at the small of his back and don't walk in front of anyone who habitually shows careless consideration for the safety of others."

"Don't ever point a gun at anything that you don't want to kill."

Highway Department Buys Snow Fence For New Trunk Routes

In preparation for winter operations on roads recently added to the trunk system, the state highway department has purchased 1,420,000 feet of snow fence and 150,000 steel posts, says a department bulletin. This will replace county owned snow fence which was used last winter on the new roads and will permit the counties to employ their fences on their own roads.

The cost of the new fencing and posts was approximately $130,00. The highway department this winter will have nearly 1,000 miles of snow fence on the 11,300 miles of state roads. Most of this has already been erected.

In plowing snow off the highways, the department will follow the plan of giving first service to the most heavily traveled trunks, and working on the less important roads after the others have been opened.

Wild Ducks May Be Retained To Nov. 21

With Minnesota's open season on wild ducks closing Sunday November 11, at sunset, hunters are warned that ducks cannot be kept in possession in this state after November 21. This federal ruling was pointed out by Erling Swenson, director of the division of Game and Fish, Federal regulations supersede state laws governing wild life, he said.

"Hunters may retain game for only five days after the close of the open season unless tagged by the director of the Game and Fish division or an authorized agents," Mr. Swenson said. "Federal regulations state that wild ducks may be retained only ten days following the close of the season. Upland game birds, properly tagged, may be retained until January 10."

NOVEMBER BUDGET THE OCTOBER FIGURE

Minnesota's allowance for November from the FERA is $3,371,500 or $160,500 more than the October allotment, announces L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator SERA. These funds are grouped in three main classifications: General $2,600,000; drouth relief 650,000; transient relief $121,500.

1,000 Youngsters in SERA Nursery Schools

Emergency nursery schools in the state now number 36, with more than 1,000 children enrolled to Dr. Herbert Sorenson, director of emergency education, Minnesota SERA. The set-up was establisred recently in the Minneapolis transient family home.

The federal government pays for the upkeep, while the SERA handles all administrative matters. Mrs. J. R. Parkes, Minneapolis, is chief supervisor. "Youngsters between two and five years of age are protected by all the safeguards known to modern science in dieting medical care and sanitation," Dr Sorenson said.

In the whole country, 50,000 children attend 2,300 schools of this kind. They give employment to 5,000 people. The national cost, to June 1st, totaled $1,000,000, Mrs. Parkes stated.

Supervisors, teachers and nurses of the SERA nursery schools have been invited to a conference November 2 in the Electrical engineering building, University of Minnesota. On the day preceding the conference, visitors may study the University Institute of Child Welfare, and also inspect the Neighborhood House emergency nursery school, 229 E. Indana Ave., St. Paul.

Addresses will be given by Gunderson Rockwell, state commissioner of education, and the following instructors from the University of Minnesota: Mrs. Josephine C. Foster, principal of its nursery school and kindergarten; Marion L. Mattson, teacher at the Institute of Child Welfare, and Mrs. Pearl S. Cummings, instructor in parent education.

Minnesota's 36 emergency nursery units are located in the following units are located in the following cities: Alexandria, Bird Island, Biwabik, Brooten, Chisholm, Coleraine, Duluth, Eveleth, Faribault, Gilbert, Glenwood, Granite Falls, Litchfield, Little Falls, Minneapolis, Ortonville, Proctor, Redwood Fals, Renville, Staples, St. Paul, Tracy, Virginia, Winthrop and Winona. The Faribault unit is attached to the school for blind children.

Administrative Cost of Minnesota Relief is Low

The cost of administering public aid in Minnesota through the SERA is less than the national average for the states, declares T. J. Edmonds, regional representative for the FERA.

"Funds are being expended economically," he said, "and a trained personnel renders efficient service."

SERA administrative expense in Minnesota, according to L. P. Zimmerman, acting admistrator, can not be compared with the corresponding cost in a state like North Dakota, because distribution of population differs in the two states. More than one-third of Minnesota's relief cases are in cities, whereas the population in North Dakota is predominently rural. Zimmerman pointed out that the cost of administering relief in urban areas is considerably higher than in rural communities.

"Delenda est Carthago"

When Carthage was such a menace to Rome, Cato the Elder concluded every speech he made in the senate with the words "Delenda est Carthago." Literally, they mean "Carthage must be destroyed." A liberal translation is, "That which stands in the way of our greatness must be removed at all hazards."

WARBA POTATO TO BE DISTRUBITED IN 1935 FOR SPRING PLANTING

A large number of potato growers were disappointed last spring in not being able to secure seed lots of the new Minnesota potato seedling named Warba. Seed stocks of this variety have been very limited and it will require probably two more years to get the stock in sufficient volume to meet the needs of Minnesota growers. The first distribution made of this variety consisted of 4 pound lots sets to certified seed growers for planting in 1932. Warba growers have increased their seed stock from the original 4 lb. lot until now many may have an acre or nore this year. This acreage should produce seed in volume in 1935, according to T. M. McCall, horticulturist, the Northwest station has approximately two acres of Warbas this year, seed of which will be distributed for 1935 planting.

The Warba potato is a hybrid producted by Dr. F. Krantz, veteran potato breeder of the Department of Horticulture, Minnesota Experiment station. The Warba was produced from a cross of a seedling and Bliss Triumph. The Warba is very similar in tuber type to the Irish Cobbler; it matures however, in from 10 to 14 days less time than Coblers. The vine is upright and sturdy, apparently resistent to mosaic, sets a heavy crop of round, blocky, white tubers with pink eyes. The tubers run very uniform in size, but to make their maximum development should be grown in fertile soil.

EGGS

"This is the time to clean and repair the laying house for maximum winter egg production from the spring pullets," states A. M. Pilkey, Northwest School and Staiton poultryman. According to A. M. Pilkey, the entire household be thoroly cleaned and disinfected. the first step is to remove all the litter from the floors and nests. Then with a sharp spade or hoe clean all surfaces including the dropping boards. The roosts should be placed on dropping boards and thoroly soaked with discarded cyliner oil or some special preparation to protect the birds from mites.

Timely repairs to the poultry plant may include improved ventilation or insulation, or needed repairs to nests, dropping boards, drinking stands, windows, feed hopper space for each five birds. He also suggests placing the drinking pans on a platform six inches wider the pan, and about 18 inches above the floor. Mr. Pilkey urges poultry producers to prepare the laying for the new layers as early as possible to avoid disturbance after the pullets have entered the period of heavy production.

Surplus Commodities Given To Minnesota

Several trainloads of foodstuffs and materials for sheets and towels have been given the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration) by the Federal Surplus Relief corporation for distribution to needy families, it is announced by F. A. Gilbert, director of commodity distribution.

The provisions, totaling 59 carloads, are intended as extra allowances to the needy during the period November through February Bulk weights of the supplies are in pounds: rice, 880,000; butter, 325,000; sugar, 300,000 and American cheese, 147,000. Women relief clients will transform the textile material into more than a million towels and over 15,000 sheets, also for distribution, wherever needed.

W. C. U. To Consider New 5-Year Plan

Cleveland, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A five year plan—"which will not be confused with the Soviets"—will be introduced at the first session of the national Women's Christian Temperance union convention Saturday by Mrs. Ida B. Smith, national president.

The program covers deepening the spiritual life, alcohol education and a campaign for character building, citizenship and peace.

Commenting Friday on Repeal, Mrs. Smith of Evanston, Ill., compared the drinking woman with a sheep. "They are mostly idle women," she said, "following what they consider a social trend, seeking new sensations."

Women drink in public, she added, "because of the social implications. They have been schooled by extensive advertisements saying "It is smart to be legal."

She also expressed revret that "the nation's official home should not hold the highest standard of idealism—the thing that has made our nation great." She referred to press dispatches saying Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt would serve wine at dinner.

"Wine is not a necessary adjunct to social graces," commented Mrs Smith.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS SWAMPED WITH WAR PROPAGANDA; MANUEL

Berlin (TIS)—A new manuel on military education, sponsored by the Hitler government, has beeh published in Berlin and is distributed in large quantities among the university students. It offers interesting proof of the open violation of the Versailles treaty by Nazi Germany, especially in regard to the military training of the German youth.

The books whose author prefers to remain anonymous, contains five main chapters. They are: German army; Military and arms specifications; problems of military mechanization; Importance of communications on land and sea; national defense and protection of frontiers. The foreword states explicitly that the writer was ordered by to youth about the German warrior and the German war spirit."

CATHOLIC YOUTH LEADER IS ACCUSED OF TREASON

Dusseldorf (TIS)—While tens of thousands of young Catholics demonstrated in nearby Cologne for the Catholic Church and proved once again that the Nazi propaganda of German youth united behind the Nazi banners is a myth it became known here that the secret polcie has issued a warrant, for the arrest of the Rhenanian district leader, Ballhorn, of the "Deutsche Jugend-Kraft" German Youth Force). The "Deutsche Jugend Kraft" is the only one Catholic youth organization recognized by the Nazis. Ballhorn is accused of high treason, which spells his death in Nazi Germany.

MARAUDERS PREY ON CATTLE HERDS IN NORTHERN MINN.

About 200 head are reported missing. Some animals have found in the woods killed by gunshot and partly butchered; others have been offered for sale in market places, and still others have appeared on farms. Investigators from the SERA are tracing down the perpetrators of these crimes and preparing evidence for active prosecution of the guility parties.

A Bushel of Wheat

The Department of Agriculture says that out of a bushel of wheat that usually weighs 60 pounds can be made 42 pounds of flour, 9 3-5 pounds of bran and 8 2-5 pounds of shorts. However, in the milling of wheat atmospheric conditions are largely concerned and in some cases diminish or increase the amount of the various ingredients

The original fireless cooker was the one used by the Continental woman who put partly cooked meat or stew into a large pan and buried it between two feather beds so that the heat might not radiate.

Three Kindred Materials: Diamonds, Graphite, Coal

There is a strange and secret kinship between diamonds and graphite (used in lead pencils) and ordinary coal, declares a writer in the Washington Star.

All three may possibly have a common ancestry, though they come to very different ends. If you go back far enough you may trace the lineage of graphite and coal to those ancient trees which were cooked and changed by the pressure of hundreds of thousands of tons of rock. And whether or not diamonds are also products of tons of an ancient chemistry, they, like graphite and coal, are pure carbon.

Just why the tremendous pressure changed some of these ancient plants into hard and brilliant diamonds, others into common black coal, and still others into a soft dark gray mineral admirably suited for writing, no one knows.

Graphite is much lighter than lead, with which it is ordinarily confused because both may easily be used for writing. But pure graphite is much too soft to be used in lead pencils unless it is first hardened by being mixed with powdered coal.

Unlike coal and diamonds, graphite is a form of carbon which does not easily burn, and when it is mixed with clay it is used in making dishes and bowls which are heat-resisting. Its two other chief uses are in lubricants and paints.

The so-called "lead" in a lead pencil is much more nearly related, chemically, to the wood that encases it, than to the metal by whose name it is so often mistakenly called. Like the wood that holds it, graphite is a plant material, though the centuries of rock pressure have changed its form beyond easy recognition.

1,000 Indian Tribes in Country Ahead of Whites

It is estimated that there were upwards of 1,000 Indian tribes at the time of the discovery of America, and the number of Indians has been estimated at more than a million.

The land lying both north and south of the Great Lakes, from the Mississippi to the Atlantic, was inhabited by the Algonquins, including the Delawares and the Mohicans. The Iroquois, comprising the six nations of Mohawks, Oneidas, Cayugas, Senecas, Onondagas and Tuscaroras, inhabited what is now New York state and southern Ontario. South of the Algonquins, from the Carolinas to Texas and Arkansas, were the Creeks, Choctaws, Cherokees and Seminoles.

The Indians of the great plains included the Crees, Chippewas and Ojibwas in the Northeast, the Omahas and Wichitas in the East and the Sioux, Assiniboins and Dakotahs in the Center. Among the Pueblo Indians of the Southwest were the Apaches and Navajos.

The California Indians or Diggers included the Washos, Yumans and Maidu. In the Northwest and British Columbia were the Bannocks, Snakes and Flatheads. In the North Pacific area were the Bellacoolas and Chinooks.—Detroit News.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE DESTRUCTIØN OF AMERICAN INSTITUTIØNS

Although the opposition made much ado about "Communism" "Socialism" and the "Destruction of American institutions" which they averred to be the intent and purpose of the Farmer-Labor party in the campaign just closed, it is very apparent that the voters took little stock in these bugaboo charges, as the endorsement received by Governor Olson testifies.

And yet, little credence as the voters gave the false charge, we doubt very much if many of them stopped to analyze the charge, or the Farmer-Lobar platform with the idea of knowing the facts. Most voters called it just political hooey and let it go at that. But if it is true that the Farmer-Labor party aims to overthrow American institutions and establish some other form of government, then every American citizen should know it. If on the other hand, the Farmer-Labor movement aims to protect and extend the benefits of American institutions, as the Farmer-Laborites claim, then every citizen also owes it to himself and to posterity to know it and to aid in the consumation of that purpose.

It will probably be agreed that the crux of the argument hinges on the demand of the the Farmer-Labor party for a change in the economic system, from the Capitalistic to that of the Cooperative Democracy. The opposition claims that this would entail a change in our government, to what they rather loosely call a "Sovietized state". This, in spite of the fact that the Russian system from whence the term is derived is a dictatorship where only one party has political recognition, while the Farmer-Labor party has always stood for extending and not curtailing the principles of democracy.

The Farmer-Laborites claim that a change in our economic system is necessary in order to protect our American form of government from the encroachments of predatory wealth, the eventual overthrow of American democratic government, and the establishment of a Fascist Dictatorship. Let us compare the conditions under which our American government was founded with the conditions under which we live today.

At the time of Washington and Jefferson, there were no great cities, there were no factories, no railroads, no radios, no automobiles, no great steamship lines, no nationwide banking institutions, no electric power. There were no telephones, no telegraph, no paved highways. There were no Chambers of Commerce, no stock markets. The corporation as we know it today, was unknown.

America then was a primeval forest and broad undulating meadowland inhabited only by Indians and wild animals. The United States were scattered settlements clustering along the water courses and the Atlantic coast.The few cities were mainly trading points, with well kept and prosperous rural communities thinning out to backwoods cabins, and finally dwindling away into the jungle as one receded from the settlements.

The merchants and artisans in the cities owned their own shops and their own tools of production. The farmer produced almost everything that he and his family required right on his own land and in his own home. Mass production was unknown. Tenantry was practically unknown, and was a matter of choice and not of necessity. Wealth lent prestige, but not necessarily political power. Jefferson's philosophy, that the least possible government is the best government, applied, because the demands on government was limited to that of protecting life and property against actual marauders. Inasmuch as the demands on government was small, so was the service rendered by government small. Consequently the demands of government in the matter of taxes were small.

Such then, was the setting under which the Founding Fathers established our American Democracy. Patterned much after the ancient Greek and Roman Communals, it was an innovation in the modern world. An ideal government for freemen to live under, and would be the ideal today if we can duplicate the conditions of that time. That does not mean that we should return to the oxcart and the candle light, but it does mean we must remove the economic forces, absent at that time, which today coerce men.

During these one hundred-fifty years, the wilderness hass been conquered. Marvelous inventions have annihilated time and space. Nature has been harnessed to do the biddings of man. Hitherto unknown resources lying dormant in the earth have been uncovered and brought forth to serve humanity with necessities and luxuries undreamed of just a few decades ago. Great industries have grown up upon which the people have become dependent for the necessities of life, serving the people for a profit and only while that profit exists. Great wealth and power has been concentrated in the hands of a few men who by virtue of this power can successfully dictate to, or defy if they choose, the government. They hold the health, the wealth, the happiness; yes the very lives of the rest of the people in the hollow of their hands, to extend or to withhold, as their fickle whim may dictate.

In self defense, the people, thru their government, have created commissions, boards, departments, bureaus, and divisions in a multitudinous array of agencies designed to cope with the ever growing powers of private capital. Each such agency adds to the opportunities for graft and every one of them, being in the main non-productive, add to the cost of government. The result of this marathon between the holders of private capital and the people who must control it or perish, has been the creation of a government, so topheavy that it is almost ready to crumble of its own weight; so diverse in its powers and duties that it is no longer possible for the average citizen to acquaint himself with the issues, or to pass judgment with any degree of understanding after having assimilated all that he can of both sides of the various points at issue.

In its quest for special privileges, private capital has surrounded the government with hordes of highly paid lobbyists and professional politicians who corrupt government, bribe officials and thru prostituted publicity channels, distorts the truth until government has well-nigh become a farce and democracy a horrible, murderous travesty.

All this has come about because industries are organized and operated for private profit and not primarily for service. Cooperative enterprises wield no evil, corupting influence on government. Cooperative organization operated for public service need no policeman over it with a club to protect the public. Stockyards operated by the producers instead of by profiteers would require no federal and state inspectors to force compliance with sanitation precautions and disease prevention. Railroads operated for public service would require no governmental bureaus to enforce safety rules and protect the public against excessive rates.

Therefore, Farmer-Laborites say, let us eliminate the profit motive which dominates industry; let us have government ownership, or public ownership, or collective, (it matters little where the title is vested) and democratic control of industries or other agencies upon which the people must depeend for existence; let us have the Cooperative Democracy and we can retain our American institutions and return to the government of Jefferson and live as the Founding Fathers dreamed we should live when they established our democracy; in peace, security comfort and plenty; every citizen a sovereign; equals in opportunity; equals before the law; and each will rise according to his talent and his industry.

CRAZY QUILT FINANCE
(Plain Talk Magazine)

The Progressive Party Congressional Bloc, with headquarters in Washington, gives us some pertinent facts regarding government loans to various classes of people.

In fact, the bloc goes so far as to put these figures on the outside of their envelopes so that mail-carriers and postmasters who have a penchant for reading post cards will have a real subject to talk about.

The United States government lends $1,000 to a HOME OWNER for a year at $60.00.

The United States government lends $1,000 to a FARMER for a year for $45.00.

The United States government lends $1,000 to the HOUSE OF MORGAN and the ROOSEVELT STEAMSHIP LINES for a year for $5.00; and then pays $800,000 for a $15,000 job of "carrying the mail".

The United States government lends $1,000 for a year to an international or Federal Reserve BANKER for 30 cents; and permits this banker to milk the Federal Treasury for 9,538 percent interest on this money.

Such a situation is astounding even to callous newspapermen, used to seeing the ultra wealthy given every special privilege they ask from the United States government. The question naturally arises as to why a farmer or a home owner isn't as good (in the eyes of their government) as a banker or an ocean mail grafter.

We can ask this question until the cows come home and never expect an answer. Wall Street's answer to questions of this sort is to keep discreetly quiet. The answer of the average Congressman who will stand for this is to change the subject and emit a lot of political hokum which will impress only the worst nitwits in his district.

If there is an answer to this paradox whether it comes from Wall Street, N. Y., or Greasy Corners, Iowa, from Walla Walla, Washington, or rural Retreat, N. C., we want it. What have you to offer?

MILK PRECIOUS ON RELIEF LINES
(Minneapolis Labor Review)

Women's organizations are inaugurating a campaign to educate people to the importance of using more milk. This is a splendid thing. Milk is something that is most desirable and beneficial, but we feel that most people realize that.

We are very confident that the people on the relief lines know how beneficial and how palatable milk is. They relish milk. To them it is a precious thing.

It seems that the amount of milk dispensed to relief clients is measured by the idea somebody got, that because his big family used only one quart of milk a day that, that was sufficient for any family.

One quart a day for each member of the family would be nearer what is required.

Fluid milk, we are informed is almost an unknown thing on the relief lines. Instead the victims of the exploitation system are compelled to use powdered milk.

Could there be anything more ridiculous here in the heart of the dairy country where milk is moderately priced?

There should be something done immediately by relief authorities to see to it that every family receives all the milk that they need.

Regarding the good women who are going to educate the public about the broader use of milk, we suggest that they commence teaching the necessity of organizing to obtain sufficient wages to buy sufficient milk.

We feel that most everyone knows the value of milk. Education towards better wages is needed and education of relief authorities to see that all families on relief receive a life giving instead of a health robbing amount of milk.

POWER OF THE PRESS
(Austin American)

In the reelection of Governor Floyd B. Olson, perhaps no institution, including the Republican party, suffered as much as did the kept press of this state. Governor Olson's victory was a sad blow at the prestige of the metropolitan press, the numerous small dailies and the hundreds of echoing weeklies.

In no way could the waning influence of the big newspapers be more vividly demonstrated. The results of this election are a lasting tribute to the intelligence of Minnesota voters.

On the side of the old party politicians were approximately 450 daily and weekly newspapers in Minnesota. Upolding the cause of good government and equality were a score of weekly newspapers who have given the electorate facts about economics and not political propaganda.

Altho a majority of Minnesota's voters are subscribers to the kept press in its various sizes and forms, they were not hoodwinked by the bought and paid for propaganda which appeared in those papers.

The kept press may be divided into three groups, roughly. In the first group is the metropolitan press comprised of most of the papers in the three large cities.

Then, in larger numbers come the small daily newspapers, whose editors get their cues from their larger brethren. This group might aptly be called the aping group. In a smaller way, and bearing less influence, they mimic the philosophy of the big papers.

Finally, comes the still larger group of weeklies, whose editorial policies are echoes of all the dailies.

Had the press been willing to recognize that a change is needed, and had the press in its entirety crusaded for such a change instead of spending its efforts trying to mold public opinion against a change, then it would not today be confronted with the embarrassment of being forced to admit that the "power of the press" is mythical.

CAPITOL NEWS REVIEW

Minnesota Farmers are taking no chances on a recurrence of the drouth next summer. Under supervision of the SERA, they have planted 85,000 acres of rye for spring forage in drouth-stricken counties. More than 8,000 farmers shared in the 127,880 bushels of rye seed distributed by the SERA livestock relief division. The seed planting project is a part of the SERA's rural rehabilitation program.

Use of the forests in the state for recreation is being emphasized by members of Minnesota Conservation Commission. This phase of conservation activity will necessitate careful classification of all areas desirable for future recreational purposes and the planning of required improvements through field surveys. A well balanced program of coordinated uses of our forest resources will ultimately result.

Foresight is one of the fundamental requirements of the highway engineer. For the past two weeks the maintenance division of the State Highway Department has been busy throughout Minnesota steadying up miles of snow fences to protect the roads when the winter blizzards come. Keeping 11,300 miles of roads open through a northern winter is a job which would appall some of the more southern states, but it is just in the day's work for the Minnesota Higway Department.

"I don't think that we had any duty to the public to inform them of the values that lay behind First Bank Stock, because they weren't asking." Thus spoke up C. T. Jaffray, president of the First Bank Stock Corporation and head of the Soo Line Railroad at the Commerce Commission's investigation of the stock selling activities of the corporation. Following Jaffray's amazing disavowal of moral responsibility there was a shocked silence among the attorneys. Finally Mr. A. McC. Washburn, general counsel of the organization spoke. "Well, the Securities Commission didn't inquire either." Pointedly, Bill Watson, special investigator appointed by Governor Olson replied, "That wasn't this division." "Are you going to repudiate the actions of your predecessors as they did in Russia?" Washburn retorted. The hearing proceeded. During the course of the two and one half hours it was disclosed that the First Bank Stock corporation purchased a number of banks with total assets of approximately 22 million dollars and issued stock amounting to three times that much, or that two thirds of the value behind the stock was in "intangible" assets. Jaffray contended that sixty years of banking experience and a "fine business" were worth twice as much as tangible assets.

Rumors that the state is "broke" were emphatically denied last week by Governor Olson at a meeting of the Executive Council. Overdrafts of the general revenue fund by three million dollars was more than offset by 12 million dollars of other funds in the treasury, the governor stated. These funds consisting of cash balances of other funds not immediately available to meet current expenses and 11,500,000 was borrowed from the American National bank of St. Paul to be repaid within sixty days. Recently the state was able to sell certificates of indebtedness at .75 per cent, the lowest interest rate ever obtained by the state and at that time the State Treasurer stated that it "reflects the excellent credit of the state." The present overdraft in no way affects the credit of the state, it was said at the treasurer's office.

* * * *

The situation in the drouth counties is still bad. The government purchase of cattle and the reduction of hogs has reduced the need for large importations of feed and grain in some places but there are other districts where even the fall rains were not able to restore pastures. Yard flocks of chickens and fowls have been so depleted that eggs will be at a premium this winter in many farm homes, and the only vegetables used must be imported. Perhaps the worst sufferers are the sterling farmers who have fought so valiently to remain independent of all government aid. They have borrowed money for feed at banks and now the banks are unwilling to finance them thru the winter. Because of personal pride and independence, they object to receiving relief, and the chain banks have now restricted loans and are demanding greater collateral.

MASS ARRESTS OF ANTI-NAZIITES ARE REPORTED

Hamburg (TIS)—The veracity of official reports piously described the closing of the notorious concentration camp Oranienburg is fittingly illustrated by new mass arrests of elements "hostile to the state." All concentration camps are swamped with hundreds of new prisoners being sent in and new barracks are being built everywhere. In the concentration camp Fuhsbuettel near Hamburg, it was necessary to erect a new section for women prisoners.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

Over four years of the most horrible of wars. Most horrible because of advanced science converted to advanced methods of destruction and annihilation. It demanded the most terrible of cost which ever way you look at it.

The United States engaged in this war to help make the world safe for Democracy and to end war.

Did we win?

There is less Democracy in the world today than in 1913 because there is more dictatorship.

There are more armaments in the world today than in 1913.

And we are just beginning to sense that the manufacture armaments is the world's greatest racket and not a stabilizing influence for world peace. Munition manufacturers are responsible for keeping alive this business of mass-murder for settling international disputes.

Armistice, November 11, 1918, a call for a breathing spell, awaiting further war preparations to declare war on a bigger and better murder scale!

"REPEAL RAISED INSANITY LIST"

Three Times as Many Commitments Since Return of Legal Liquor

The head above is from a front page article in a recent issue of the Minneapolis Daily Journal, quoting Dr. W. L. Patterson, the superintendent of a hospital for the insane, speaking on the subject "Mental Health." After describing the decrease in psycopathic patients which began with the rapid development of local and county option in the state in 1914, which decline continued till and including the enactment of prohibition, Dr. Patterson noted "a very slow increase of cases sent to the institutions.

Beginning in 1933 there was a sharp rise in these commitments", he said. That year, it will be remembered, is the year of the return of legal beer. As was to be expected the influence of that beverage was registered immediately and decidedly.

"From July 1933," continued Dr. Patterson, "to July 1934 there have been three times as many committed as in any previous year." that is a gain of three hundred percent in the first year after repeal.

While it is true that Minnesota gets large revenue from the liquor traffic, it costs the state perhaps as much, perhaps even more, to meet the cost of the mounting commitments for insanity, the increase in crime, in auto accidents and fatalities, and in the burden of poverty and disease that has thru all ages been inseparable from drinking and drunkenness.

Moreover, even if there were a monetary gain from the revenue that the traffic pays into the public coffers, it is irrational and brutish to offset that against human disease, poverty and suffering. This is doubly true when it is remembered that the social and economic curse of drink falls most heavily and bitterly upon childhood, which drink so often deprives of its innocent joys, and robs of its chance in life.

Dr. Patterson's records will give every legislator in Minnesota and elsewhere food for serious thought on the inescapable implications of a tax measure which puts money in the treasury at the cost of the economic, social and moral welfare of the people.

NAZI AGITATØRS FØSTER MASS UNREST IN AFRICA

Paris (TIS)—The increasing mass unrest in North Africa and the recent sanguinary anti-Semitic programs in Constantine, Algiers, are the offspring of systematic Nazi propaganda, according to sensational revelations published in the Paris press. The center of these activities is the foreign office of the Nazi party in Berlin under the direction of the rabid anti-semetic agitator and German imperialist Dr. Alfred Rosenberg. All plans are mapped out in the secret meetings of the Nazi inner council which are attended twice a month by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, the Reichs Minister of propaganda.

The amount destined for Nazi and anti-semetic propaganda in the French colonies, of North Africa, Egypt, Syria and Palestine is 3,360,000 marks monthly (about $1,350,000). Sixty pamphlets in Arab and other oriental languages have already been published and are widely distributed. The main purpose of the Nazi propaganda in these parts is to stir up discontent among the Isamites and Mohammedans against the Jews, France and England, and to prepare at the same time an armed revolt in the French colonies in the event of a European war.

Early Great Lakes Boats

LaSalle, in 1682, built the Griffon, first sailing vessel manned by white men to traverse the waters of the Great Lakes. The first American built boat on Lake Erie was put into commission in 1795 and the first steamboat, Walk-in-the-Water, was built at Black Rock, N. Y., in 1818. This steamer and the vessels that followed her did a thriving business transporting emigrants to the West.

Happiness

If Utopia means happiness for everybody, says a cartoon character, we'll never get it, because some people are happy when they can make others unhappy.

Seriously speaking, such bad actors sould be rated enemies of society and dumped in the lake.

—o—

United—Untied

One old newspaper joke, hinging on a typographical error, tells of a couple who were "untied in marriage." Recently the same thing cropped out when a writer was telling his dream of the future: "I saw a vision of untied mankind." That's not half dumb, because people must unite to untie themselves from ignorance and superstition.

—o—

Utopia

Beginning with Plato's Republic the earliest known Utopia, men have given us various versions of their idea of "Untied" mankind. A recent version is Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward," which is now receiving a big share of attention

No matter what the outward manifestations of their various Utopias, all philosophers seem agreed that economics is the basis of their dreams. The machine, they say, is all right if used for humanity's sake "production for use, not for profit."

An early machine-age Utopia was concerned with thingumbubs, and intricate jiggers that satisfied every human need.—now we are beginning to think that this would not be the best possible world. Simplicity, according to some, is more soul-satisfying than complexity. And Mahatma Gandi is here to testify in favor of this idea

The Nearly Perfect Society

The most nearly perfect society is one where one person could do as he pleased, provided he did not infringe on a like privilege of his fellowmen. This idea, "Equal Freedom," was fathered by Warren Edwin Brokaw, a latter day prophet. In Brokaw's society, one man would not work for another except on equal terms, potions of life (i. e., "labor time") being exchanged for other portions of life, equally (in ordinary business practice).

Brokaw asks this question: "Is spending our lives in earning the means to live—as most of us do now—the normal purpose of life?" Ask yourself this question. Most people after thinking this over, will "No" decidedly. Very few of us like to work—we are driven to it by necssity. Spending our days doing something we do not like makes most of us dull, plodding beasts of burden. Brokaw contends that by exchanging our work, hour for hour, when exchange is necessary, none of us would need to work very long to get all the necessities and most of the luxuries of life. Just recently the Technocrats corroborated this statement with reams of scientific evidence.

Sinclair and California

Strange things come out of California. Not so long ago we heard the rumor— given widespread publicity in the liberal press (I am ashamed to say)—that Upton Sinclair, in order to get votes, had modified his Epic Plan considerably. This rumor was presumably started by the opposition in a concentrated effort to defeat Sinclair. Every means at their disposal was used by the Powers That Be in California to defeat a program that even President Roosevelt declined to commend.

It now develops that Sinclair's strength was greater than the election returns show, "ballot stuffing" being resorted to by the opposition. Even if Sinclair had won, it is conceeded, he would never have taken office. Strangely enough, the very tactics resorted to by the Republican machine out there were charged to Sinclair and his "Epic" gang, so that had he won, he would have faced interminable lawsuits on the charge of false registration and ballot stuffing. Failing in this, the Republican machine, as a last resort, would declare martial law and keep the present governor in and Sinclair out.

Maybe by now Upton Snclair, like a lot of us, is beginning to believe that there is no Santa Claus.

Minnesota

From the far-off province of Minnesota comes the distressing news that the people want a Farmer-Labor platform carried out by Republicans and Democrats. At least, that is the conclusion one must draw from the roll of the next legislature. Minnesotans will elect and re-elect a man like Floyd B. Olson, who is perhaps the only outstanding leader who has stood by the radical Farmer-Labor platform without apologizing for a single word of it, while they give him Republicans and Democrats to work with in the legislature.

This is bound to make a reaction. "We've elected a Farmer-Labor governor, now let's have some action," they say; and when none comes, the voters go back to the Repubicans and Democrats.

Minnesota is radical, says The Nation, The New Republic, and other magazines with national circulation. But how radical?

Don't Mention It!
(From The Minneapolis Journal)

Tothe Editor of The Journal:

May I thank you for the support rendered by The Journal to the cause of the Farmer-Labor Party during the recent Campaign? Although quite unintentionally on your part, nevertheless, your unreasoning diatribes contributed very largely to the over whelming victory of Governar Floyd B. Olson and other candidates of the Farmer-Labor Party.

It is astonishing that the publishers and management of a large city daily newspaper should show such little political sagacity as continually to insult the intelligence of the electorate as was done by you during the campaign just closed. It should have been evident to an ordinarily intelligent individual, who dinary intelligent individual, whose intellect is not warped by prejudice, that the people of Minnesota, a state that leads all others in the Union in its co-operative enterprises, could not be misled with the piffle your journal published against a co-operative commonwealth, the ultimate goal of all co-operaive endeavor.

Co-operators and all socially-minded people in this state are fortunate in having an opposition so blinded by prejudice (as your journal exhibits) as to result in actual assistance to the cause of human progress. Were I ever to be a candidate for public office, I would gladly welcome having you take the same attitude toward me as you have taken during this campaign as I regard it as being of great assistance.

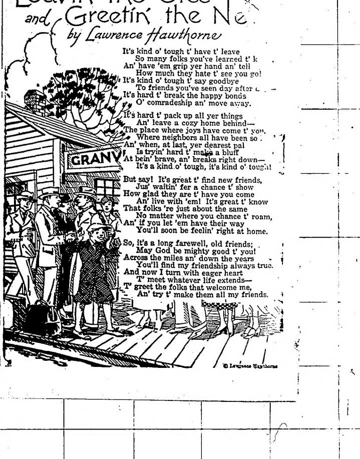
Again I thank you for your support, although unwittingly given, of the farmer-labor party.

—Joseph Gilbert.

Minneapolis.

Brighter Children

The children of highly educated parents are usually more intelligent than the children of those whose parents are not educated, not because the parents were educated, however, but because they were naturally more intelligent and because of this secured a higher education.



Leavin' the Old and Greetin' the Ne
by Lawrence Hawthorne

It's kind o' tough t' have t' leave
So many folks you've learned t' k
An' have 'em grip yer hand an' tell
How much they hate t' see you go!
It's kind o' tough t' say goodbye
To friends you've seen day after
It's hard t' break the happy bonds
O' comradeship an' move away.

It's hard t' pack up all yer things
An' leave a cozy home behind—
The place where joys have come t' you,
Where neighbors all have been so
An' when, at last, yer dearest pal
Is tryin' hard t' make a bluff
At bein' brave, an' breaks right down—
It's a kind o' tough, it's kind o' tough!

But say! It's great t' find new friends,
Jus' waitin' fer a chance t' show
How glad they are t' have you come
An' live with 'em! It's great t' know
That folks 're just about the same
No matter where you chance t' roam,
An' if you let 'em have their way
You'll soon be feelin' right at home.

So, it's a long farewell, old friends;
May God be mighty good t' you!
Across the miles an' down the years
You'll find my friendship always true.
And now I turn with eager heart
T' meet whatever life extends—
T' greet the folks that welcome me,
An' try t' make them all my friends.

Robin Hood

Robin Hood, the chivalrous outlaw and robber of medieval England, the best and most complete portrait of whom is that which was painted by Sir Walter Scott in Ivanhoe, where he appears under the name Locksley, is the central figure of so many ballads among English speaking peoples that it is difficult to picture him as one other than a character of real life, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times. Nevertheless, there exists not a shred of evidence to prove that he really existed. Historians are almost unanimous in agreeing with C. E. Clark, who, in his book, "More Mistakes We Make," states: "No antiquary that respects his cloth will admit that he ever lived outside his ballads."

APPRECIATION

I wish to extend my heartiest appreciation to the voters for the splendid support given me at the recent election of county auditor. Especally to those who so bravely supported me against the unfair charges circulated by my opposition the very last days of the campaign, regarding the administration during my term of office. I will discuss the charges made in some future issue of this paper. Thanking you again, I am

Sincerely,

Local Man Signed For Butter Short Course

Among the successful candidates chosen by the Minnesota College of Agriculture to attend the Six Weeks' Creamery course at University Farm is Arthur Anderson of Hazel. Because of a reduced budget, the College of Agriculture has been compelled to restrict the attendance this year to only highly qualified creamery men. The course begins January 8, 1935, and will close February 19.

The Six Weeks Creamery course has been an annual event for the past 41 years, enabling over 4,000 men to receive special training in that field Applications for the course were received from four out side states as well as from practically every county in Minnesota.

Professor W. B. Combs, in charge of the short course, announced that there would be a special course in dairy bacteriology, practically in the branch which includes the activity and relationship of bacteria in the manufacture of butter.

As in other years, classes in milk products, creamery accounting, mechanics, dairy cattle feeding and alied subjects will be offered during the six weeks' course.

Opportunity will be offered the short course members to take special work which will qualify them for dairy school certificates recognized by the dairy industry as evidence of special efficiency in dairy products manufacture.

Arrangements have also been made by the committee in charge to enable those who so desire to take examinations leading to an engineer's license or a tester's license at the close of the short course, Prof. Combs announced.

Persons interested in learning more of the short course in creamery production may obtain complete information by writting Prof. W. B Combs, Dairy Division, University Farm, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Texas Rangers Proved to Be Successful Guardians

The history of the Texas Rangers is coeval with that of the Texas revolution and the formation of the Texas Republic in 1837. At that time, observes a writer in the Detroit News, the young republic had an enormous frontier to protect. Hostile Mexicans on the south, Indians and bandits on the west and northwest, made a formation of a national guard, necessary, so the rangers were retained, and did valuable service in repelling the outlaws and maintaining order, and became a vital force in protecting lives and property of the settlers.

When the Civil war broke out, Texas was drawn into the Confederacy, and Terry's Texas Rangers, being one of the most famous and gallant units of the army, lost 75 per cent of its original muster roll. In days of reconstruction the necessity for the service of the rangers was apparent, but as order was restored, the numbers were decreased so that the companies in 1873 had 300 men instead of 1,000. Soon after, owing to the unfortunate policy of the United States government toward the Indians, outlawry again ran rampant over the state and an organized mounted police was established and the rangers were in power again.

In the 18 years from 1865 to 1883 the Texas rangers followed 128 Indian raiding parties and fought the redskins in 84 pitched battles, recovered 6,000 stolen horses and rescued three citizens, carried off by the Indians. Twelve rangers were killed. By 1885 conditions had changed, Texas was no longer harassed by Indians but by mankillers and bandits, so the rangers became peace officers, a mounted constabulary, and given the right to arrest without warrant in any part of the state. During 1889-1890 they arrested 579 persons, including 75 murderers. When the Spanish war broke out, many enlisted in Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

Panama's History Dates to Earliest Explorers

The Republic of Panama, divided by the narrow Canal Zone strip, is one of the least known of the nations on the western hemisphere, and yet practically every school child knows of the Panama canal, the great American-built, American owned waterway connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific.

Panama, the republic, is one of the infants of the New world, both in area and age, yet its history dates back to the time of the earliest European explorers of America.

Columbus cruised in Panamanian bays on his fourth voyage in search of a short cut from Europe to Cathay. Balboa crossed this lean neck of land to discover the Pacific ocean. Later it enjoyed high rank among the leading Spanish colonies because rich men on the west coast of South America preferred to cross it rather than to "double" Cape Horn on their way to Europe.

Panama's real advancement, however, dates from 1903, when the country changed from a department of Colombia to an independent state.

Panama City is on the Pacific side of the canal. The bay is a fisherman's paradise.

Ether in Surgery

Dr. John Collins Warren of the Massachusetts General hospital, Boston, first used ether in surgery on October 16, 1846. It is said that this is also the first time that a certain epigram from the French became popular, so that now it is a platitude. The sentence was, "Nothing succeeds like success." Maybe somebody knows what the successful operation was and upon whom it was performed. For it seems to me, says a writer in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, that there ought to be a monument to the man who first took ether.

First Prohibition Law

Maine adopted what may be said to be the first prohibition law in 1846, when she passed an act drastically restricting the sale of liquors. It proved inadequate, however, and a new and stricter law was passed in 1851. When Georgia was founded in 1732 the trustees prohibited the sale of intoxicating liquors, but 20 years later, when the colony was taken over by the crown, Jamaica rum was introduced and legalized.

Danger From Lightsocket

Contrary to the general impression, a person can be electrocuted by the 110 volts of electricity in a light socket, particularly when his other hand is on a radiator or some other good "ground," writes Dr. S. R. Benedict, Birmingham, Ala., in Collier's Weekly. There have been thousands of such deaths. In fact current as low as 54 volts has been known to kill a human being.

Sensitive Skin

Human skin can develop such sensitiveness that it becomes painfully inflamed and even necrosed when exposed to daylight. This rare condition is brought about by the eating of certain foods or by the injection of certain compounds such as erythrosin. Those afflicted are obliged to live in darkened rooms and stay indoors until nightfall.—Collier's Weekly.

Lowly Weasel Furnishes Rich Ermine of Royalty

It is the lowly weasel that furnishes the ermine of royalty and this member of the rodent family is common, writes an authority in the Detroit News.

The white fur is worn only by those members of the weasel family living in the northern part of the country where heavy snows are experienced, and then only in the winter time. During the winter months the fur of the northern weasel is all white excepting for a tip of black on the tail; but the weasels living in warmer climates, and the northern weasels in summer time, are commonly brown above and of a yellowish hue on the under parts of their bodies.

The weasel is probably the most bloodthirsty killer among all the smaller members of the animal kingdom. It is exceedingly lithe and agile and successfully attacks rabbits and other game animals many times its size. Loose in a chicken yard or any other place where prey is abundant, the weasel will kill much more than it possibly can eat. Many times it does not eat the flesh of its victims at all but contents itself with sucking some of their blood.

In some parts of the country the weasel is looked upon as beneficial because it feeds largely upon mice and other undesirable rodents; but anywhere near the farmer's chicken yard it is a bad actor and even in the open fields and woods away from cultivated areas it is doubtful if the good it does in destroying rodent pests can counterbalance the havoc it works among bird and small game animal life.

Many Uses for Old Bones Thrown Away Every Year

The millions of bones that are thrown away every year help to make a flourishing industry. Their byproducts and uses are practically endless, and there is no waste.

Bones go through many stages. First they are boiled until all the fat is extracted; this is made into glycerine and certain types of lubricants. Shin and marrow bones are used for making handles. The rest are ground into fine powder in vast mills and have an infinite number of uses. A certain amount of this powder is used to make bone-manure and bone-meal for farmers. It is extremely valuable. Sugar, salt, and other refineries utilize bones in some of their refining processes. Bones are also used for case-hardening cast steel.

The worst part of old bones is their powerful and penetrating odor, which, strange to say, is not in the least harmful. Asthmatics and those suffering with lung trouble often find relief in such an atmosphere.—Montreal Herald.

First Laundries

Both the laundry and the detachable collar are a little more than a century old. The first collar was made by Mrs. Hannah Montague of Troy, N. Y., in 1825; she is said to have tired of washing her husband's shirts so often merely because the collar part was dirty, so she separated them with the scissors. Two years later Ebenezer Brown of that city began to make collars, called "string collars" because they were tied about the neck with a string. As a special business, the manufacture of collars was established by the firm of Montague and Granger at Troy in 1833. In 1835 Independence Stark of Troy established a laundry to take care of the product of his own factory and other nearby collar makers. A commercial laundry was started at Oakland, Calif., in 1851 to wash the clothes of gold miners. The first steam laundry was set up in 1863 at the St. Charles and Monongahela house in Pittsburgh.

Wedding Anniversaries

Wedding anniversaries rose from the old custom of presenting a wife with a silver wreath when she had lived with her husband 25 years, hence, the silver anniversary. The different ones are: First, paper; second, calico; third, muslin; fourth, silk; fifth, wood; sixth, iron; seventh, copper; eighth, bronze; ninth, pottery; tenth, tin; fifteenth, crystal; twentieth, china; twenty-fifth, silver; thirtieth, pearl; thirty-fifth, coral; fortieth, ruby; forty-fifth, sapphire; fiftieth, gold; fifty-fifth, emerald; sixtieth, diamond, and the seventy-fifth is also diamond.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Hot Springs

Medical properties of the hot springs of Arkansas were well known to the Indians centuries ago and they visited them for their healing effects. Hot Springs outdates even Yellowstone as a public park, having been established as such in 1832, although it did not become a national park until 1921. It also bears the distinction of being the smallest in the park system, being only one and a half square miles in area.

TAXPAYERS JOIN FORCES TO PUSH TAX REFORM

Seeking to unite all the tax reform forces in Minnesota upon a sound and equitable tax program for the coming session of the legislature, eleven associations of taxpayers and other groups interested in the tax question announced today the formation of the Minnesota Federation of Association for tax reform.

The new federation will begin at once the formulation of a program of legislation designed to readjust and equalize the tax burden by reducing taxes on real estate and personal property and shifting a part of the load to other forms of tax, so as to reach groups not now carrying their proper share of the cost of government.

Incident of Civil War

The Fifteenth Ohio battery, organized in the four Western Reserve counties of Trumbull, Ashtabula, Cuyahoga and Lorain, can in the historical sidelights of the Civil war lay claim to the most unusual incident of the entire campaign. During one of their battles a little bird alighted upon the shoulder of Private Seth Powers who was helping operate a cannon. At each discharge of the cannon the bird buried its head in the soldier's hair, and then resumed its place on his shoulder, watching the men load the gun. It stayed with the men throughout the battle and for several days afterward and then flew away.

At Weather Stations

At a weather station, even of the simplest character, at least one observation is taken every day, says Literary Digest. At the more important stations the number of daily observations ranges from two to several. The number of observations taken throughout the world in the course of a year cannot be less than 15,000,000. In addition to all this personal observation, records of temperature, barometric pressure, wind force and direction, sunshine, rainfall and other weather elements are made continuously, day and night, by automatic instruments at thousands of stations.

The "Thinker" Statue

The original study of the "Thinker," a small statue intended to have been placed over a doorway, is in the Rodin museum in France. The first cast in heroic size, displayed originally in 1904, was purchased by the French government and stands in front of the Pantheon in Paris. There are five others all made from the original mold, on this continent. One stands at the entrance of the Cleveland Museum of Art, one in the Golden Gate park, San Francisco, another in Baltimore, the fourth at the Detroit Institute of Arts, and the fifth in Buenos Aires.

Robin Hood

Robin Hood, the chivalrous outlaw and robber of medieval England, the best and most complete portrait of whom is that which was painted by Sir Walter Scott in Ivanhoe, where he appears under the name Locksley, is the central figure of so many ballads among English speaking peoples that it is difficult to picture him as one other than a character of real life, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times. Nevertheless, there exists not a shred of evidence to prove that he really existed. Historians are almost unanimous in "agreeing" with C. E. Clark, who, in his book, "More Mistakes We Make," states: "No antiquary that respects his cloth will admit that he ever lived outside his ballads."

APPRECIATION

I wish to extend my heartiest appreciation to the voters for the splendid support given me at the recent election of county auditor. Especally to those who so bravely supported me against the unfair charges circulated by my opposition the very last days of the campaign, regarding the administration during my term of office. I will discuss the charges made in some future issue of this paper. Thanking you again, I am

Sincerely,
LEVI G JOHNSON

CARD OF THANKS

It will be my endeavor to continue to represent the district in a conscientious manner and I will appreciate hearing from the people of the district at all times concerning their legislative wishes.

Local Man Signed For Butter Short Course

Among the successful candidates chosen by the Minnesota College of Agriculture to attend the Six Weeks' Creamery course at University Farm is Arthur Anderson of Hazel. Because of a reduced budget, the College of Agriculture has been compelled to restrict the attendance this year to only highly qualified creamery men. The course begins January 8, 1935, and will close February 19.

The Six Weeks Creamery course has been an annual event for the past 41 years, enabling over 4,000 men to receive special training in that field Applications for the course were received from four out side states as well as from practically every county in Minnesota.

Professor W. B. Combs, in charge of the short course, announced that there would be a special course in dairy bacteriology, practically in the branch which includes the activity and relationship of bacteria in the manufacture of butter.

As in other years, classes in milk products, creamery accounting mechanics, dairy cattle feeding and alied subjects will be offered during the six weeks' course.

Opportunity will be offered the short course members to take special work which will qualify them for dairy school certificates recognized by the dairy industry as evidence of special efficiency in dairy products manufacture.

Arrangements have also been made by the committee in charge to enable those who so desire to take examinations leading to an engineer's license or a tester's license at the close of the short course, Prof. Combs announced.

Persons interested in learning more of the short course in creamery production may obtain complete information by writting Prof. W. B Combs, Dairy Division, University Farm, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Texas Rangers Proved to Be Successful Guardians

The history of the Texas Rangers is coeval with that of the Texas revolution and the formation of the Texas Republic in 1837. At that time, observes a writer in the Detroit News, the young republic had an enormous frontier to protect. Hostile Mexicans on the south, Indians and bandits on the west and northwest, made a formation of a national guard, necessary, so the rangers were retained, and did valuable service in repelling the outlaws and maintaining order, and became a vital force in protecting lives and property of the settlers.

When the Civil war broke out, Texas was drawn into the Confederacy, and Terry's Texas Rangers, being one of the most famous and gallant units of the army, lost 75 per cent of its original muster roll. In days of reconstruction the necessity for the service of the rangers was apparent, but as order was restored, the numbers were decreased so that the companies in 1873 had 300 men instead of 1,000. Soon after, owing to the unfortunate policy of the United States government toward the Indians, outlawry again ran rampant over the state and an organized mounted police was established and the rangers were in power again.

In the 18 years from 1865 to 1883 the Texas rangers followed 128 Indian raiding parties and fought the redskins in 84 pitched battles, recovered 6,000 stolen horses and rescued three citizens, carried off by the Indians. Twelve rangers were killed. By 1885 conditions had changed, Texas was no longer harassed by Indians but by mankillers and bandits, so the rangers became peace officers, a mounted constabulary, and given the right to arrest without warrant in any part of the state. During 1889-1890 they arrested 579 persons, including 75 murderers. When the Spanish war broke out, many enlisted in Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

Panama's History Dates to Earliest Explorers

The Republic of Panama, divided by the narrow Canal Zone strip, is one of the least known of the nations on the western hemisphere. and yet practically every school child knows of the Panama canal. the great American-built, American owned waterway connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific.

Panama, the republic, is one of the infants of the New world, both in area and age, yet its history dates back to the time of the earliest European explorers of America.

Columbus cruised in Panamanian bays on his fourth voyage in search of a short cut from Europe to Cathay. Balboa crossed this lean neck of land to discover the Pacific ocean. Later it enjoyed high rank among the leading Spanish colonies because rich men on the west coast of South America preferred to cross it rather than to "double" Cape Horn on their way to Europe.

Panama's real advancement, however, dates from 1903, when the country changed from a department of Colombia to an independent state.

Panama City is on the Pacific side of the canal. The bay is a fisherman's paradise.

Ether in Surgery

Dr. John Collins Warren of the Massachusetts General hospital, Boston, first used ether in surgery on October 16, 1846. It is said that this is also the first time that a certain epigram from the French became popular, so that now it is a platitude. The sentence was, "Nothing succeeds like success." Maybe somebody knows what the successful operation was and upon whom it was performed. For it seems to me, says a writer in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, that there ought to be a monument to the man who first took ether.

First Prohibition Law

Maine adopted what may be said to be the first prohibition law in 1846, when she passed an act drastically restricting the sale of liquors. It proved inadequate, however, and a new and stricter law was passed in 1851. When Georgia was founded in 1732 the trustees prohibited the sale of intoxicating liquors, but 20 years later, when the colony was taken over by the crown, Jamaica rum was introduced and legalized.

Danger From Lightsocket

Contrary to the general impression, a person can be electrocuted by the 110 volts of electricity in a light socket, particularly when his other hand is on a radiator or some other good "ground," writes Dr. S. R. Benedict, Birmingham, Ala., in Collier's Weekly. There have been thousands of such deaths. In fact current as low as 54 volts has been known to kill a human being.

Sensitive Skin

Human skin can develop such sensitiveness that it becomes painfully inflamed and even necrosed when exposed to daylight. This rare condition is brought about by the eating of certain foods or by the injection of certain compounds such as erythrosin. Those afflicted are obliged to live in darkened rooms and stay indoors until nightfall.—Collier's Weekly.

Lowly Weasel Furnishes Rich Ermine of Royalty

It is the lowly weasel that furnishes the ermine of royalty and this member of the rodent family is common, writes an authority in the Detroit News.

The white fur is worn only by those members of the weasel family living in the northern part of the country where heavy snows are experienced, and then only in the winter time. During the winter months the fur of the northern weasel is all white excepting for a tip of black on the tail; but the weasels living in warmer climates, and the northern weasels in summer time, are commonly brown above and of a yellowish hue on the under parts of their bodies.

The weasel is probably the most bloodthirsty killer among all the smaller members of the animal kingdom. It is exceedingly lithe and agile and successfully attacks rabbits and other game animals many times its size. Loose in a chicken yard or any other place where prey is abundant, the weasel will kill much more than it possibly can eat. Many times it does not eat the flesh of its victims at all but contents itself with sucking some of their blood.

In some parts of the country the weasel is looked upon as beneficial because it feeds largely upon mice and other undesirable rodents; but anywhere near the farmer's chicken yard it is a bad actor and even in the open fields and woods away from cultivated areas it is doubtful if the good it does in destroying rodent pests can counterbalance the havoc it works among bird and small game animal life.

Many Uses for Old Bones Thrown Away Every Year

The millions of bones that are thrown away every year help to make a flourishing industry. Their byproducts and uses are practically endless, and there is no waste.

Bones go through many stages. First they are boiled until all the fat is extracted; this is made into glycerine and certain types of lubricants. Shin and marrow bones are used for making handles. The rest are ground into fine powder in vast mills and have an infinite number of uses. A certain amount of this powder is used to make bone-manure and bone-meal for farmers. It is extremely valuable. Sugar, salt, and other refineries utilize bones in some of their refining processes. Bones are also used for case-hardening cast steel.

The worst part of old bones is their powerful and penetrating odor, which, strange to say, is not in the least harmful. Asthmatics and those suffering with lung trouble often find relief in such an atmosphere.—Montreal Herald.

First Laundries

Both the laundry and the detachable collar are a little more than a century old. The first collar was made by Mrs. Hannah Montague of Troy, N. Y., in 1825; she is said to have tired of washing her husband's shirts so often merely because the collar part was dirty, so she separated them with the scissors. Two years later Ebenezer Brown of that city began to make collars, called "string collars" because they were tied about the neck with a string. As a special business, the manufacture of collars was established by the firm of Montague and Granger at Troy in 1833. In 1835 Independence Stark of Troy established a laundry to take care of the product of his own factory and other nearby collar makers. A commercial laundry was started at Oakland, Calif., in 1851 to wash the clothes of gold miners. The first steam laundry was set up in 1863 at the St. Charles and Monongahela house in Pittsburgh.

Wedding Anniversaries

Wedding anniversaries rose from the old custom of presenting a wife with a silver wreath when she had lived with her husband 25 years, hence, the silver anniversary. The different ones are: First, paper; second, calico; third, muslin; fourth, silk; fifth, wood; sixth, iron; seventh, copper; eighth, bronze; ninth, pottery; tenth, tin; fifteenth, crystal; twentieth, china; twenty-fifth, silver; thirtieth, pearl; thirty-fifth, coral; fortieth, ruby; forty-fifth, sapphire; fiftieth, gold; fifty-fifth, emerald; sixtieth, diamond, and the seventy-fifth is also diamond.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Hot Springs

Medical properties of the hot springs of Arkansas were well known to the Indians centuries ago and they visited them for their healing effects. Hot Springs outdates even Yellowstone as a public park, having been established as such in 1832, although it did not become a national park until 1921. It also bears the distinction of being the smallest in the park system, being only one and a half square miles in area.

"The architecture of a people," says the Encyclopedic Dictionary, "is an index of their mental and moral qualities and of the state of civilization which they have reached. It may be considered more trustworthy than language in settling the question of race."

TAXPAYERS JOIN FORCES TO PUSH TAX REFORM

Seeking to unite all the tax reform forces in Minnesota upon a sound and equitable tax program for the coming session of the legislature, eleven associations of taxpayers and other groups interested in the tax question announced today the formation of the Minnesota Federation of Association for tax reform.

The new federation will begin at once the formulation of a program of legislation designed to readjust and equalize the tax burden by reducing taxes on real estate and personal property and shifting a part of the load to other forms of tax, so as to reach groups not now carrying their proper share of the cost of government.

Incident of Civil War

The Fifteenth Ohio battery, organized in the four Western Reserve counties of Trumbull, Ashtabula, Cuyahoga and Lorain, can in the historical sidelights of the Civil war lay claim to the most unusual incident of the entire campaign. During one of their battles a little bird alighted upon the shoulder of Private Seth Powers who was helping operate a cannon. At each discharge of the cannon the bird buried its head in the soldier's hair, and then resumed its place on his shoulder, watching the men load the gun. It stayed with the men throughout the battle and for several days afterward and then flew away.

At Weather Stations

At a weather station, even of the simplest character, at least one observation is taken every day, says Literary Digest. At the more important stations the number of daily observations ranges from two to several. The number of observations taken throughout the world in the course of a year cannot be less than 15,000,000. In addition to all this personal observation, records of temperature, barometric pressure, wind force and direction, sunshine, rainfall and other weather elements are made continuously, day and night, by automatic instruments at thousands of stations.

Passenger Pigeons Extinct

About a century ago, billions of passenger pigeons flew about this country, darkening the sky for hours at a time. Flocks were sometimes four miles wide and nearly 250 miles long and the consumption of grain by such congregations was estimated to have been 17,000,000 bushels every 24 hours. Today they are extinct, the last one having died, it is believed, in the zoological garden of Cincinnati in 1914.—Collier's Weekly.

Naming New Chemical Elements

The honor of naming an element is customarily given to the discoverer, and there is no fixed rule connecting properties with nomenclature. Helium was named from its occurrence in the sun. Although more recently discovered elements have usually been given names terminating in "ium," the early discovered metallic elements such as mercury, silver, copper, retain their old names.

Appreciation

The definition indicates that "appreciation" commands the genitival "of"; but in the sense, "increase in price or value," it may be followed by "in." One says, an appreciation "of" home, "of" character, "of" or "in" real estate.—Literary Digest.

Oldest and Largest Dog Cemetery in the World

On an island in the Seine river, near Paris, is one of the oldest and largest dog cemeteries in the world. More than 20,000 dogs are buried there. In commenting on this event a correspondent of the New York Sun writes: "Many of the tombstones are as elaborate as are to be found in any cemetery for humans, and the epitaphs are as varied in their pathos, affection, exaggeration and grotesqueness. Save in one respect one might think, reading the inscriptions, that one was in the presence of human, not canine, graves. The one difference is that the city authorities forbid reference to deity or religion and quotations from Scripture.

"Many epitaphs, however, express faith in a canine heaven. One goes so far as to express the author's wish that he may himself be denied immortality if his dog cannot share it. The inscription reads: 'If thy soul, Sapho, does not accompany mine, O, dear and noble friend, to the unknown spaces, I wish no heaven for myself. I desire to fall asleep like thyself and slumber without awakening forever.'

"'I believe,' says another, 'that in the Perhaps, in the Elsewhere for which we hope, all good dogs will await their masters, and that we shall meet again.'

"Pascal's epigram, 'The more I see of men the more I love my dog,' is a favorite tombstone legend in this cemetery."

Toad Wins Verdict Over the Frog in Two Tricks

Toads are more discriminating than frogs, both as to when and where they will breed, says a writer in the Detroit News.

The common frog, an authority points out, will sometimes attempt to launch a mass of spawn upon the world as early as mid-February if unusually warm weather prevails, and not infrequently when this is the case a sudden frost following shortly afterward will send the breeding frogs back into hibernation without having completed their spawning operations.

But the common toad invariably waits until the end of March, with the result that its matrimonial activities are never interrupted by sudden return to winter conditions.

Unlike the more discriminating toad, the frog will spawn in the first piece of water available, which may be a lake or a rain-filled cart rut.

The more intelligent and deliberate toad embarks upon matrimony in a very different fashion. When fully recovered from its five or six months' retirement, it plods at an average speed of about a couple of hundred yards an hour toward some sequestered sheet of water which, for some inexplicable reason appeals to it as offering the ideal home. Thither all the toads in the neighborhood travel with remarkable directness. Most of the traveling takes place at night, but individuals are met with in the daytime, hopping along toward the annual "rendezvous."

Andrew Johnson's Religion

Andrew Johnson has been listed as a Methodist, a Baptist and a Presbyterian. He, himself, said: "As for my religion, it is the doctrine of the Bible as taught and practiced by Jesus Christ." But he was a restless soul. "Try as he would (he) could not get on workable terms with the religion of the day. It seemed to him that the preachers and pulpits were fomenting strife and had substituted revenge and hate for love and charity." While a United States senator, while Vice President and while President, he went to service on occasion at St. Patrick's cathedral, the principal Roman Catholic church in the Capital. He always was an ardent defender of the principle of tolerance, and more than once risked his life to stand before a mob of fanatics, fired to fever heat by sectional or sectarian passion.

Colors of Humming Birds

The beautiful colors of the humming birds are due to refractions of sunlight from the feathers. Many irridescent hues are produced, and the color varies according to the angle of the light. This is why the colors seem to change as the birds change their position. Our common Rubythroat is a bright, shining, green color on its upper parts, and purplish on its wings and tail. Only the male has the red throat. So beautiful are the colors that Audubon, the great bird authority, has called these birds "glittering fragments of the rainbow." Others have called them "feathered gems."

Cobblers Had Union in 1648

The labor union apparently had its counterpart back in the middle of the Seventeenth century. In 1648, records show, a "Company of Shoemakers," known as the Boston Guild, was organized, under a charter granted by the Massachusetts Bay Colony. A copy of the charter, appearing in colony records, shows that it was not an attempt for a closed shop but to prevent work being put into families, to protect the public against inferior work and the industry against unfair competition.

A Friend of the Governor

By RUFUS M. REED

STUBBY JOE and Bill Williams sat huddled over the crackling fire they had kindled beside the drab little tool house in the junction railroad yards. Bill was hunched against the building, and he felt deeply grateful for the protection it afforded from the bitter wind. His clothes, though thin and threadbare in spots, gave him an air of distinction not evinced by the shabby appearance of his buddy—Stubby Joe. Bill had known better days.

Adding bits of ties smelly with creosote to the flames, Stubby Joe cursed his luck, as usual. He was a down-and-outer because the other guys always got the breaks.

Bill felt weak, and he craved a drink. He was watching Stubby Joe in the detached way he had. Presently, as if to shut out the painfulness of the scene, he closed his eyes, sighed, and sank back against the tool house. Bill was a down-and-outer to escape reality through the phantasmagoria of day dreams. Whisky had been his greatest aid. But how is one to get whisky when one doesn't have two bits?

They had just been kicked out of Slim Pinson's. Tired. Hungry, cold, they staggered down through the railroad yards to the shelter of the tool house. If they couldn't have food and whisky they could at least have a fire!

"Other guys—dey always git de breaks!" Stubby Joe said bitterly. He was thinking of the scene he had glimpsed through the window of the Busy Bee restaurant back at the junction. The railroad men had been eating sumptuously of roast beef, brown gravy and mashed potatoes. Yes, there'd been cake and pie and coffee, too!

Stubby Joe drew out something from his pocket — something wrapped in a piece of soiled newspaper. He spread the paper out on his knees, picked up a dirty piece of corn bread and began nibbling at it, stopping now and then to glance at the worn face of his buddy.

Bill had scorned his offer to share the bread with him. He sat, his eyes shut tight, his thin face lit up with a wan smile.

Stubby Joe's jaw sagged. He was staring transfixed at Bill's face. It was handsome—the face of a dreamer, an artist. Bill was always acting strangely, though, always shutting his eyes and imagining he was in some fine mansion where the fire glowed, and there were servants to do one's bidding, and all the Scotch one could drink. Always, Stubby Joe was his valet in these dream-pictures.

But Stubby Joe was cursing now. He was good and sick of his make-believe! He scowled as Bill went on painting the picture of an imaginary ball given by the governor to a number of delightful guests, of which he was one.

Suddenly Stubby Joe lost interest in his companion. His eyes had become fastened upon a fragmentary column in the newspaper.

"Say, Pard!" he cried sharply. "Git an earful o' dis!" He was holding his crooked finger under the words he had just read.

"Dis shows how de big guys always git all de breaks!" he rasped. But Bill didn't open his eyes. "What does it say, Stubby?" he asked.

"It—it tells here about a guy who must a-been a mighty good friend o' de guv'nor. He—de guv'nor—sent dis guy a quart o'—whut does dis spell, Bill—'b-o-u-r-b-o-n'—"

"Bourbon," said Bill. "Gee, that's fine whisky, Stubby!"

Stubby went on laboriously.

"'John Flynn—dat's de guy's name—"

"Lucky guy," Bill intoned.

Stubby read: "'—was given a quart of bourbon whisky by the governor last night—'"

"Ah!" Bill tried to swallow, but his throat was dry. "Go on, Stubby!" he cried.

Stubby traced out the dim words, "'Flynn seemed to be in fine spirits—'"

"I would, Stubby, with a quart of bourbon!"

Stubby squinted at the words.

"'Flynn took two glasses of whisky—straight—'"

Bill interrupted with a smack of his lips.

"'—without benefit of chaser—'"

"I always like them straight, Stubby!"

Stubby resumed: "'He lifted his glass in a toast to the governor—'"

"Ah, let's drink to the governor, Stubby!" Bill cried, his face diffused with ecstasy. In every fiber he was Flynn, friend of the governor. He held out his quivering hand, as if clutching a glass. He recited a toast, then pretended to drain off a glass of the bourbon.

Stubby watched him, cursing.

"You ain't no lucky guy!" he said, and spat in disgust.

"Read some more, Stubby!"

But there was a deep silence. Bill waited breathlessly; then, "'Flynn emptied the bottle of half its contents; then, replacing the cork, he banded it to his guards, and was led back to his cell to await execution!'"

"Say, Stubby,' Bill cried savagely, "gimme a piece of that corn bread, will you?"

Passenger Pigeons Extinct

About a century ago, billions of passenger pigeons flew about this country, darkening the sky for hours at a time. Flocks were sometimes four miles wide and nearly 250 miles long and the consumption of grain by such congregations was estimated to have been 17,000,000 bushels every 24 hours. Today they are extinct, the last one having died, it is believed, in the zoological garden of Cincinnati in 1914.—Collier's Weekly.

Naming New Chemical Elements

The honor of naming an element is customarily given to the discoverer, and there is no fixed rule connecting properties with nomenclature. Helium was named from its occurrence in the sun. Although more recently discovered elements have usually been given names terminating in "ium," the early discovered metallic elements such as mercury, silver, copper, retain their old names.

Appreciation

The definition indicates that "appreciation" commands the genitival "of"; but in the sense, "increase in price or value," it may be followed by "in." One says, an appreciation "of" home, "of" character, "of" or "in" real estate.—Literary Digest.

Oldest and Largest Dog Cemetery in the World

On an Island in the Seine river, near Paris, is one of the oldest and largest dog cemeteries in the world. More than 20,000 dogs are buried there. In commenting on this event a correspondent of the New York Sun writes: "Many of the tombstones are as elaborate as are to be found in any cemetery for humans, and the epitaphs are as varied in their pathos, affection, exaggeration and grotesqueness. Save in one respect one might think, reading the inscriptions, that one was in the presence of human, not canine, graves. The one difference is that the city authorities forbid reference to deity or religion and quotations from Scripture.

"Many epitaphs, however, express faith in a canine heaven. One goes so far as to express the author's wish that he may himself be denied immortality if his dog cannot share it. City Park Board Meets With Council

The city Park Board held a joint meeting with the city council Tuesday evening at which plans for the beautifying of the landscape near the new bridge was discussed.

A resolution was adopted by the Park Board asking the Minnesota Highway Department's cooperation in the building of a parkway drive between the west end of the bridge and the Soo Line railroad tracks. Thier plan called for two 20 foot lanes with a boulevard of 20 feet between them. The proposed plan would have a row of trees planted along the center of this park way and flower gardens placed in and about the rest of the space.

As the resolution was adopted the city would keep the boulevard in condition after it was once made. It was also requested that the road from the west end of the bridge to the Soo tracks be paved by the Highway department. Action on this project is expected at an early date according to members of the park board.

men to see that all ballot boxes are closely guarded. Incidentally this race brought out forcefully the antiquated vote counting system being used in this state and the certainty of glaring errors where judges and clerks of election must work as much as 48 or more hours in a continual shift to complete their work. The second ward election board in the city of Thief River Falls did not complete their work until after noon on Thursday.

The whole Farmer-Labor ticket gained on the official count returned by the state canvassing board, which when completed is expected to give Governor Olson a plurality of 100,000 votes over Martin A. Nelson his republican opponent. Incidentally, the governor carried Mr. Nelson's home town of Austin by over 400 votes and Mr. Nelson's own precinct by 58 votes.

The liberals and the conservatives have both issued calls for caucuses of the House members. It appears that the Farmer-Laborites have gained ten or more seats in the House and as many in the Senate. Last session the Farmer-Labor forces elected 40 House members and held 18 seats in the Senate. It is believed that the House will again be organized by a coalition of Farmer-Laborites and liberals. Sixty-six constitute a majority in this body, while 34 are a majority in the Senate.

Harold Barker, liberal member of the House and a staunch supporter of Governor Olson has announced his candidacy for speaker, as has Leonard Eriksson of Fergus Falls. Roy Dunn, known as the most reactionary member of the last House of Representatives is organizing the conservative forces The old leaders on both sides are gone from the House. Among the conservatives that will be missing this session are Hitchcock, Quinlivan and W. I. Norton, long considered the political boss of Minnesota. Gone from the liberal side are such men as Emil Youngdahl, Kozlac, Dewey Johnson, and Johnnie Mc Donough.

Speculation is rife on committee chairmanships, but it is considered certain that if the liberals organize the House, W. E. Day of this district will as the ranking Farmer-Labor member, be in line for the chairmanship of the appropriation committee, the most important of House committees. J. O. Melby is expected to draw down the chairmanship of the committee on Telephone and Telegraph, a post which he held in the last session.

ASSESSED VALUATION

A ten percent reduction on assessed valuation of all farm lands in Pennington county has been announced by H. Fowler, County Auditor.

Just how much of a saving this means to the farm owners in taxes cannot be decided as yet until the mill rate has been set, but it is sure to save the farmers of the country quite a large sum, according to Mr. Fowler.

Toomey, Perry Borgie, S. O. Lee, Miss Sarah Jenson, and Arnold and Gordon Gunderson.

PREDICTED INCREASE IN SALE OF BIG GAME LICENSE

Officials of the Game and Fish division predict an increase this fall in the sale of big game hunting licenses. Deer are reported as plentiful in areas that are opened to big game hunting this season, Erling Swenson, director, declared.

In 1932 there were 52,521 big game licenses sold to residents for a total of $107,672.05 while 43 non-residents purchased big game licenses which brought in $2,041.75 to the division.

A total of $66,375 was realized in 1933 from the sale of 36,875 resident big game hunting licenses and from the sale of 36,875 resident big game hunting licenses and $617.85 from 13 non-residents.

Common Snail Supplies Man With Food and Dyes

The average man on the street who looks upon snails merely as curiosities does not know that these unobtrusive, one-footed crawlers supply man with food, dyes, umbrella handles, poison and deadly diseases, asserts a writer in the Washington Post. These cosmopolitan mollusks are found in nearly every part of the world, living in the tallest tropical trees, on the ground and in the depths of the sea.

Their fossil remains, dating back to the Paleozoic era, many millions of years ago, prove that snails have managed to adapt themselves to the many drastic changes the earth has undergone since that time.

There are dozens of species of snails and their cousins, the slugs. They are all vegetarians, subsisting mainly upon the tender parts of plants. Nearly all of our snails prefer moist environments, many living entirely beneath water, either in the river bottom or in quiet pools. The common garden slug, easily recognizable by the absence of a spiral shell, often does considerable damage to gardens.

First Wall Paper

Wall hangings were first invented as inexpensive substitutes for the costly and sumptuous hangings of brocade, brocatelle, tapestry, etc., used in the palaces and the great houses of Europe in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries. Wall paper painted in China was used in Europe as early as the middle of the Sixteenth century, although it did not become fashionable until a century later. The invention of the block as it is used in printing wall paper is attributed to Jean Papillon, a French engraver, in 1688. In 1692 a patent was granted in England to William Bayley for the manufacture of paper hangings. Paper in continuous rolls was first made in 1829 by Zuber in Alsace.

Legs and Character

A girl's character can be read by looking at her legs, declares a director of musical and dance numbers for a motion picture producing concern. "Slender-legged girls are usually indifferent to romance, whereas chubby legs indicate an affectionate nature," contends this authority. "Sharp muscles in the legs indicate a cold, calculating, sometimes cruel nature. The more deviation there is from a customary walking position, the more eccentric the girl. If she is confident, her steps are free and forceful. If she is timid, her walk is uneven and self-conscious. Intelligent girls lift their feet high; while clever girls have restless feet."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

The Feast of the Lanterns

The Feast of the Lanterns occurs in winter, and in northern China the lanterns are fashioned of ice, chiseled in the image of flowering trees, giant frogs, ferocious tigers, scaled dragons, historic courtesans, renowned warriors, happiness sprites and such, in accord with the fancy of the ice sculptors. On every Feast of Lanterns eve they are set up in competitive pairs on each side of the avenue leading to the pond. The village elders judge them after they are lighted, presenting prizes to the three best, and giving tags of honor to three others.

Water Boatmen, Insects, Breathe Under the Water

In lakes, streams and ponds, one may see gray and black mottled insects. These are the water-boatmen. They have the body flattened above, and swim upon the ventral surface. As they swim through the water the body of these insects is almost completely enveloped in air. An authority says:

"The air is breathed by the insects while they remain under the water, and in good water it is purified by contact with the fine particles of air scattered through the water, so that the insects can breathe their coats of air again and again. This is the case, especially, when they are in their favorite attitude, anchored near the bottom of a pond. Here they will remain for a long time, clinging to some object by their forelegs, and with their hind legs stretched out sideways; these they move frequently, as when swimming. The result of this movement is to cause a current of water to pass over the coat of air, and purify it." They rise quickly to the surface, when they loose their grip on the object to which they have been holding, as they are lighter than the water, unless they prevent themselves from doing so by swimming. They often float on the surface of the water, and can leap into the air, and fly away. They feed upon other insects, and their eggs are laid on water plants.

Capital of the United States

Several experiments were made in naming the capital of the United States until the present one became fixed. From the beginning until 1871 the following names were used: "The Federal City," "City of Washington, District of Columbia," "City of Washington, Territory of Columbia," "City of Washington," without reference to the district, "Washington, D. C.," and simply "Washington." In 1871 the municipal charters of Washington and Georgetown were revoked by congress and there ceased to be any difference between Washington and the District of Columbia so far as government and laws are concerned. In 1921 President Harding's Thanksgiving proclamation was "done in the Capital of the United States." The designation raised the question as to what the official name of the national capital should be. Accordingly an executive order was issued designating "The City of Washington" as the official name of the capital of the United States.

Romanoffs Stepped Down From Lithuanian Prince

The Romanoffs prided themselves on the antiquity of their family tree, and claimed descent from a Lithuanian prince of the Fourth century. It is certain, however, says a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, that their family did not make its appearance in Russia until the Fourteenth century.

In 1341 Andrew Koblya emigrated from Prussia to Moscow and entered the service of the Grand Duke Simeon the Fierce. The descendants of Koblya held high positions, and the fifth in direct descent from him was Roman Jurievich, who died in 1534, leaving a son, Nikita Romanovich Jurief, who married a Russian princess; and a daughter, who became czarina by her marriage with Ivan the Terrible.

Nikita was one of the regency during the minority of Feodor I, and his eldest son, Feodor, under the name of Philarete, was elevated to the highest rank in the Russian church. Early in the Seventeenth century, the throne, for a variety of political reasons, was vacant. A new sovereign was chosen and to have one as nearly related as possible to the former ruling family, the crown was conferred upon Michael Feodorovich Romanoff, the son of Philarette.

Czar Peter I was the ruler who adopted, in the year 1721, the title of emperor.

The Romanoff czars with the years of their accession were:

Male line—Michael I, 1613; Alexis, 1645; Feodor II, 1676; John V and Peter I, 1682; Peter II, 1727; John VI, 1740.

Female line—Catherine I, 1725; Anne, 1730; Elizabeth, 1741.

House of Romanoff-Holstein—Peter III, 1762; Catherine II, 1762; Paul, 1796; Alexander I, 1801; Nicholas I, 1825; Alexander II, 1855; Alexander III, 1881; Nicholas II, 1894.

There were thus, in all, eighteen Romanoff monarchs.

The Golden Rule

It is not known just how the verse of Scripture was first named the Golden Rule. It is found in the English language as early as 1674, when it is cited in "Murray's Oxford dictionary."

[illegible]

Different varieties of goldenrod contain from 0.5 to 6.34 per cent of rubber.

The Lowest Low

An index thermometer left at a point near the summit of Mt. Mc Kinley, Alaska, in 1912 and recovered 19 years later, indicated, as near as could be estimated, a minimum temperature at least as low as 100 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

First Use of Gas in War

The earliest recorded use of suffocating gases in military operations was at the siege of the cities of Platea and Belium in the war between the Athenians and the Spartans, about 431 B. C. Here sulphur was burned and the fumes were employed to harass the enemy.

Dingo Destroys Others

The dingo is the only carnivorous animal found in Australia and exists on all other warm-blooded wild life. It is the one creature that assists the natives in keeping down the imported rabbit pest, but at the same time destroys many other forms of valuable animal life.

Il Duce

In Italian the title Il duce literally means "the leader" or "the chief." This is not an official title, but was merely bestowed on Mussolini by his followers as an affectionate nickname for the leader of the Fascist movement. It is pronounced "eel doo-chay."

Hindu Tastes

In thickly populated India, curry (a mixture of all kinds of fish) is a standby, although porcupine, rhinoceros hide, and tortoise are all eaten. In the Philippines, large grasshoppers are dried, cured, and carried in pockets to be eaten as we eat a chocolate bar.

Where Repentance Is Strong

Like other South Sea islanders, the Maoris believe in the tapu, or tabu. They are taught not to touch the things that are forbidden, and if the tapu is broken the transgressor suffers great agony of mind. Some have died in agony after learning that they had eaten some food that was forbidden.

"The Devil's Hoof"

Among authenticated facts in history that baffle human reason is the case of "The Devil's Hoof." In 1855, in Devonshire, after a heavy snowfall, there was found a straight line of single hoof-prints—3 by 4 inches in size and 9 inches apart—running through many villages and across rivers for a distance of 95 miles. People were panic-stricken, for the marks were not made by a common animal or bird. The mystery was never solved.

Constitution's Figurehead

The original figurehead on the old ship Constitution was a carved figure of Hercules. Since the ship first sailed the high seas six or seven different figures and scrolls have been successors to the Hercules. The original figurehead was carved by Messrs. Skillings of Boston. It was a full-length figure of Hercules with his club poised over his right shoulder.

The Head Hunters of Ohio

In view of the criminality of most of the early squatters on Ohio soil, and escaped criminals who would not stop on the frontier of Ohio but go to the savages and bring them back to murder and rob the legitimate settlers, General Wilkinson in 1792 issued orders that if any soldier deserted in the direction of the Indians, scouts were to pursue him and bring back his head. For such service the scouts received $40. With the general's order was this grim comment: "One head lopped off in this way and set upon a pole on the parade might do lasting good in the way of deterring others."

Naming Pennsylvania

Contrary to popular belief, Pennsylvania was not named for its Quaker founder, but in honor of his father, Admiral Sir William Penn. The elder Penn had loaned $80,000 to Charles II, King of England, claim to which unpaid loan was inherited by the son upon his father's death. In repayment the younger Penn asked for a "tract of land in America north of Maryland." The request was granted, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times, after which he wrote as follows to his friend, Robert Turner: "This day my country was confirmed to me under the great seal of England, with large powers and privileges, by the name of Pennsylvania, a name the king would give it in honor of my father."

CARD OF THANKS

I wish sincerely to thank the 1900 voters and taxpayers who so loyally supported me in my recent campaign and defeat.

I am now convinced the 2900 voters still believe in supporting my family which has been on the taxpayers the last year and a half.

I feel that I have tried to do what was right.

Brattland to establish his home here and that they would give him use of the office now occupied by Municipal Judge Tarrant. Judge Tarrant's office would be moved to the basement.

Frank Dudley brought a complaint against the interference caused by motors and a neon sign which interferes with radio receptions in the building. Mr. Dudley stated that there was an ordinance covering this nuisance but that it was never enforced.

Other business taken up at the meeting consisted of granting a permit to move a barn; passing a resolution dedicating two lots west of main cemetery to the cemetery board; the dog ordinance was again discussed at the instigation of Charlie Johnson; Shirley's barn and the scrap iron pile on the east side are on their way to condemnation.

City Park Board Meets With Council

The city Park Board held a joint meeting with the city council Tuesday evening at which plans for the beautifying of the landscape near the new bridge was discussed.

A resolution was adopted by the Park Board asking the Minnesota Highway Department's cooperation in the building of a parkway drive between the west end of the bridge and the Soo Line railroad tricks. Thier plan called for two 20 foot lanes with a boulevard of 20 feet between them. The proposed plan would have a row of trees planted along the center of this park way and flower gardens placed in and about the rest of the space.

As the resolution was adopted the city would keep the boulevard in condition after it was once made. It was also requester that the road from the west end of the bridge to the Soo tracks be paved by the Highway department. Action on this project is expected at an early date according to members of the park board.

ASSESSED VALUATION

A ten percent reduction on assessed valuation of all farm lands in Pennington county has been announced by H. Fowler, County Auditor.

Just how much of a saving this mean to the farm owners in taxes cannot be decided as yet until the mill rate has been set, but it is sure to save the farmers of the country quite a large sum, according to Mr. Fowler.

Common Snail Supplies Man With Food and Dyes

The average man on the street who looks upon snails merely as curiosities does not know that these unobtrusive, one-footed crawlers supply man with food, dyes, umbrella handles, poison and deadly diseases, asserts a writer in the Washington Post. These cosmopolitan mollusks are found in nearly every part of the world, living in the tallest tropical trees, on the ground and in the depths of the sea.

Their fossil remains, dating back to the Paleozoic era, many millions of years ago, prove that snails have managed to adapt themselves to the many drastic changes the earth has undergone since that time.

There are dozens of species of snails and their cousins, the slugs. They are all vegetarians, subsisting mainly upon the tender parts of plants. Nearly all of our snails prefer moist environments, many living entirely beneath water, either in the river bottom or in quiet pools. The common garden slug, easily recognizable by the absence of a spiral shell, often does considerable damage to gardens.

First Wall Paper

Wall hangings were first invented as inexpensive substitutes for the costly and sumptuous hangings of brocade, brocatelle, tapestry, etc., used in the palaces and the great houses of Europe in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries. Wall paper painted in China was used in Europe as early as the middle of the Sixteenth century, although it did not become fashionable until a century later. The invention of the block as it is used in printing wall paper is attributed to Jean Papillon, a French engraver, in 1688. In 1692 a patent was granted in England to William Bayley for the manufacture of paper hangings. Paper in continuous rolls was first made in 1829 by Zuber in Alsace.

Legs and Character

A girl's character can be read by looking at her legs, declares a director of musical and dance numbers for a motion picture producing concern. "Slender-legged girls are usually indifferent to romance, whereas chubby legs indicate an affectionate nature," contends this authority. "Sharp muscles in the legs indicate a cold, calculating, sometimes cruel nature. The more deviation there is from a customary walking position, the more eccentric the girl. If she is confident, her steps are free and forceful. If she is timid, her walk is uneven and self-conscious. Intelligent girls lift their feet high; while clever girls have restless feet."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

The Feast of the Lanterns

The Feast of the Lanterns occurs in winter, and in northern China the lanterns are fashioned of ice, chiseled in the image of flowering trees, giant frogs, ferocious tigers, scaled dragons, historic courtesans, renowned warriors, happiness sprites and such, in accord with the fancy of the ice sculptors. On every Feast of Lanterns eve they are set up in competitive pairs on each side of the avenue leading to the pond. The village elders judge them after they are lighted, presenting prizes to the three best and giving tags of honor to three others.

Water Boatmen, Insects, Breathe Under the Water

In lakes, streams and ponds, one may see gray and black mottled insects. These are the water-boatmen. They have the body flattened above, and swim upon the ventral surface. As they swim through the water the body of these insects is almost completely enveloped in air. An authority says:

"The air is breathed by the insects while they remain under the water, and in good water it is purified by contact with the fine particles of air scattered through the water, so that the insects can breathe their coats of air again and again. This is the case, especially, when they are in their favorite attitude, anchored near the bottom of a pond. Here they will remain for a long time, clinging to some object by their forelegs, and with their hind legs stretched out sideways; these they move frequently, as when swimming. The result of this movement is to cause a current of water to pass over the coat of air, and purify it." They rise quickly to the surface, when they loose their grip on the object to which they have been holding, as they are lighter than the water, unless they prevent themselves from doing so by swimming. They often float on the surface of the water, and can leap into the air, and fly away. They feed upon other insects, and their eggs are laid on water plants.

Capital of the United States

Several experiments were made in naming the capital of the United States until the present one became fixed. From the beginning until 1871 the following names were used: "The Federal City," "City of Washington, District of Columbia," "City of Washington, Territory of Columbia," "City of Washington," without reference to the district, "Washington, D. C.," and simply "Washington." In 1871 the municipal charters of Washington and Georgetown were revoked by congress and there ceased to be any difference between Washington and the District of Columbia so far as government and laws are concerned. In 1921 President Harding's Thanksgiving proclamation was "done in the Capital of the United States." The designation raised the question as to what the official name of the national capital should be. Accordingly an executive order was issued designating "The City of Washington" as the official name of the capital of the United States.

Romanoffs Stepped Down From Lithuanian Prince

The Romanoffs prided themselves on the antiquity of their family tree, and claimed descent from a Lithuanian prince of the Fourth century. It is certain, however, says a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, that their family did not make its appearance in Russia until the Fourteenth century.

In 1341 Andrew Koblya emigrated from Prussia to Moscow and entered the service of the Grand Duke Simeon the Fierce. The descendants of Koblya held high positions, and the fifth in direct descent from him was Roman Jurievich, who died in 1534, leaving a son, Nikita Romanovich Jurief, who married a Russian princess; and a daughter, who became czarina by her marriage with Ivan the Terrible.

Nikita was one of the regency during the minority of Feodor I, and his eldest son, Feodor, under the name of Philarete, was elevated to the highest rank in the Russian church. Early in the Seventeenth century, the throne, for a variety of political reasons, was vacant. A new sovereign was chosen and to have one as nearly related as possible to the former ruling family, the crown was conferred upon Michael Feodorovich Romanoff, the son of Philarette.

Czar Peter I was the ruler who adopted, in the year 1721, the title of emperor.

The Romanoff czars with the years of their accession were:

Male line—Michael I, 1613; Alexis, 1645; Feodor II, 1676; John V and Peter I, 1682; Peter II, 1727; John VI, 1740.

Female line—Catherine I, 1725; Anne, 1730; Elizabeth, 1741.

House of Romanoff-Holstein—Peter III, 1762; Catherine II, 1762; Paul, 1796; Alexander I, 1801; Nicholas I, 1825; Alexander II, 1855; Alexander III, 1881; Nicholas II, 1894.

There were thus, in all, eighteen Romanoff monarchs.

The Golden Rule

It is not known just how the verse of Scripture was first named the Golden Rule. It is found in the English language as early as 1674, when it is cited in "Murray's Oxford dictionary."

[illegible]

Different varieties of goldenrod contain from 0.5 to 6.34 per cent of rubber.

The Lowest Low

An index thermometer left at a point near the summit of Mt. Mc Kinley, Alaska, in 1912 and recovered 19 years later, indicated, as near as could be estimated, a minimum temperature at least as low as 100 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

First Use of Gas in War

The earliest recorded use of suffocating gases in military operations was at the siege of the cities of Plataea and Belium in the war between the Athenians and the Spartans, about 431 B. C. Here sulphur was burned and the fumes were employed to harass the enemy.

Dingo Destroys Others

The dingo is the only carnivorous animal found in Australia and exists on all other warm-blooded wild life. It is the one creature that assists the natives in keeping down the imported rabbit pest, but at the same time destroys many other forms of valuable animal life.

Il Duce

In Italian the title il duce literally means "the leader" or "the chief." This is not an official title, but was merely bestowed on Mussolini by his followers as an affectionate nickname for the leader of the Fascist movement. It is pronounced "eel doo-chay."

Hindu Tastes

In thickly populated India, curry (a mixture of all kinds of fish) is a standby, although porcupine, rhinoceros hide, and tortoise are all eaten. In the Philippines, large grasshoppers are dried, cured, and carried in pockets to be eaten as we eat a chocolate bar.

Where Repentance Is Strong

Like other South Sea islanders, the Maoris believe in the tapu, or tabu. They are taught not to touch the things that are forbidden, and if the tapu is broken the transgressor suffers great agony of mind. Some have died in agony after learning that they had eaten some food that was forbidden.

"The Devil's Hoof"

Among authenticated facts in history that baffle human reason is the case of "The Devil's Hoof." In 1855, in Devonshire, after a heavy snowfall, there was found a straight line of single hoof-prints—3 by 4 inches in size and 9 inches apart—running through many villages and across rivers for a distance of 95 miles. People were panic-stricken, for the marks were not made by a common animal or bird. The mystery was never solved.

Constitution's Figurehead

The original figurehead on the old ship Constitution was a carved figure of Hercules. Since the ship first sailed the high seas six or seven different figures and scrolls have been successors to the Hercules. The original figurehead was carved by Messrs. Skillings of Boston. It was a full-length figure of Hercules with his club poised over his right shoulder.

The Head Hunters of Ohio

In view of the criminality of most of the early squatters on Ohio soil, and escaped criminals who would not stop on the frontier of Ohio but go to the savages and bring them back to murder and rob the legitimate settlers, General Wilkinson in 1792 issued orders that if any soldier deserted in the direction of the Indians, scouts were to pursue him and bring back his head. For such service the scouts received $40. With the general's order was this grim comment: "One head lopped off in this way and set upon a pole on the parade might do lasting good in the way of deterring others."

Naming Pennsylvania

Contrary to popular belief, Pennsylvania was not named for its Quaker founder, but in honor of his father, Admiral Sir William Penn. The elder Penn had loaned $80,000 to Charles II, King of England, claim to which unpaid loan was inherited by the son upon his father's death. In repayment the younger Penn asked for a "tract of land in America north of Maryland." The request was granted, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times, after which he wrote as follows to his friend, Robert Turner: "This day my country was confirmed to me under the great seal of England, with large powers and privileges, by the name of Pennsylvania, a name the king would give it in honor of my father."

By
A. I. Harris

According to a statement issued by T. Edmonds, regional director for the FERA, the cost of administering public relief in Minnesota through the SERA is less than the national average for states. Mr. Edmonds stated that funds are being expended economically in Minnesota and that a trained personnel renders efficient service.

Very few of the liquor stores in the Twin Cities can duplicate the stock of wine, beer, whisky and cordials held by the office of the state liquor control commissioner. In a burglar-proof, fire-proof vault is stored the intoxicants seized by the state from convicted bootleggers. Commissioner Arundel is in quite a quandary as to what to do with this, as no provision is made by law for its disposal. At present he is quizzing the attorney-general's office for an opinion as to whether or not the seized goods may be sold at an auction, the proceeds to go to the state.

Visitors who have not been in St. Paul for the past three months are astounded over the change around the state office building. With federal relief monies, the side streets on the north and south of the building have been widened and repaved to add beauty to the Capitol grounds. At the personal instigation of Governor Olson, the capitol landscape has been improved by the addition of shrubery, flowers and trees during the last two years. The lawn has also been revitalized, and what was once a rather bare plot of ground even now in the fall is green and luxuriant..

Governor Olson is in Washington on matters of state relief for this winter. He left following a pardon board hearing Monday and Tuesday Despite a trying campaign the chief executive shows no outward effects of his many speaking engagements and hundreds of miles of travel.

The First Bank Stock hearing to determine whether charges shall be brought against that chain bank for fraudulent stock sales will have to await the end of the Northwest Bancorporation trial at Moorhead where 20 bankers are being tried on swindle charges. W. E. G. Watson, Kenneth Haycraft, Roger Rutchick and Garfield Rustad, attorneys for the state prosecuting the Banco officials are also, with the exception of Rustad, leading the First Stock hearing examination.

The co-operative market in Minneapolis, set up during the strike last summer by the state department of Agriculture so that farmers could send their produce undisturbed, is meeting with great success. A movement is on foot to build a co-operative building there with federal money.

It is rumored that a number of citizens have failed to pay their income tax and that steps will be taken by the tax commission to hurry these delinquent payments.

When it drew up the liquor tax bill, the Legislature last winter estimated that it would bring in $2,000,000 annually to the state. Up to date, according to David R. Arundel, liquor commissioner in charge of liquor tax collections, that sum has been exceeded by $400,000 with still a month and a half to go before the first year of repeal is over. This revenue goees for drought relief.

American League Against War and Facism Holds Meeting Last Night at Courthouse

The first meeting of people interested in the American League Against War and Facism was held last evening at the Pennington Co. courthouse. The purpose of the meeting was to give the report of the Second U. S. Congress Against War and Facism, whch was given by Mr. Van Pelt.

In opening the meeting Mr. Van Pelt brought out the fact that wars were not made by the people but by the ones who made money out of the slaughter. The Second U. S. Congress Against War and Facism was not a peace meeting because if war is to be prevented it will be necessary to fight.

Excerpts from the speeches made by delegates to the Congress were read by Mr. Van Pelt and manyinteresting things about the work of the League. Among the speeches read were those of Dr. H. Ward, Dr. Rosenfelt, T. R. Amle and Corliess Lamount.

R. M. Aalbu followed by stating that an organization was the most important thing to be started in order to make an organization of this kind a success. Mr. Aalbu further stated that Facism is already in the making in the form of the NRA and that all that is needed to make facism an actuallity is another war. He also brought out that the Constitution stated that involuntary servitude was not to be permitted in the United States yet, during the World War men were drafted and forced to serve in the army; this was one form of facism in the U. S. during the war and if it can be done again.

Robert Salo, a political party representative, was the next speaker on the program but because it was so late in the evening he did not extend himself but has promised to come back for the next meeting; he did state that the capitalist class has recognized that the Forum is beginning to be of some importance to their existance and therefore were going to run the Forum out because of its activities against the capitalistic system. He cited the existence of the Law an Order League of Bemidji as one form of facism now in vogue in the United States, and as a means to break up meeting of workers and unemployed persons who are trying to solve their own problems.

The date for the next meeting of the League Against War and Facism was set for Dec. 5. All are urged to attend who are interested in preventing another war.

Echo Norman Wins Prize for Turkeys

County Agent R. M. Douglass returned Thursday from South St. Paul where he attended the Junior Livestock Show which was held there November 10-15. Also returning were nine representatives of the Pennington County 4-H Clubs who received free trips to the livestock show as winners of the Fall Achievement Day which was held here in October.

Echo Norman of the St. Hilaire club won fourth prize with her market class of turkeys. All enteries were auctioned off following the judging, and Mr. Douglass announced that the competition was very keen.

U. President Heads Land Use Committee

Governor Olson was among the first governors of the nation to recognize that "there is a need for a defnite and comprehensive state-wide plan for land use among all states." The first step in this direction is a soil survey of all the state, according to Governor Olson. Work along these lines is already under way by a special land use committee which is headed by Dr. Lotus D. Coffman, president of the University of Minnesota. "We must seperate the profitable from the sub-marginal agricultural land,' the Governor said. "Farm lands should be used to raise crops of timber and for recreational and wild life purposes."

Workers Spirit Is Indomitable Says German Paper

Dortmund (TIS)—The realization that the workers cannot be won over to the Nazi cause is slowly dawning on the Nazis. Alfred Rosenberg, Hitler's advisor and the spirit of the new Germany, recently delivered a speech before the assembled workers of the Opel factories at Russelheim. The occasion is commented on by a special correspondent of the "Voelkischer Beobachter", as follows:

'Rasenberg's speech was a grand iose start of the coming struggle. It was a demonstration and the opening gun in the struggle for the conquest of the soul of the German worker."

At the same time, even an out-and-out coordinated labor paper as the "Metallarbeiter Zeitung" is forced to confess in its issue No. 38, that the economic conditions in Germany are much worse than conceded officially. Discussing the conditions in the Solingen metal industry, the paper says: "The decay of the Solingen metal industry has wrought tremendous hardships and damages on the workers. Not only are the numbers of the unemployed in these parts of Germany the highest registered in the whole Reich, but the average wages are much lower than in former times."

DAY RE-ELECTED TO THE HOUSE AUDITOR SAYS

Mistake in Adding Gives Waldal Lead for a Short Time Tuesday

Reports to the contrary W. E. Day of Bagley is re-elected to the legislature as representative from the 65th district. Despite all reports given out as to the findings of the canvassing board of Clearwater County, this information was obtained thru the office of the county auditor's office of Clearwater.

Due to erroneus report by the county canvassing board the county auditors office was swamped with telephone calls inquiring about the outcome o fthe election last Saturday which led him to check back on the figures.O n checking back the auditor found that a mistake of 49 votes had been made in addition by the board in favor of Waldal the defeated candidate from Plummer.

W. E. Day had the endorsement of the Farmer-Labor Association and has been a member of the legislature since 1919 as one of the most valuable progressives in the house. His loss at this time would be keenly felt by the F-L group who are now fighting to get control of the lower house of the legisltaure.

The final and afficial count shows Melby, F-L endorsee, with a lead of 55 votes for a total of 5285, Day second with 5230 Waldal third with 5209 and Jones fourth with 4271. There has been no announcement received here as to whether or not the loser will ask for a recount or not.

In the race for the office of State Auditor the official report shows that Stafford King has re-elected by a close plurality of 648 votes over John Lyons, F-L opponent. The figures given out by the state canvassing board are King, rep., 380,302 and Lyons, F-L, 379,654. A recount is almost certain because of the closeness of the contest, while Lyons has already signified his intentions to ask that a recount be held.

CCC ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN WIDE ACTIVITY RANGE

A summary of accomplishments of the Civilian Conservation Corps in Minnesota from the time the first Emergency Conservation Work was started in March, 1933, to October 1 of this year, shows the wide range of activity engaged in by the approximately 10,000 men enrolled. On the latter date, E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conservation, announced there were 61 CCC camps in the state.

Nearly 88,000 man-days were spent fighting forest fires with 31,000 days at fire hazard removal. Over 15,000 acres have been planted to trees and 27,542 man-days were devoted to nursery development work. Among the other types of jobs were:

Reduction of fire hazards, 39,000 acres; firebreaks, 220 miles; telephone lines, 1,104 miles; road and trail cleaning, 1,349 miles; lookout houses, 9; lookout towers, 29; forest stand improvement, 37,000 acres; horse and foot trails, 182 miles; public camp ground clearing 20 acres; public camp ground buildings, 342; pipe lines, 1,300 feet; wells and water holes, 78; experimental plots, 187; seed collected, 7,413 bushels.

Insect pest control, 8,119 acres; rodent control, 114,588 acres; tree and plant disease control, 24,181 acres; surveys, including timber estimates and forest types, 1,274,218 acres; vehicle, horse and stock bridges, 123; recreational dams, 6; ponds for fish and birds, 22.

Important work was accomplished in soil erosion control in southeastern Minnesota with 2,887 dams constructed, 55,878 acres benefitted. through terracing and landscaping, 211,939 square yards of bank protection, and 1,184 linear yards of drainage ditch construction.

A total of 252 miles of streams were improved. Ninety-six thousand fish were stocked in lakes and streams.

CCC workers spent 153 man-days searching for missing persons.

THE NAZI HOLD WH P OVER YOUNG WORKERS

Konigsberg (TIS)—The Nazis have made clear time and again that nobody is forced to belong to their organizations. The real meaning of these high sounding words is made sufficiently evident by a speech of the Hitler youth leader, Weyman, before young women workers of two factories at Marienburg, East Prussia.

Weyman said among other things: "We compel none of you to come into the fold of the Bund Deutscher Maedel (Nazi Federation of German Girls). You must find out for yourselves where your place is. But we say at the same time that you must belong in the future to an organization which serves the state.

"A recent order of the leader of German Labor Front points out that every member of a German Labor Front between the ages of 14 and 18 years must also be a member of the Hitler Youth Movement. If not, he or she will be expelled from the Labor Front. Again I say that nobody is forced to belong to us, but I cannot understand why you refuse to join us."

The implications are clear Everyone who is not a member of the German Labor Front is unable to find bread and work in Nazi Germany This is the Nazi conception of liberty and voluntary membership.

Road Transport Ind. Big Employment Factor

Minnesota business houses founded wholly on needs arising from highway transportation provide jobs for one out of every six persons employed in all wholesale, retail and service establishments in the state.

The automotive, petroleum and other highway transport trades account for 12 percent of total wholesale, retail and service sales in the state, provide 15.7 percent of all jobs in this field and 16.4 percent of all payrolls.

This statement of the important place of highway transportation industries in the economic life of Minnesota was developed by the National Highway Users Conference at Washington. The figures are based on statistics of the United States Census bureau for the year 1933, according to an announcement by the highway conference.

GERMAN WAGE LEVEL IS SINKING ACCORDING TO GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS

Berlin (TIS)—The annual income of German labor increased from 6,000,000,000 marks ($2,400,000,000) in 1932-33 to 7,500,000,000 marks ($3,000,000,000) in 1933-34, according to government statistics. Taking the Nazi claims at their face value that 4,500,000 Germans have found reemployment in 1933-34, this proves solely a pronounced decrease of the German wage level

The income of the German wage earners in 1929 amounted to 12,000,000,000 marks.

Kansas W.C.T.U. Is Ready to Use Hatchets in Raids on Bars

Arkansas City, Kan.—Carrie Nation's hatchet hovered over saloon bars in Kansas Friday.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union, of Arkansas City, in the part of the state where the militant Carrie Nation began routing the bartenders 40 years ago, has pledged itself to swing hatchets in an effort to keep the state dry in fact as well as in law.

"My fighting blood is up," said Mrs. May Frazee, president of the chapter, after a special meeting. "I am ready to go in with my hatchet anywhere the law is being violated."

She emphasized what she said about using a hatchet.

"I mean a hatchet," she said, "and I am not speaking figuratively. Every woman promised today to take her hatchet and go with me if it becomes necessary."

The action of the Arkansas City chapter came two days after the state had voted to retain its 54 year old prohibition amendment. Beer of 3.2 per cent variety is being sold under a state supreme court decision whereby it is up to the trial judge or jury to decide whether the brew was intoxicating.

The organization also voted to send a letter to Pres. Roosevelt reminding him of his promise to protect dry states."

Her efforts against the saloons and "blind tigers" in the '90's brought national fame to Mrs. Nation. Armed with a hatchet and stones she would descend on a saloon and begin to destroy the bar and liquid wares. Her work done she would shout:

"Glory to God; peace on earth; good will to men."

Annual Harvest of Fur Crop Under Way

With legally designated seasons for the taking of raccoon, mink, skunks, foxes and gray squirrels now open in Minnesota, trappers are busy harvesting the state's annual fur crop. Very few of the citizens of the state realize the value of Minnesota's fur business, Erling Swenson, Director of the Division of game and fish pointed out.

Various license sales for the year 1933 included 12,287 trapping licenses which produced a revenue to the Game and Rish Division of $11,058.30. This was an increase over the year previous when 9,262 trapping licenses were sold for a total revenue of $8,335.80.

For the year 1933, a total of 3,722 trapping reports were received with an estimated value of $102,-33 per cent of the entire number sold. Those reports showed a total of 106,764 animals actually taken with an estimater value of $102,594.9 Muskrats led in number with 41,286 reported and mink topped the list in value at $40,522.90 for 8,693. The muskrat value came to $17,790.78.

Other furbearers completing the reports included weasel, skunk, badger, raccoon, rabbits, bob cats, gray, red, cross and silver foxes, lynx, timber and brush wolves and fox and gray squirrels.

"Hundreds of Minnesota's citizens depend on the annual trapping seasons for additional cash income," Director Swenson said. "Hundreds of others derive employment from hunting and coursing fox, wolves and other furbearers that may be legally taken. Both from economic and recreational viewpoints, it is important that every effort be made to perpetuate Minnesota's crop of furbearing animals.

"Furbearers must have places to stay. If our lakes and marshes are all drained off, we cannot expect a crop of muskrats. If hunters and trappers cut down the den trees by raccoon and dig out dens used by skunk and other animals which live in the ground, we cannot hope to maintain and perpetuate these mammals. We recommend trapping and hunting with dogs, taking only the surplus, leaving sufficient brood stock and unmolested homes so that another surplus crop will be available another season.

"No furbearing animal should be taken until the fur is prime. Better prices can always be secured when skins are at their prime condition. The Division of Game and Fish tries to establish open seasons at a time when furs are prime and hunters and trappers will deprive the greatest value from their efforts. We ask the earnest cooperation of trappers, hunters and farmers in the control and management of Minnesota's fur bearers so that each year a good crop can be harvested.

"Use the right size and type of trap. Too large a trap will break the bones in the animals' legs which which causes them to twist and gnaw until they are free.

"When making water sets, they should be arranged so that the animal will drown itself immediately. This can be done by using a wire or pole that will allow the ring on the trap chain to slide so that the animal can get into deep water.

"Visit trap lines regularly, every day if possible. Many furs that are left in traps for several days are spoiled by predators. Trappers who visit traps each day are able to release harmless birds and animals that have no value and stop the suffering of fur bearers caught.

German Nazi Groups Form 'Foreign Legion'

Rio de Janeiro (TIS)—Fascism is rapidly spreading its poison thru Brazil. The green-shirted disciples of Mussolini and Hitler are at present claiming a membership of approximately 190,000. They vow that they will soon increase the number of their adherents to one million.

While these claims may seem exaggerated, it must be borne in mind that the Brazilian Fascists are openly preparing to win over their country "by force if necessary." They are in close contact with the Argentine Fascists and profess also to cooperate with the Silver-shirts in the United States whose membership is claimed to be near the million-mark. Main interest, however, is at present centered around Mexico where the goldshirt fascist movement, mainly an anti-Semitic racket, attracts considerable attention.

The Brazilian fascist forces claim also a foreign legion composed of about 1000 German Nazis, Italian black-shirts and Polish fascists. A section of fascist women and children has also been formed. The movement is strongly supported by Italy. The supreme chief of Brazilian Fascism, Plinio Salvado, recently visited Rome and was given all encouragement and support by Mussolini, the fascist agitators proudly report.

Good Results From Hay-Saving Campaign

The movement of 40,000 tons of hay and straw from northwestern Minnesota into drouth-stricken areas will be completed during November, it is announced by E. F. Mattson, director of livestock relief SERA.

It will be stored at strategic points for distribution during the winter to needy farmers. Wherever a shortage occurs, shipment can be made quickly from the nearest depot.

Farmers in the counties which escaped the worst effects of last summer's drouth, were urged by the SERA livestock division to conserve all straw and salvage hay whenever possible.

When this job of providing feed has been completed, the division will have expended $400,000 for collection, baling and transportation. The operation of the program employed hundreds of men.

"The heavy fall rains," Mr. Mattson said, "saved much pasture land that previously was considered totally unproductive for the season'.

German Cities Fear Flocks of Unemployed

Hannover (TIS)—With the approach of winter, the municipal authorities are getting panic-stricken by the fear of a general invasion by unemployed from western and south Germany. Indications show that numerous unemployed who are forbidden from entering the large cities by order of the Nazi government, will come to Hannover and burden the relief finances of the city. The municipality has published an edict warning all newcomers and bluntly telling them that inasmuch as Hannover is officially not closed for the unemployed from the other parts of the country, this must not be construed to mean that they are invited to flock there. Whoever comes to Hannover in need of relief, will receive help only for four weeks and at rates scarcely sufficient. It is considered to give no money whatever, but to furnish relief by food and lodging tickets.

TRANSIENT FAMILY HOME ATTAINS GOOD RESULTS

Progress of the transient group dwelling in Minneapolis since its opening two months ago has been outlined by Oscar W. Behrens, director of transient and homeless relief activities, Minnesota SERA.

The population numberh 250, of whom 160 are in married families with children and 20 single women.

"Each family has seperate sleeping quarters,' Mr. Behrens said, "and although all eat in the same dining room, seperate tables are provided for various family groups to dispel any feeling of regimentation."

Every adult member of the joint household performs an assigned task for the benefit of all. Only the chef, the engineer and the house manager draw compensation. A self-government plan is being worked out, with elective officers to rule.

A doctor and a dentist are in charge of health and hygiene. A library and two bowling alleys offer incentives to study and recreation. Projects in sewing and wood carving will be studied.

The children are cared for by trained nurses and teachers. Their studies are planned by a graduate of the University of Minnesota; a dietician select their food. Children between two and five years of age are enrolled in a nursery school; there is also a special department for babies less than a year old.

The home is run by George M. Hollanbeck, executive secretary of the Minneapolis division of transient relief.

"Our difficulty," he says, "lies not in making our wards stay, but in moving them to permanent quarters of their own, when the process of rehabilitation has run its course."

Boycott Threatened Against Germany Because of Activities of The Nazis

London, England (TIS)—As in the United States the question of the boycott against Nazi Germany is agitating the minds of many in Europe. An article published in the October issue of the "Labour," the monthly organ of the British Trades Union Congress and the British Labor Party, reveals with extrordinary clarity the issues at state. Pointing to the argument for and against the boycott, the writer of the article goes on to say:

"This policy (the boycott) might appear to provoke certain objections. For instance, do we want to establish a precedent which might be used to justify the boycott of a newly-established Socialist State? Might it not prove to be dangerous expedient, suggestive of reprisals? Will it not involve the suffering of the innocent with the guilty, including the very victims we wish to help? Lastly. may we not brng more unemployment down upon ourselves, if Germany should retaliate?

"As for the establishment of a precedent, I think we need not consider that. For one thing, the expedient is not a new one; it has been tried on many occasions before, with or without advertisement. But even if this argument did hold water the risk must be taken; the present occasion is unique, and the issues at stake are so colossal that petty dangers must not be weighed in the balance. For we have the greatest state in Europe deliberately teaching, and in every way fostering, doctrines which, if unchecked, must end in the dstruction of Europe and European civilization. In Germany, millions of children are being systematically taught that war is ordained by God, that brutality and violence are means to be used to annihilate all civil liberty, and that the Jewish race is the author of pretty nearly all the ills of humanity, and, as such, must be entirely subjugated and deprived of all its natural rights. Doctrines so subversive of peace and freedom must, if at all possible, be countered; and the only way of fighting them which lies open to the ordinary person is to attack Nazi Germany in her weakest spot, the Achilles heel of her financial weakness. Mrs. Smith of Peckham would seem to be a very feeble person to attempt to break the power of Hitler and his legion; but let Mrs. Smith of of Peckham ally herself with thousands and tens of thousands of other Mrs. Smiths, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Robinsons and the case is very different. The mouse is not quite powerless against the lion.

"The argument of the suffering to be caused by the boycott is a superficial one. We have only to think for one moment of the incalculable suffering which threatens the whole of Europe if there is another European war. Will our German comrades be immune from that suffering? Will any nation escape it? Fascism, all Fascism is the greatest factor tending to cause war at the present moment, though I am far from saying that it is the only one. And among the Fascist countries, Germany is the greatest and most dangerous. Eliminate German Fascism, and the prestige of all Fascism everywhere would receive a severe blow. There would no longer be any excuse for a new armament race! We should not have new squadrons of fighting aeroplanes! We should be relieved, or very largely relieved from the shadow of the horrible and agonizing war which now seems to be looming before us."

NW SCHOOL REPORTS INCREASED YIELDS OF SMALL GRAINS

Yields of small grains at the Northwest Experiment station were much above the average this year, acording to a summary recently issued by R. S. Dunham, agronomist. In the case of wheat and oats, yields were the highest on record. The average yield of spring wheat on the large fields since 1921 was 17.9 bushels and of durum, 22.2 bushels. This year a 24 acre field was divided into four parts and sown to Thatcher, Ceres, Reward and Marquis. Thatcher yielded 31.4 bushels per acre; Ceres 29.3 bu.; Reward, 27.0 and Marquis, 23.6 bushels. An 18 acre field of Mindum durum yielded 34.2 bushels per acre. Anthony oats yielded 73.7 bushels per acre on a 30 acre field this year compared with an average yield of 51.1 bushels per acre on the station farm since 1921. Wisconsin 38 barley yielded 54.7 bushels on a 25 acre field, while the average yield of barley since 1921 was 30.9 bushels. Redwing flax yielded 13.0 bushels on a 83 acre field, which is 1.2 bushels above the average.

Professor Dunham is of the opinion that no one factor was responsible for the high yields this year. They were the result of a favorable combination of conditions. No special fertilization or method of handling the soil was used. For many years, however, a crop rotation including small grain, sweet clover or alfalfa, and corn has been practiced. Pastures receive a dressing of barnyard manure and phosphate is alway applied to alfalfa.

Improved varieties unquestionably partially explains the higher yields. The difference in yield between Marquis, Reward, Ceres and Thatcher was due largely to the difference in stem rust damage. Stem maggot injury which has averaged 6.25 per cent for Reward, Marquis, Ceres and Thatcher during the last five years, amounted to only 2.6 per cent as an average of these varieties this year. There was no grasshopper damage and ergot, which was so prevalent in 1933 in both wheat and barley was almost totally absent in these crops this year.

The influence of the weather is difficult to determine. During the past season, the rainfall was only .54 inch below the 10 year average, while the temperature was 9 degrees warmer.

Severe winter killing of alfalfa was experienced this year. The amount of killing was very closely correlated with the contour of the land. Where depressions had been covered with ice sheets, the killing was very heavy regardless of variety.

BIG GAME HUNTING SEASON ENDS SUNDAY

Thousands of Minnesota's big game hunters are in northern woods this week enjoying their favorite sport of stalking deer and bear. They will have until sunset Sunday evening, November 25, in which to secure their venison and bear steaks.

Extreme parts of northern Minnesota are usually considered when deer hunting is brought to mind, according to Erling Swenson, Director of the Division of Game and Fish. He called attention today to the large scope of the open deer territory in Minnesota as evidence of the widespread habitat of deer in the state.

"Big game hunters may enjoy their favorite sport in a territory comprising almost half the area of the state, across the entire northern boundry from the northeastern tip where the Digeon river emties into Lake Superior to Noyes at the northwest corner, to Pine City in the southeast and Detroit Lake to tseh southwest, from the northwest the south east and Detroit Lakes to the southwest, from the northwest angle country which butts up into Canada south to the city of Brainerd, Mr. Swenson said.

"Fifteen Minnesota counties and parts of three others are open this fall to big agme hunting.

"It is important that hunters make prompt returns of reports covering their season's bag, covering upland game birds, migratory waterfowl ond big game. Last year 11,628 deer were taken according to the returns actually received."

Nazi Army Merges With Reichswehr

Berlin (TIS)—The long awaited reorganization of the Hitler brownshirted and black shirted armies, together with the strengthening of the already powerful military machine of Nazi Germany, will be affected at the end of this year.

At a meeting attended by 600 of the Storm Troop officers at Neu-Strelitz, a high Nazi leader spoke of the coming reorganization and gave the following details: All officers from the section leader up to a storm troop leader, will be transferred into the Reichswehr. They will remain there a year, ostensibly for training purposes. A certain number of specially selected S. R. and S. S. men will also be incorporated in the army. High officers of the S. R. army will be obliged to participate in army reserve officers training for a year and a half. The fact was also emphasized that owing to the establishment of athletic training camps, it will be possble to mould the storm troops into a solid reserve army.

It is estimated that the total strength of the S. A. forces will be reduced 25 percent. A great many storm troopers, who are considered doubtful Nazis, have already been dismissed.

The Scottie Dog

The Scottie is one of the many breeds which shows the result of painstaking care in its gradual development in shape, size and coat texture down through the years. There was a bit of controversy over this little fellow back some years ago. One belief holds that the Scottie has come from the hard-haired Highland dog of Scotland, which has developed to be the Cairn terrier.

Rural school students in thirteen Northwestern Minnesota counties will participate in the Red River Valley Spelling Contets, which will be held under the auspices of the Red River Valley Development association the closing day of Winter Shows week, February 8, 1935. Spelling lists have been forwarded to county superintendents in Becker, Clay, Clearwater, Kittson, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Otter Tail, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, and Wilkin counties.

The 1935 contest will be in charge of the following committee: John M. Henderson, county superintendent of Otter Trail county; Miss Ellen M. Anderson, county and Clarence Gordhamer, county huperintendent of Wilkin county.

Each county will select its county champion during the latter part of January or early February. The champions will then meet for the final spelldown during Winter Show week. Championship trophies and cash awards will be given the winners by the Red River Valley Development asociation, of which Wm. Dahlquist, Thief River Falls, is president and S. M. UMCLE SAM PAYS TOO MUCH FOR HIS WHISKEY WHISTLE

Increase in Drunkenness, Moonshining, Bootlegging are Part of the Price Tag on the $300,000,000 Booze Revenue

W. G. Calderwood

The Treasury Department announces that the revenues collected on beer and hard liquors up to October 1 was at the average rate of $334,253,590 per year. This is about a third of the amount estimated for beer alone, before it was legalized, by the more conservative of the press and politicians. It is less than a tenth of the amount hoped for by the more enthusiastic "guesstimators," who visioned every man, women, and baby in the nation guzzling about five barrels of suds per year.

But $334,253,590 of revenue is not to be sneezed at when the government is spending around $17,500,000 every 24 hours, and Uncle Sam kisses a billion bucks good-bye every 60 days. Deducting enforcement cost, the net revenue is a little less than $300,000,000 per annum.

Just what does this huge revenue cost the people of the United States? Or what does Uncle Sam pay for his whisky whistle?

He pays the price of a staggering increase in drunkenness the nation over. These are official samples: New York City, 55.5% increase; Los Angeles, 95.5%; Denver, 116.6%; Boston, 21%—but 40% in number of arrests of drunken women.

He pays the price of an alarming growth in bootlegging and moonshining. Joseph H. Choate, Jr., director of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, five months after repeal reported that bootlegging "has reached huge proportions" and "that the illegal capacity exceeds the legal." Oregon officials report that three-fourths of the liquor sold in that state is sold by bootleggers.

He pays the price of multiplying traffic tragedies. Statistics submitted the International Association of Police Chiefs held in Washington in September marked an increase of 100% in cases of drunken driving in Rhode Island; 122% in New Orleans; 300% in Philadelphia; 380 percent in Cincinnati and 479% in Los Angeles. The National Safety Congress deplores the increasing number of traffic fatalities, which it estimates will reach a total of 35,000 in 1934, in spite of the increase of safety devises on cars and safety regulations on the highways, and names drink as one of the chief causes.

Uncle Sam pays far, far too much for his $300,000,000 whisky whistle.

SERA CONSIDERS LAKE AS A CONSERVATION PROJECT

Surveyors are at work in the vicinity of Lake Traverse to determine the practicability of a drainage system for northwestern Minnehota, announces L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator, SERA. SERA crews are making the survey.

"It is necesary," Mr. Zimmerman said, "to establish whether the plan can be executed as a SERA project".

Unsuccessful efforts were made a year ago by interested groups to secure approval for it by the PWA.

Residents of the Red River valley are vitally interested in the establishment of some dependable water control. The flood of 1897 took may human lives and caused property damages running into millions of dollars..

Two specific recommendations were made in 1922 by P. T. Simons, senior United States drainage engineer. One called for the construction of a dam at the north end of Lake Traverse, near Wheaton. The other, suggested a widening of the Bois de Sioux river at its outlet into Lake Traverse, and the excavation of an auxiliary channel.

The dam at Lake Traverse would create a reservoir of 10 billion cubic feet of water, raise the water level and drain 36,000 acres in Minnesota, and North and South Dakota. The emergency channel in the Bois de Sioux river would cope with flood situations, it is believed

Most of the work on ths $1,500,000 program could be done by hand labor.. It would give employment to many men in neighboring counties.

The surveying crews have headquarters in Wheaton.

"Boxer" Dog Is Without Equal as Master's Guard

"Authority" is the one-word story of the Boxer. One word that means law . . . the law of the well-trained guard dog . . . a very simple law of "right or wrong," that commands unchallenged respect. One with which our own highly complicated judicial system might proudly be vested, asserts a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

Gifted with fearless courage for defense and armed to the teeth with defiance, this 40 pounds of effective prevention is worth more than tons of our attempted cures of crime. Quick is that justice meted out to the intruder, ignorant of the dog's qualities. He will receive a very short, but most liberal and lasting education.

Rare in America, this powerful, sturdy creature is widely distributed throughout Germany from whence have come the more popular guardian breeds, the Dane, pinscher, schnauzer and shepherd.

Although termed a terrier of bulldog character, the Boxer is void of those outward characteristics of plumpness, throatiness and hanging chest seen in the bulldog. Nor is his head flat. Slightly domed, his clean-cut head shows wrinkles only in the furrow between the high-set, erect cropped ears.

His nose, a little higher at the tip than at the root, is said to be slightly dished. Not bulldog-like, it is not pushed into the forehead. The muzzle is strong, clean, but inclined toward being upfaced, due to the undershot lower jaw that curves upward to follow the vertical line of the nose.

Learn Prayers From Birds

In India the hill mynas are particularly in evidence in the vicinity of religious temples. Nesting, as they do frequently, in the eaves of these temples, they sometimes learn to repeat the prayers of the worshipers and it is even said that some illiterate natives learn to say their prayers by listening to those rendered by the mynas.

Alma Mater

The usual pronunciation of alma mater, says Literary Digest, is al ma me-tar—first a as in fat, second and third a's obscure, as in final, e as in prey. This is based on the older English mode of Latin pronunciation. The so-called Continental system is now largely followed in America in the teaching of Latin, and the Continental values or the vowels have replaced the English values. By the Continental system, the phrase is pronounced al-ma ma-ter—first and third a's as in art, second a and e obscure. One sometimes hears alma pronounced in the English system and mater in the Continental. This mixture is incorrect

This is about a third of the amount estimated for beer alone, before it was legalized, by the more conservative of the press and politicians. It is less than a tenth of the amount hoped for by the more enthusiastic "guesstimators," who visioned every man, women, and baby in the nation guzzling about five barrels of suds per year.

But $334,253,590 of revenue is not to be sneezed at when the government is spending around $17,500,000 every 24 hours, and Uncle Sam kisses a billion bucks good-bye every 60 days. Deducting enforcement cost, the net revenue is a little less than $300,000,000 per annum.

Just what does this huge revenue cost the people of the United States? Or what does Uncle Sam pay for his whisky whistle?

He pays the price of a staggering increase in drunkenness the nation over. These are official samples: New York City, 55.5% increase; Los Angeles, 95.5%; Denver, 116.6%; Boston, 21%—but 40% in number of arrests of drunken women.

He pays the price of an alarming growth in bootlegging and moonshining. Joseph H. Choate, Jr., director of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, five months after repeal reported that bootlegging "has reached huge proportions" and "that the illegal capacity exceeds the legal." Oregon officials report that three-fourths of the liquor sold in that state is sold by bootleggers.

He pays the price of multiplying traffic tragedies. Statistics submitted the International Association of Police Chiefs held in Washington in September marked an increase of 100% in cases of drunken driving in Rhode Island; 122% in New Orleans; 300% in Philadelphia; 380 percent in Cincinnati and 479% in Los Angeles. The National Safety Congress deplores the increasing number of traffic fatalities, which it estimates will reach a total of 35,000 in 1934, in spite of the increase of safety devises on cars and safety regulations on the highways, and names drink as one of the chief causes.

Uncle Sam pays far, far too much for his $300,000,000 whisky whistle.

SERA CONSIDERS LAKE AS A CONSERVATION PROJECT

Surveyors are at work in the vicinity of Lake Traverse to determine the practicability of a drainage system for northwestern Minnehota, announces L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator, SERA. SERA crews are making the survey.

"It is necesary," Mr. Zimmerman said, "to establish whether the plan can be executed as a SERA project".

Unsuccessful efforts were made a year ago by interested groups to secure approval for it by the PWA.

Residents of the Red River valley are vitally interested in the establishment of some dependable water control. The flood of 1897 took may human lives and caused property damages running into millions of dollars..

Two specific recommendations were made in 1922 by P. T. Simons, senior United States drainage engineer. One called for the construction of a dam at the north end of Lake Traverse, near Wheaton. The other, suggested a widening of the Bois de Sioux river at its outlet into Lake Traverse, and the excavation of an auxiliary channel.

The dam at Lake Traverse would create a reservoir of 10 billion cubic feet of water, raise the water level and drain 36,000 acres in Minnesota, and North and South Dakota. The emergency channel in the Bois de Sioux river would cope with flood situations, it is believed

Most of the work on ths $1,500,000 program could be done by hand labor.. It would give employment to many men in neighboring counties.

The surveying crews have headquarters in Wheaton.

"Boxer" Dog Is Without Equal as Master's Guard

"Authority" is the one-word story of the Boxer. One word that means law . . . the law of the well-trained guard dog . . . a very simple law of "right or wrong," that commands unchallenged respect. One with which our own highly complicated judicial system might proudly be vested, asserts a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

Gifted with fearless courage for defense and armed to the teeth with defiance, this 40 pounds of effective prevention is worth more than tons of our attempted cures of crime. Quick is that justice meted out to the intruder, ignorant of the dog's qualities. He will receive a very short, but most liberal and lasting education.

Rare in America, this powerful, sturdy creature is widely distributed throughout Germany from whence have come the more popular guardian breeds, the Dane, pinscher, schnauzer and shepherd.

Although termed a terrier of bulldog character, the Boxer is void of those outward characteristics of plumpness, throatiness and hanging chest seen in the bulldog. Nor is his head flat. Slightly domed, his clean-cut head shows wrinkles only in the furrow between the high-set, erect cropped ears.

His nose, a little higher at the tip than at the root, is said to be slightly dished. Not bulldog-like, it is not pushed into the forehead. The muzzle is strong, clean, but inclined toward being upfaced, due to the undershot lower jaw that curves upward to follow the vertical line of the nose.

Learn Prayers From Birds

In India the hill mynas are particularly in evidence in the vicinity of religious temples. Nesting, as they do frequently, in the eaves of these temples, they sometimes learn to repeat the prayers of the worshipers and it is even said that some illiterate natives learn to say their prayers by listening to those rendered by the mynas.

Alma Mater

The usual pronunciation of alma mater, says Literary Digest, is alma me-tar—first a as in fat, second and third a's obscure, as in final, e as in prey. This is based on the older English mode of Latin pronunciation. The so-called Continental system is now largely followed in America in the teaching of Latin, and the Continental values or the vowels have replaced the English values. By the Continental system, the phrase is pronounced al-ma ma-ter—first and third a's as in art, second a and e obscure. One sometimes hears alma pronounced in the English system and mater in the Continental. This mixture is incorrect.

THERE ARE TOO MANY MISTAKES

Among other things, the past election was featured by too many errors. The King-Lyons race is of course the outstanding example of figure juggling. On Saturday, when the writer was in St. Paul, six counties were still out and unaccounted for—officially— by their respective canvassing boards. One of these was Dakota county which is almost within a stone's throw of the state Capitol. Monday's St. Paul Daily News gave Lyons a lead of over two thousand votes while the Minneapolis Journal for the same day gave King a lead of over six hundred. Certainly there must be something rotten, and it isn't all in Denmark.

But it is not only in the state auditor race that there are too many mistakes. The race for the state senatorship in this district, and between W. E. Day and Marius Waldal for representative has also developed some peculiar quirks.

It is only natural that there should be a great many mistakes when people who are considered too old to do an ordinary day's work are put on election boards that entail work for upward of 48 hours in a continuous shift. But why all the corrections should favor the opposition candidates is not so easy to understand. It would seem that the law of averages would give the breaks to the other side once in awhile.

The first error which we corrected on our tabulation sheet was on Red Lake county where Mr. Tungseth gained ten votes over the former figure given us. Next we chalked up an additional 100 votes for Mr. Tungseth, brought in on the correction of an error in Clearwater county. And finally Pennington county discovered an error in the first ward of this city which netted Mr. Tungseth another 25 votes.

The Day-Waldal quarrel looks still more fishy. Altho the canvas originally gave Day a narrow majority, the Clearwater county canvassing board reported to the state a figure which left Day on the short end of the count by over twenty votes. Continuous, and insistent phone calls aroused the Clearwater county auditor's curiosity and he rechecked the canvassing board's figures, discovering an error of forty-seven votes in Mr. Day's favor which apparently again puts him in the lead by 19 votes as originally reported.

It is evident that the entire count has been a comedy of errors. The opposition has stepped out and found enough errors to put at least one of their men across. The Farmer-Laborites have sat back and taken what has been handed them in the line of one correction after another. Not the least peculiar part of the whole situation is the fact that the corrections have in the main come from what is considered hostile territory, that is cities and villages.

While we charge no fraud, we will nevertheless admit that some of the tactics used by the opposition in the last city election and repeated in this election, leaves us without any illusions in regard to the height of Republican ethics. We believe that a recount should be in order.

YES, ITS TIME FOR A HOUSECLEANING

The St. Paul Union Advocate of last week pointed out the fact that the brunt of the past campaign was borne by the Farmer-Labor party and that the All-Party support was mostly conspicuous by its absence. The Advocate also suggests that it is about time that the governor recognizes this fact and cleans the hold-overs out of the statehouse.

It seems to us that the stand is well taken. We know what would have happened if Mr. Nelson had won, or if Mr. Regan had been the successful candidate. Ten days after either one had taken office, every Farmer-Laborite on the state payroll would have gotten the "gate". The opposition would have told to all and sundry that they had a "mandate" from the people to "clean out the reds" and to "purge the state of 'communists'".

Well, it's tit for tat. In our opinion, Governor Olson has a mandate from the voters to clean the old gang and its sympathizers from office where-ever they are found. The spoils system may not be the best system in the world from an efficiency standpoint, but it is the only one recognized by the old parties, and the only one which can build a real party organization. The squawk will of course be set up by the old parties that the governor is sacrificing experience and ability if he lets the holdovers out, but from the condition that the old parties has brought the state to, we would respectfully suggest that they have been overloaded with either quality. If they were, they certainly have not wasted any of it on state business.

There is no shortage of able and experienced men and women in the Farmer-Labor movement. Two departments have had their housecleaning; the banking department and the attorney general's office. It is worthy of note that these departments are most efficiently handled and least subjected to criticism. Other departments might profit by their example.

Let us have the positions under Farmer-Labor control filled with men who have clean government nearer to their heart than the survival of the party of Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Teapot Dome.

The Farmer-Labor party made gains in the state senate and now hold thirty seats in that body. Thirty-four constitute a majority. This will be something for the weak sisters who allowed paid propagandist to swing them away from their endorsed candidate to ponder, when a progressive measure loses by one or two votes.

FARMER-LABOR PRESS SERVICE

By
Senator H. G. Teigan

Governor Floyd B. Olson, Farmer-Labor, received a plurality of 72,453 votes over his Republican opponent in his race for re-election on November 6.

When viewed in the light of the sort of campaign conducted against him, and the Farmer-Labor Party, Governor Olson has every reason to feel highly gratified over the result. Not since 1920 has the enemy conducted so vicious and villainous as the one just concluded. The vote for Governor Floyd Olson, Farmer-Labor, 468,812; Martin Nelson, Republican, 396,959; John E. Regan, Democrat 176,928.

Other Farmer-Labor nominees who were successful in the election for state and congressional offices are as follows:

Henrik Shipstead, U. S. Senator; Hjalmar Petersen, Lieutenant Governor; Harry H. Peterson, Attorney General; Chas. Munn, Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner; Russell O. Gunderson, Clerk of the Supreme Court.

The successful Farmer-Labor nominees for Congress are:

Ernest Lundeen, 3rd Dist.; Paul J. Kvale, 7th Dist.; and R. T. Buckler, 9th dist. Lundeen and Kvale were reelected while Buckler was elected for the first time

Congressmen Magnus Johnson and Henry Arens were defeated for reelection. This is most regrettable and yet not wholly unexpected. A little later the writer will make an analysis of the conidtions that operated to bring about the defeat of both Johnson and Arens.

Lyons May Win

There is one other contest that may not be lost to the Farmer-Laborites. In my opinion a recount of the vote for state auditor will in all probability show John T. Lyons, Farmer-Labor nominee was successful in defeating Stafford King, the incumbent Republican. The official returns give a margin of 648 votes in a total of nearly a million votes cast. The vote as reported is as follows:

John T. Lyons, Farmer-Labor, 379-654; Stafford King, Republican, 380,302; Patrick J. Delaney, Jr., Democrat, 221,221.

A recount will no doubt be asked by Mr. Lyons. In view of the fact that Republicans had charge of election boards in most districts in the larger cities it seems highly probable that enough false totals were returned to the county canvassing boards to give the small margin credited to Mr. King. It is well to recall that four years ago Roy Smelker, Farmer-Labor nominee for Clerk of Supreme Court, gained approximately 500 votes in a recount of Hennepin and Ramsey counties. And these gains were not made entirely on the basis of unavoidable errors by local election boards.

Farmer-Labor Gains Senators

In the legislative contests the Farmer-Laborites have made gains. This is especially true in the Senate. The FarmerLabor membership of that body has been increased by several senators notwithstanding the loss of a few splendid members running for reelection. Perhaps the most costly defeat among the Farmer-Laborites was that of Emil L. Regnier of Lyon on whom vicious personal attacks were made resulting in his defeat.

Among the conservatives who fell by the wayside are, Elmer E. Adams of Otter Tail, defeated by T. H. Johnson; Harold J. Peck of Itasca, defeated by Dr. J. Lawrence McLeod; H. C. Hanson of Carlton, defeated byl Harry Wing; A. L. Lennon of Minneapolis, defeated by Joseph A. Kozlak; P. W. Morrison of Carver, defeated by A. L. Ruppert; Chas. F. Serline of Kanabec defeated by Rep. Fay Cravens of Milaca; Edward Smith of Pope, defeated by Rep. Fred Foslien of Douglas; Thomes H. Smullen of LeSueur defeated by Wm. F. Dietz.

All of the above are Farmer-Laborites except Harry Wing who is a liberal but not affilated with the Farmer-Labor party.

How to Stop Bank Robberies

Prof. Aslak Hjelmeson, our foreign correspondent, writes in about how to stop bank robberies.

"First, remove all currency to a distant spot in the sea and dump it overboard. Currency is too bulky to carry around.

"Then institute a banking service in each town or community, said service to be conducted by expert accountants.

"Next start everybody out even (after cancellation of all debts) with one hundred, five hundred, or a thousand dollars in the bank, and put everyone's name on a public depositors' list which might be consulted by everybody and anybody who is skeptical about another's ability to pay certain bills.

"No charge accounts need be run, as payments could be made immediately by checker slips (for sums under a dollar). All income thus would be in the form of checks, which could be deposited at the bank and credited there. All outgo being by checks also, no cash what soever would be needed in any transaction.

"For the services of bookkeeping the bankers could exact a small percentage from all deposits made, and the losses in embezzlement and robbery that would be forestalled thus would more than make up for the small cost. Wouldn't a burglar be surprised to walk into a bank and find nothing but ledgers and deposit slips?

"Such a system would also forestall the activities of the 'Inside burglar,' also; and as each depositor would presumably keep track of his own deposits and withdrawals, very little embezzlement would be carried out."

The "Stigma of Communism

Whenever a man gets just so hot under the collar, he explodes with a brilliant display of verbal fireworks; and when the subject of his verbal fireworks is the depr—beg pardon, "recovery"—he generally winds up with the assertion, "We oughta have a rev-loo-shun." Many things have happened during the last five years to make former staid conservatives rabid "radicules," to judge by their talk. The vision of a "revolooshun", with the underdogs rising up and nipping off capitalistic heads with guillotines and broadaxes, often soothes the savage breast that has been gypped of a dollar and some cents n a bad deal at a time when dollars and cents are scarce.

But, no matter how much a man explodes, his "better sense" dictates to him at the polls, and he continues to vote Democratic or Rpublican. Anything else, he is told, is tainted by the Stigma of comunism.

The "stigma" of communism, by the way, has quite a history in our newspapers. Some day I shall write a "History of the Stigma of Communism." Such a history will contain a list of all liberal and "pale pink" enterprises that were nipped in the bud by the "stigma" of communism.

Just what is this "Stigma?" As far as I can see, it is applied to any far-reaching reform measure that stands some chance of success. Reforms that do not mean anything are often pushed into the foreground, to distract the attention from the reforms which mean something. It is an ancient gag of the ruling class.

I am not a communist, and probably could not be one if I tried; but I have sense enough to know that communists, in working for a new society which would not contain the cruelties of the capitalist system, would welcome a period of protracted fighting and chaos generally known as "revolution." In fact, right now a revolution would be disastrous for the farmers and working classes There would be a lot of misery, with every chance in the world for a fascist dictatorship at the end of it. The theory of communism, as I understand it, is to seize power when capitalist breakdown occurs, and to end as soon as possible the bloody violence which occurs in capitalist breakdowns. Communist dictatorship, in other works, is an attempt to restore order from chaos.

From the intelligent viewpoint, therefore, the "stigma" of communism fades away into nothingness; but it is a good gag to spring on a people who still believe in boogermans, hobgoblins, and bewhiskered bolsheviks.

MARXISTS AS UTOPIANS

History Marches; The "Revolutionist" Waits
by Michael Ross
In Oct. 1934, COMMON SENSE Magazine
(Condensed by B. C. Hagglund)

The orthodox Marxians, Communist and Socialist, are patiently waiting for that time which Marx described so vividly, when the working class will build its revolutionary organization within the framework of a crumbling capitalism, and finally "burst the integument asunder." Those patient gentle men, says the author of this article, forget that Marx himself believed in change and considered himself least of all "a Marxist." Mr. Ross—and this will lend weight to his argument—is a former member of the Communist Party of Great Britain and worked for over a year in the State Publishing Company of the U.S.S.R.

It is natural that the severity of the depression should have led many intellectuals to the discovery of Marx, the prophet of catastrophe. Their enthusiasm bears an inverse ratio to the extent to which he was neglected during the preceding boom years. But it is none the less misdirected and occurs at the moment when the theory of the class struggle as developed by Marx is less convincing than ever.

Marx wrote: "At a certain stage of their development, the material forces of production come into conflict with the existing relations of production or what is but the legal expression for the same thing—with the property relations within which they had been at work before. . . Then comes the period of social revolution." Such a period has arrived in America.

But if Marx described the trap in which we are, and the means of escape, the tool which he recommended is not within our reach. Marx held that when the period of social revolution arrived the workers would be prepared to succeed the capitalists as the ruling class. Marx assumed that the growth of industrial capitalism would cause the disappearance of the lower middle class—the small tradespeople, shopkeepers, independent craftsmen and peasants. The incapacity of the ruling class would force it to give way to the only alternative, the working class.

Defeat of Workers Since the War

It is this part of Marxist theory which has been falsified by postwar history. In Italy the organized workers received their first decisive set-back. And the failure of socialists and communists in Germany is too recent to require recalling. For Lenin, imperialism the last stage of capitalism, but Stalin has been obligated to discover that fascism is the last stage.

In Russia there existed social and economic conditions which cannot be found in any other great power. The native capitalists were weak, and social conditions resembled those of Germany in the 3rd quarter of the nineteenth century. Writing of Germany at this time, Marx predicted that in these circumstances another attempt at bourgeois revolution could be converted into success for the workers, His prophesy for Germany was fulfilled fifty years later in Russia.

In the United States the clearest example of the inadequacy of this part of Marxism is found. Despite the absence of a "class-conscious" proletariat, the United States has to find a solution of its problems. Present day Marxians resemble the utopians whom Marx despised, by clinging to that part of Marxism which relates to social conditions of the nineteenth century.

Conditions would suggest that a new middle class will gain state power by using the discontent of the masses.

The New Middle Class

Society has not developed along the lines which Marx assumed to be unavoidable. The intermediate classes have not grown less and the workers have not united in opposition to capitalism.

The twentieth century witnessed the rise of a new middle class—the white collar workers—who during recent years have found more and more reason to become anti-capitalistic, but who do not associate their interests with the proletariat. Dr. R. D. McKenzie writes: "In the last decade, 1920 to 1930, the urban population increased 26.9%, while the number of wage earners remained constant. "The census of 1930 showed that the ratio of wage earners in manufacture to every hundred of urban population was only 12.8

These developments are destructive of the analogy which Marxists make between the transfer of state power from the feudal aristocracy to the bourgeoisie and the future similar transfer from the capitalists to the workers.

The world-wide collapse of the callapse of the capitalist economic apparatus is forcing the construction of a new economic society. But is the agent of this change to be the working class?

Today is becomes necessary to reject Marxist conclusions for the same reasons that Marx rejected those of his predecessors. Today Marx would be driven to repeat his quip: "No Marxist am I."

Our Friends

Granting that we both had the will and sense to choose our friends well, how few of us have that power. Yet there is a society continually open to us, waiting all day long, kings and statesmen on our bookcase shelves.—John Ruskin.

Bulls Don't Know Colors

As far as known, bulls have no perception of color. The action of waving a cloth infuriates the bull. Many bulls are extremely vicious and will attack any moving person.

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Grays

Beacon lights to guide the Ship of State safely out of the gale of depression are co-operation and sharing. Indifference to these rays of economic safety will cause tragic disasters.

Self-preservation can no longer be maintained by individualism but by pulling together. Separatism is selfishness; Co-operation is self-investment with and for others.

Sharing is putting service above profit.

A customer satisfied is better than a customer cheated.

We do not need to plow under corn and cotton nor go to destroying cattle. We need, a morality that makes just distribution a reality. Not overproduction of food is our trouble but an overproduction of self. Not too much religion, but too little. It is not machinery that needs scrapping of greed. Better distribution is essential if our present social system is to be safe-guarded with any sort of assurance.

FACTS ABOUT ALCOHOL
By Miss Bertha R. Palmer
(Reprinted from Union Signal)

1. The ALCOHOL in beer, wine and ale is the same alcohol that is in whisky, It is the alcohol that is injurious;
2. It never satisfies the appetite it creates;
3. It is not a food but a habit-forming drug;
4. It cures no diesease, therefore, it is not a medicine;
5. It is always a narcotic, even in small quantities; it is never a stimulant;
6. It depresses the nerve centers long before the effect can be noticed by observers; it reduces self-control and causes confusion in thought and judgement. Therefore, the person who takes one drink is a dangerous driver on a street or highway.
7. Beer is the most harmful of alcoholic drinks because it is the most seductive—no other leads so easily to intemperance.

The Golden Rule

"Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even to them, for this is the law and the prophets." These are the words of what is popularly known as "the Golden Rule," says G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times. They are St. Matthew's quotation from Jesus' Sermon on the Mount and are the essence around which Christianity is woven. But they express a philosophy not original with Christ. Five hundred years earlier Confucius gave to the world this message: "Be always kind, and act toward others as you would want them to act toward you."

Albinism

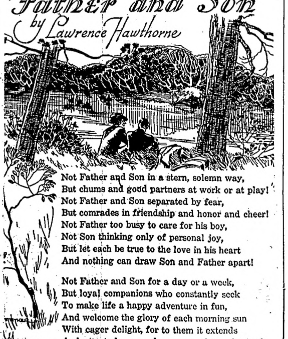
Of the many interesting cases of albinism, one of the strangest occurred in Africa a number of years ago. A negro couple had three white and three black children in the following order: The first and second were black boys, the third and fourth were white girls, the fifth a black girl and the sixth was a white boy.—Collier's Weekly.

Crucifix on Warships

In the days of yore warships usually had a crucifix on the quarterdeck; when sailors passed this they crossed themselves or saluted it. The crucifix has gone, but the salute remains.

Father and Son

by Lawrence Hawthorne



Not Father and Son in a stern, solemn way,
But chums and good partners at work or at play!
Not Father and Son separated by fear,
But comrades in friendship and honor and cheer!
Not Father too busy to care for his boy,
Not Son thinking only of personal joy,
But let each be true to the love in his heart
And nothing can draw Son and Father apart!

Not Father and Son for a day or a week,
But loyal companions who constantly seek
To make life a happy adventure in fun,
And welcome the glory of each morning sun
With eager delight, for to them it extends
A chance to become closer comrades and friends.
Oh, nothing could ever mean more to a lad
Than taking his place as a pal of his Dad!

A GENUINE FARMER-LABOR VOTE

(Farmer-Labor Leader)

Tremendous gains were made by Farmer-Labor forces in the election of Nov. 6. While the vote for Governor was less than that of two year ago, the vote for the state ticket was decidedly more than in any other previous election. This means that Minnesota now has an informed, intelligent, not-to-be-shaken Farmer-Labor plurality that can be built to a clear majority within two years. It means that in this state we have an electorate that cannot be stampeded by campaign trickery.

No factories will leave Minnesota because of a Farmer-Labor ivctory and no textbooks will be written by the administration. Those were two outstanding campaign canards circulated by members of the opposition, positively known by them to be false.

The eyes of the nation are upon Minnesota. Much will be printed about our gain in votes, of our holding of state offices previously taken and the capture of others. But Minnesota's real contribution to the advance of Social Justice is in the fact that our vote now is genuinely Farmer-Labor, solid, informed, intelligent.

SCHOOLS—NOT BATTLESHIPS

("R. S." in Hamline University "Oracle")

On the University of Minnesota campus on November 9, Friday, students from a number of Minnesota colleges and high schools converged to demonstrate opposition to what is left of the R. O. T. C., on that campus and to register a vigorous protest agianst war preparations now going forward in the United States and thruout the world.

The University demonstration was not isolated. From Massachusetts to Los Angeles a concerted program of student opposition to war and R. O. T. C., will be carried into action. A student delegation on the same day, Friday, November 9 was to appear at the White House calling for abolition of all campus military drill units.

The success of last April's demonstration, which successfully climaxed attempts to abolish the compulsory feature of military drill at the state university heartens us. We realize the need for strengthening student unity, student mass opinion—on us another war will fall most heavily; it is youth that is being robbed of educational opportunities by the parasite military machine.

THE WISCONSIN RESULTS

(The Tyler Journal)

Another victory for new party forces comes in Wisconsin with the smashing victory of the brothers, LaFollette for senator and governor, as well as the election of six or seven congressmen from that state on the new Wisconsin Progressive ticket.

This victory as well as the victory of the state ticket in Minnesota indicates that the new political alignment is nearer than many people suppose.

At the same time that this is taking place, Father Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, has announced the formation of a National Union for Social Justice "NUSJ"—looks like a radio station. This NUSJ, as announced by the fighting priest, presents a 16 point program, which sounds like the Farmer-Labor platform of Minnesota. There is nationalization of money and credit, and a central government controlling the currency and credit of the nation. The program calls for nationalization of natural resources, power and light, and all other resources too important for private ownership.

According to the rules laid down by the Minnesota Republicans, Father Coughlin would be rated as a rank communist. Be that as it may, the militant priest is making a tremendously valuable contribution to the economic education of the Amercan people. He speaks over National Broadcasting Company hookup every Sunday afternoon.

UNICAMERAL LEGISLATION

(New Ulm Review)

Many eyes of the world will be focused on Nebraska in January 1937, when that state inaugurates one of the most novel species of representative government yet undertaken in these United States. In brief, the old bicameral system will be replaced by a unicameral, or one-house law making body.

The unicameral method is not strictly new, because it has been tried—without success—in the early days of several states. Other commonwealths have rejected proposals to establish such a system. It remains, however, that this arrangement will create considerable interest for the plain reason that it has never been attemptel in times similar to the present.

In favor of this departure is the complaint that valuable time and money is usually expended by our present system. No one can deny that the amending, re-amending, rejecting and adoption barage now popular in legislative bodies is often tiresome to no end. And with equal justification, we often doubt the need of spending huge sums to send deadwood legislators to the state capitol. Many times these men prove to be a public burden.

In opposition to the unicameral system is the hereditary governmental procedure which calls for complicated bicameral representation. Constitutionally, the one-house method is rather out of order, for the mutual check of a two house system is built into our scheme of democracy. This surveillance is valuable, for it places a guiding hand on the shoulders of extremists, or over-rides the opposition of narrow-minded conservatism.

Regardless of its results, the Nebraska experiment will be watched closely, for it may open a new method for governmental expense slashing.

CHARLES D. EGLEY OF THE FARMERS UNION ANALYSIS PROFIT

Dear Friend:

The election, interesting and exciting tho it was, is now over. If you have made a mistake—if you did not vote for and elect those candidates who have offered a program, true and sincere, that actually will abolish exploitation, there is very little you can do about it thru political action for another two years. We have to wait that long until we can vote again.

I am going to make the statement and the prediction today that the majority of the folks you have elected to public office on Nov. 6th did not promise, and will not put into effect the reforms necessary in our economic system that will end exploitation. And in my opinion before we have a system based on justice and equity. Exploitation of all classes of society must be bolished.

So long as any one class of society is exploited others eventually will also suffer, because of the lack of purchasing power of the exploited class. So long as any one class does not receive in pay the full value of the things they produce, they will not be able to buy back as much as they produce, and these so-called surpluses accumulate, and we have to have suffering in the midst of plenty.

And, in my opinion, we do not abolish exploitation until we abolish private profit. Because, a profit as I see it, is just plainly something you get for nothing. It is wealth produced by one man, accumulated by another. If I get more for the things I produce than they are worth, then I make a profit. But I cannot get more for the things I produce than they are worth, unless somebody else gets less.

Such a system is wrong. Such a system has gotten us into the mess we are in. It should and must be abolished. In its place must be established a system where business is done at cost, for use and service, instead of profit—the co-operative commonwealth. The system of private ownership operated for private profit concentrates wealth and robs the masses of their buying power. The co-op. system decentralizes wealth thru patronage dividends.

From a standpoint of political action you can do little about this for another two years. Thru economic organization, we can build our cooperative movement every day, thru the Farmers Union, the only organization— national, militant, class conscious—with a comprehensive program to do the job.

Aunt Minnie— Cupid's Aid

By MARIAN P. JOHNSON

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

"YOU'LL be going back East soon, Donald," murmured Alicia Hall wistfully.

She was being a "blue girl" tonight. Her eyes were blue gentians, fringed with lovely darkened lashes, her little silk frock was a smooth blue sheath enfolding her like the clinging petals of a flower; even her soft young voice had a "blue" note in it. She had practiced that sentence carefully this very night for a full half hour before her mirror—with gestures!

"I'll miss you so," sighed Alicia.

"Will you really?" asked Donald, even a little eagerly, it seemed. Alicia slid a little closer.

And then it happened! A soft, padding step in the hall, a muffled fumbling along the wall, and then a voice—Aunt Minnie's voice.

"Alice, honey, I can't find the switch!" And Aunt Minnie, clad in a shapeless wrapper, her feet in felt slippers, appeared in the doorway. "It's my insomnia," she complained. "I couldn't sleep a wink. It's bothered me ever since your Uncle Hiram died! I thought maybe a glass of warm milk—oh, who's the young man, Alice?"

"It's—Donald Tilden, Aunt Minnie," said Alicia. "We used to go to school together. He's home on vacation, you see!"

"Hum-m-m," said Aunt Minnie.

"I—I'll get your milk for you," offered Alicia.

"Why did she have to come to visit just now?" wailed Alicia, pouring milk. "And why must she also be cursed with insomnia? Just two more nights and Donald will go back East for another year—and some scheming little huzzy will probably marry him!"

She set the glass on a small tray with a vicious little thump and took it in to Aunt Minnie.

"I guess I'll just sit awhile and sip it," decided her aunt. "It's cozier. What do you do, young man?"

Alicia caught her breath sharply, but Donald was very polite. He told Aunt Minnie all about his job; answered a hundred questions! It took a long time. Alicia fidgeted, but it was no use. Aunt Minnie stayed until Donald rose to go.

"It's eleven o'clock," he exclaimed, pocketing his watch. "I always make it a habit to start home at eleven."

Alicia, looking into his nice young face, with the big brown eyes, could have wept. She did weep—when she reached her room!

The next evening Alicia took elaborate precautions. She was carrying a glass of warm milk up the stairs as Donald arrived.

"There," she thought, settling down on the divan. "That ought to fix Aunt Minnie!"

But little did she know the demands of insomnia! This time it was a hot water bottle Aunt Minnie plaintively requested. It seemed the milk, alone, was of little use!

Gritting her small white teeth behind a frozen little smile Alicia went to prepare the hot water bottle—and then sat, with flaming cheeks, watching Aunt Minnie rock and allow the thing to cool until eleven!

And then it was Donald's last night! Alicia's fingers shook as she prepared Aunt Minnie's warm milk and filled the hot water bottle.

"Donald," she murmured some time later, "this is our last night—"

She snuggled close. Donald's arm went around her—

"Alice, honey," came Aunt Minnie's thin voice from the hall, "is there any extra milk?" She shuffled into the room explaining, "I couldn't sleep. I thought maybe another glass—"

Choking down a sob, Alicia ran into the kitchen and began frantically warming milk. It was ten o'clock. Only one little hour and Donald would be gone—forever! Alicia's thoughts scurried around like small mice in a wire trap. Hot tears burned in the lovely eyes.

"I—I'll call her out—and tell her!" she flamed. "As soon as she drinks her milk! Let her get mad! Let Daddy get mad! I don't care!"

Aunt Minnie received the milk and sipped slowly.

"You know," she remarked suddenly, "when you two are married I'm going to give you that cottage at the lake next to mine as a wedding present! You're going to marry her, aren't you, young man?" she inquired sharply.

"Why, yes—if she'll have me," agreed Donald, surprised.

"Course I knew it," said Aunt Minnie. "I could tell by the way you talked about Alice when she was out getting things that you was in love with her! He's just like your Uncle Hiram, honey," she beamed, patting Alicia's icy hand. "The quiet kind. I thought he never would propose to me! But, don't you worry, she added sagely, "they make the best husbands!" Smiling contentedly, Aunt Minnie went padding off to bed.

And this time Donald forgot to go.

"She's a great old girl—your Aunt Minnie," he grinned. "Her—and her insomnia!"

In [illegible] Alicia was no longer [illegible] —but a radiant, newly [illegible]!

Would Reach to Moon

Postage stamps printed at the bureau of engraving and printing in a single average year, if laid end to end, would reach from the earth to the moon, according to an authority. The line would exceed 200,000 miles, or eight times the circumference of the globe, and 25 different colors would be represented in the chain. Stacked in sheets of 100 stamps each, the annual stamp production would make 92 piles as high as the Washington monument. Eight hundred tons of paper, 430 tons of ink and 240 tons of gum are used in an ordinary 12-month period.

Indian Names of Months

The names of the months in Chippewa language, translated into English, are as follows: January, spirit month; February, suckerfish month; March, snow-crest month; April, breaking-of-snowshoes month; May, month of flowers; June, strawberry month; July, raspberry month; August, blueberry month; September, month of gathering with rice; October, fall-of-the-leaf month; November, month of freezing, and December, little month of the spirit.

Sailors' Safeguard

Sailors at the New London (Conn.) submarine base learn to save themselves if trapped beneath the water by entering the base of a 200-foot tower filled with salt water and working themselves to the top. They wear special diving suits.

Aunt Minnie—Cupid's Aid

By MARIAN P. JOHNSON

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

"YOU'LL be going back East soon, Donald," murmured Alicia Hall wistfully.

She was being a "blue girl" tonight. Her eyes were blue gentians, fringed with lovely darkened lashes, her little silk frock was a smooth blue sheath enfolding her like the clinging petals of a flower; even her soft young voice had a "blue" note in it. She had practiced that sentence carefully this very night for a full half hour before her mirror—with gestures!

"I'll miss you so," sighed Alicia.

"Will you really?" asked Donald, even a little eagerly, it seemed. Alicia slid a little closer.

And, then it happened! A soft, padding step in the hall, a muffled fumbling along the wall, and then a voice—Aunt Minnie's voice.

"Alice, honey, I can't find the switch!" And Aunt Minnie, clad in a shapeless wrapper, her feet in felt slippers, appeared in the doorway. "It's my insomnia," she complained. "I couldn't sleep a wink. It's bothered me ever since your Uncle Hiram died! I thought maybe a glass of warm milk—oh, who's the young man, Alice?"

"It's—Donald Tilden, Aunt Minnie," said Alicia. "We used to go to school together. He's home on vacation, you see!"

"Hum-m-m," said Aunt Minnie.

"I—I'll get your milk for you," offered Alicia.

"Why did she have to come to visit just now?" wailed Alicia, pouring milk. "And why must she also be cursed with insomnia? Just two more nights and Donald will go back East for another year—and some scheming little huzzy will probably marry him!"

She set the glass on a small tray with a vicious little thump and took it in to Aunt Minnie.

"I guess I'll just sit awhile and sip it," decided her aunt. "It's cozier. What do you do, young man?"

Alicia caught her breath sharply, but Donald was very polite. He told Aunt Minnie all about his job; answered a hundred questions! It took a long time. Alicia fidgeted, but it was no use. Aunt Minnie stayed until Donald rose to go.

"It's eleven o'clock," he exclaimed, pocketing his watch. "I always make it a habit to start home at eleven."

Alicia, looking into his nice young face, with the big brown eyes, could have wept. She did weep—when she reached her room!

The next evening Alicia took elaborate precautions. She was carrying a glass of warm milk up the stairs as Donald arrived.

"There," she thought, settling down on the divan. "That ought to fix Aunt Minnie!"

But little did she know the demands of insomnia: This time it was a hot water bottle Aunt Minnie plaintively requested. It seemed the milk, alone, was of little use!

Gritting her small white teeth behind a frozen little smile Alicia went to prepare the hot water bottle—and then sat, with flaming cheeks, watching Aunt Minnie rock and allow the thing to cool until eleven!

And then it was Donald's last night! Alicia's fingers shook as she prepared Aunt Minnie's warm milk and filled the hot water bottle.

"Donald," she murmured some time later, "this is our last night—"

She snuggled close. Donald's arm went around her—

"Alice, honey," came Aunt Minnie's thin voice from the hall, "is there any extra milk?" She shuffled into the room explaining, "I couldn't sleep. I thought maybe another glass—"

Choking down a sob, Alicia ran into the kitchen and began frantically warming milk. It was ten o'clock. Only one little hour and Donald would be gone—forever! Alicia's thoughts scurried around like small mice in a wire trap. Hot tears burned in the lovely eyes.

"I—I'll call her out—and tell her!" she flamed. "As soon as she drinks her milk! Let her get mad! Let Daddy get mad! I don't care!"

Aunt Minnie received the milk and sipped slowly.

"You know," she remarked suddenly, "when you two are married I'm going to give you that cottage at the lake next to mine as a wedding present! You're going to marry her, aren't you, young man?" she inquired sharply.

"Why, yes—if she'll have me," agreed Donald, surprised.

"Course I knew it," said Aunt Minnie. "I could tell by the way you talked about Alice when she was out getting things that you was in love with her! He's just like your Uncle Hiram, honey," she beamed, patting Alicia's icy hand. "The quiet kind. I thought he never would propose to me! But, don't you worry, she added sagely, "they make the best husbands!" Smiling contentedly, Aunt Minnie went padding off to bed.

And this time Donald forgot to go.

"She's a great old girl—your Aunt Minnie," he grinned. "Her—and her insomnia!"

In his arms Alicia was no longer a "blue girl"—but a radiant, newly [illegible]!!

Would Reach to Moon

Postage stamps printed at the bureau of engraving and printing in a single average year, if laid end to end, would reach from the earth to the moon, according to an authority. The line would exceed 200,000 miles, or eight times the circumference of the globe, and 25 different colors would be represented in the chain. Stacked in sheets of 100 stamps each, the annual stamp production would make 92 piles as high as the Washington monument. Eight hundred tons of paper, 430 tons of ink and 240 tons of gum are used in an ordinary 12-month period.

Indian Names of Months

The names of the months in Chippewa language, translated into English, are as follows: January, spirit month; February, suckerfish month; March, snow-crest month; April, breaking-of-snowshoes month; May, month of flowers; June, strawberry month; July, raspberry month; August, blueberry month; September, month of gathering with rice; October, fall-of-the-leaf month; November, month of freezing, and December, little month of the spirit.

Sailors' Safeguard

Sailors at the New London (Conn.) submarine base learn to save themselves if trapped beneath the water by entering the base of a 200-foot tower filled with salt water and working themselves to the top. They wear special diving suits.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF PENNINGTON COUNTY.
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA.

THURSDAY NOVEMBER 29, 1934

PLANS FOR BIG POULTRY SHOW ARE COMPLETED

Canadian Poultry Expert To Judge the Turkey Competition

One of the largest poultry shows ever sponsored by the Pennington county Poultry association will take place Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, December 4-7 at the city auditorium.

The fact that the poultry association is this year stressing the market class of turkeys and judging on type, size, and finish rather than on the feathers will give the growers of good market birds an opportunity to exhibit at this show.

Tuesday, December 4 has been designated as entry day, and birds may be brought in and entered between the hours of 10 o'clock in the morning, and 10 o'clock in the evening. Judging of the entries will take place on Wednesday and Thursday, and anyone interested may come during the morning and watch this proceeding.

Thomas Canfield, who is connected with the Gregerson hatcheries at St. Paul, and who has been a judge at the St. Paul poultry show for the past number of years, has been engaged to judge the chicken entries. Professor Herner of the Manitoba Agricultural College who is a well-known judge of turkeys, will have charge of judging turkey entries. Both men will present several addresses on poultry during the show.

Dr. W. A. Billings, extension veterinarian of the University of Minnesota, who has been most responsible for increasing the turkey production in the Northwest because of his confinement plan of raising turkeys, will speak on turkey deseases on Thursday afternoon.

Of special interest will be the novel turkey race put on by twenty business men and old timers of this city on Thursday at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The race is scheduled to begin at the corner of Main Avenue and Third street and will wind up at the auditorium corner. The business men participating in the race will be Rasmus Oen, Carl Froseth, Harry Brummund, Carl Christofferson, Lars Backe, Mike Burns, W. W. Prichard, Jr., Harry Rhodegaard, Martin Bothun, Ed. Lee, Ole Ostby, J. Provencher, L. J. Cerny, Dr. G. A. Penny, Ed. O'Hara, Jack Brendecke, Eli Rolland, Peter Engelstad, and Severt Benson. At the present time, the betting stands 10 to 7 that Mike Burns will be the winner of the race.

A banquet will be served by the American Legion Auxiliary members at the American Legion rooms at the auditorium on Wednesday evening at 6:30. Anyone interester in poultry raising may attend.

The annual meeting of the Pennington County Poultry association is to be held on Friday afternoon at one o'clock, the final day of the show.

WALLACE GIVES A SUMMARY OF CORN-HOG PLAN

Administration Will Offer Contracts to Signers of 1934 Plan

Provisions of the 1935 corn-hog contract which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will offer both to signers and non-signers of the 1934 contract were announced by Secretary Wallace and Administrator Davis on Monday as follows:

The largest corn acreage the producer may plant under this contract will be 90 percent of the average acreage planted on his farm in 1932-33. However, the producer may hold out of (corn) production from 10 to 30 percent of the two-year base average and receive corn benefit payments in proportion.

The corn adjustment payments will be 35 cents per bushel of yield estimated for the number of acres by which the corn land is kept below the 1932-33 average. The yield will be the average determined by the Community committee for all crop land in the farm which has been in corn at least once during the last five years.

The new contract permits the use of 75 percent as provided in the ing any crop, other than corn, for any purpose. It places no limitation on the total area devoted to cultivated crops, or on the total acreage of any particular crop, excepting corn. Neither does it limit the number of livestock, other than hogs, which may be kept of produced by the farmer.

SKATING RINKS TO BE OPENED ABOUT DEC. 1

Junior Hockey League to be Under Supervision of K. Lindberg

The oval rink, which is being constructed just east of the present municipal skating rink, is nearing completion and should be ready for use about the first of December according to A. M. Campbell, manager.

This oval rink is being constructed by men under a federal PWA project; the purpose being to relieve the congestion which occurred last year on the main rink as well as to provide a rink suitable for speed skating which is to be inaugurated here during the coming winter by Mr. Messenger, director of leisure time projects for men and boys in this district.

Other rinks to be built and maintained in the city by the state ERA are at the Northrop and Knox schools, one at Arnold avenue and Fifth street and another at Seventh street and Atlantic avenue.

A Junior Hockey League will be organized under the supervision of Kenneth Lindberg as soon as the season opens.

Speed skating will be inaugurated this winter, under the guidance of the State Emergency Relief according to Mr. Campbell, who states that J. G. Messenger will direct the activities in this district, including Pennington and Marshall counties.

The state will be divided into districts and regions, which will simplify the process of elimination, the winners of which will attend the meet, wherein winners from thruout the state will compete.

The counties included in this region are Pennington, Marshall, Red Lake, Roseau, Kittson, Polk, Clearwater and Mahnomen.

Classes in speed skating are as follows:

Junior hockey will be organized again this winter, Mr. Campbell states, just as soon as the rink is ready for use. This league will consist of four or five teams, depending upon on the number of players available. Boys wishing to take part in junior hockey ocmpetition should report to A. M. Campbell, at the Thief River Music store this week.

ANNUAL XMAS SEAL DRIVE TO START TODAY

Funds Are Used to Combat Tuberculosis and to Promote Health

The annual Christmas seal sale starts today, with all arrangements made to push the drive vigorously from now on until the closing day of the campaign. On the committee for this county are E. N. Reiersgord, St. Hilaire; Dr. B. C. Bernard, Mrs. A. M. Smith and Morris Bye.

The theme of the campaign this year commemorates the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of the first sanatorium in the United States for the modern treatment of tuberculosis. The seal design depicts "Little Red", as the cottage that served as the first sanatorium is called.

"Little Red" was established in the Adirondack Mountains by Dr. Edward Livingston Trudeau, and was made possible by his personal experience with the disease, his research and his persistance. His good work is continued today by this penny seal, by means of which local, state and national program is carried out to prevent, find and cure tuberculosis and promote the general health of the nation.

In addition to the design of the little red cottage standing among the pine trees in the snow, the Christmas Seal this year, as always, bears the double-barrel cross by which it may be distinguished from all other seals.

Governor Floyd B. Olson Urges Support of 28th Annual Xmas Seal Sale

Governor Floyd B. Olson issued the following statement stressing the importance of the Christmas Seal drive which starts today:

"The current drive for funds for the campaign against tuberculosis now being conduted by the Minnesota Public Health Association is the 28th annual Christmas Seal sale.

"As Governor, I wish to ask all citizens of the State to do their part in helping to obliterate the dreaded disease—tuberculosis. It is not necessary to remind you that the larger the fund raised in this drive, the more egective will be the campaign against tuberculosis.

"The emblem of the Christmas seal has become the hallmark of human advancement in saving youngsters from early death and giving them years of health, instead. This year the seal very appropriately bears the facsimile of the first sanatorium built in the United States.

"Minnesota, rated as one of the healthiest states in the Union, has long had the reputation of leading the nation in anti-tuberculosis activity.

"I ask that the people of our state contribute generously to this worthy cause and help us maintain Minnesota's present high rating among the states."

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Noto of Fertile left the early part of the week after spending the weekend with the former's brother and sister-in law, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Noto.

State SERA Recreational Tournament Will Have Sixty Thousand Participants

A state-wide, competitive sports program for more than 60,000 participants will be directed this winter by the recreational department of the Minnesota SERA.

Anything similar has never before been attempted in an American state, according to Geo. K. Tuttle, supervisor of recreation.

Plans contemplate contests in basketball and volleyball, speed skating and hockey. Except for the latter game, to which only men are eligible, entries are open for men, women and children.

The state athletic supervisor, J. W. Crossetti is in charge of the games, which will continue thru the winter months and terminate in the early spring.

For selective purposes, Mr. Crossett explained, Minnesota has been divided into districts, and these in turn into regions. District tournaments are arranged to select eligibles for the regional contests. Top notchers in the regional elimination games will fight for places in the finals.

The concluding events in speed skating and hockey are scheduled to be held in Minneapolis during the first week in February. St. Paul will be the site for the finals in basketball and volleyball during the first week in March, exact date to be announced later.

A wide variety of opportunities for exercise and diversion is offered to people of all ages and conditions thru the general leasure-time projects sponsored by the department, Mr. Tuttle added.

Physical well-being is promoted by community courses in broomball, handball and indoor baseball. Approximately 1,000 skating rinks in the state are available for skating and curling. Other branches of activity encouraged by the department are sled races, tobagganing, ice carnivals and snow sculpture.

Training in dramatics, handicrafts and music study are also important sections of the state recreational program for adolescents and adults, and schooling in puppet shows for children.

Smiley Community Club to Dedicate New Hall Saturday

The Smiley Community club will experience the materialization of a dream of three years when it dedicates its new hall on Friday evening, Nov. 30.

The hall has been built thru the concerted efforts of its members, funds having been raised thru entertainment and by donations by businessmen of Thief River Falls and members of the Smiley club The work was done by members of the club with the assistance of a carpenter who served as foreman. The construction was started on October 1st.

An acre of ground was donated for a site for the club home by Walter and Leon Lendobeja. The hall, which will serve as a Smiley township community center is of frame construction 30 by 60 feet and has a ten feet stage at one end under which a kitchen is built. The structure has a hardwood floor.

A good program of entertainment has been prepared for the gala opening on Friday evening, and the public is invited to attend. The hall is located on the Angle Road, 5 miles from the city; 2 miles east, 1 mile north and ½ mile east.

Paskewitz-Wegge

The marriage of Mable Pasewitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Paskewitz, to Edgar Wegge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wegge, took place Thursday, November 15 at the St. John's Lutheran church parsonage in this city with Rev. V. E. Schroeder reading the ceremony in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Wegge, brother and sister-in-law of the groom.

The bride graduated from Lincoln high school in 1930.

Mail Packages Early To Avoid Xmas Rush

Persons who intend to send parcels to foreign countries in time for Christmas should get them into the postoffice no later than December 10, according to A. Anderson, local postmaster.

In order to make sure of having parcels delivered in time for Christmas, Mr. Anderson suggests that they be mailed at least two days earlier than usual because delays during the Christmas rush cannot be avoided. The cooperation of the public is asked in wrapping packages securely and addressing them with pen and ink on light colored paper.

Arrangements for additional help has already been made by the local office according to Mr. Anderson. Additional space for the sorting of mail will also be made.

ROXBURY CLUB MEETS

The regular meeting of Rocksbury Comunity club will be held on Saturday evening, December 1st, instead of December 8th as previously announced.

Among the entertainment of the evening will be a drawing at which a quilt furnished by the ladies of the club will be given away.

Anti-Facism Meeting Wed. Dec. 5, at Co. Courthouse

According to an announcement made by Mr. Van Pelt today, the next meeting of the American League Against War and Fascism will be held at the court house Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p. m.

"All honest opponents of war and lovers of peace are urged to attend and do their bit in preventing another world war," said Mr. Van Pelt; "Another war would be sure to cost this nation millions of young men and boys, for no other purpose than to make profits for a few war makers and money mad people. We appeal to all individuals and organizations to join the American League Against War and Fascism and to use all of your energy and strength to prevent another war. Defeat Fascism, and you have also defeated war." Mr. Van Pelt said.

"The vast expenditures of the present government for war purposes were taken up at the Second U. S. Congress, and can be secured from the league on request. These expenditures were made at the expense of the farming and laboring masses and what should go for relief goes for machines of death. In the twenty-six states constituting the drouth area, thousands of families face hunger and desolation this winter; this desolation is crying a protest against every dollar being spent in the furtherance of war."

Mr. Van Pelt urges everyone who has the future welfare of the country at heart to attend the meeting Wednesday evening.

Lincoln Chorus Give Fine Presentation of Operetta

The Operetta, "In Old St. Louis" presented by the Lincoln high school chorus with the assistance of the Junior high school chorus was viewed by a capacity house last Friday eve. The large cast of eighty characters took its part well and showed the result of very capable coaching on the part of the directors, Miss Irma Sprirgen and Arnold E. Calrson.

The play was well woven together and portrayed life on the Mississippi by the early French traders. Waldal Gets Certificate of Election on Error, Recheck Shows; Day Starts Contest

Clearwater County Canvassing Board Makes Glaring Error in Shelvin Vote

Day Deprived of Vote on the Speakership. May Cost the House Setup

W. E. Day of Bagley instituted contest proceedings against the seating of Marius Waldal of Plummer as a member of the House of Representatives, Friday.

Waldal who was issued a certificate of election by the secretary of state, based on the report of the Clearwater county canvassing board, left for St. Paul Thursday evening to attend the caucus of the conservative house members.

Mr. Lewis, Bagley attorney who is handling the legal end of Mr. Day's contest, stated Friday that Waldal was given a lead by the most glaring error he had ever seen. The contest is based on the return from the Shevlin precinct in Clearwater county, where Waldal polled 35 votes. The canvassing board credited him with 84 votes in its report to the state and thereby secured him the certificate of election. Altho the county auditor found the error and wired a correction to the state canvassing board, that body either did not get the message in time, or disregarded it.

The error is a hard blow to the progressives of the house who are fighting to organize that body, as it deprives them of Mr. Day's vote on the speakership. In forcing Mr. Day to institute contest proceedings to gain his seat, it has also deprived him of his vote on the speakership, his committee chairmanship and entails quite an expense which he can not recover unles the legislature should make a special appropriation to reimburse him. Added to this there is a fifty-fifty chance of him being deprived of his seat and Waldal being seated in spite of the error if the conservatives succeed in organizing the house.

Harold Barker of Elbow Lake, the progressives' choice for speaker, stated to a Forum representative on Saturday, Nov. 17, that he was considering Mr. Day for an important chairmanship, possibly of the committee of apppropriations of which Mr. Day has been a member for several sessions, if he should be the successful candidate for the speakership. He expessed great much satisfaction over Mr. Day's re-election, which was not in question at that time, stating that Mr. Day's experience and clearsightedness would be an invaluable asset to the progressive forces.

Mr. Day and Theo. Torkelson of Renville county are the oldest members, in point of service, of the progressive members of the house, entering the legislature in January 1919. Only one other member has served as long continuously, that being L. E. Brophey of Minneapolis, a conservative.

Elofson Jewlers Lead In Bowling Tournament

The bowling League has gotten its tournament under way with the teams playing on the average of eight games each. The leading team on the basis of the present standing is that of the Ellofson Jewlery which has won six games and lost none for 1000%; the Land O' Lakes stands in second place with six wins and three losses for 666%; Oen's in third place with four wins and two losses for 666%; and other teams stand as follows: Live Power's 5 wins and four losses, Bratrud Clinic 3 wins and 3 losses, Thief River Pharmacy 2 wins and 4 losses, Times 3 wins and 6 losses, and the Glueks last 1 win and 8 losses.

The tournament this year gives all teams equal chance regardless of the individual strength of the bowlers of the team because of the handicap set by the manager of the local alleys. The handicap is figured on the basis of a set number of games played before the regular season and if the total score of the entering team does not average 2500 then the difference is indicated as the handicap for that team. This system is used in nearly all league play and is found to be the best way to keep interest in the tournament thruout the season.

Bridgeman Creamery to Put Large Sign North of Auditorium

At the regular meeting of the city council last Tuesday evening an application for a permit was made by the Bridgeman-Russell Creameries to put up a sign on the property north and across the street from the city auditorium. Wm. A special permit was needed in order to put this sign up as there is an ordinance which prohibits the erection of signs in the residential district of the city without a special permit from the city council. The permit was granted.

Application was made by Alex Campbell for the American Legion for the cooperation of the city water and Light Dept. in the flooding and maintaining of the various skating rinks being constructed in the city; the application was granted and Mr. Campbell was assured of the cooperation of the city in the matter of maintaining the rinks.

Carlie Johnson brought up the dog ordinance again and was told that before any further action could be taken on the complaint that 50% of the people residing within 300 feet of the alleged disturbance would have to sign a petition to the effect that they objected to the alleged disturbance

Canadian Poultry Expert To Judge the Turkey Competition

One of the largest poultry shows ever sponsored by the Pennington county Poultry association will take place Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, December 4-7 at the city auditorium.

The fact that the poultry association is this year stressing the market class of turkeys and judging on type, size, and finish rather than on the feathers will give the growers of good market birds an opportunity to exhibit at this show.

Tuesday, December 4 has been designated as entry day, and birds may be brought in and entered between the hours of 10 o'clock in the morning, and 10 o'clock in the evening. Judging of the entries will take place on Wednesday and Thursday, and anyone interested may come during the morning and watch this proceeding.

Thomas Canfield, who is connected with the Gregerson hatcheries at St. Paul, and who has been a judge at the St. Paul poultry show for the past number of years, has been engaged to judge the chicken entries. Professor Herner of the Manitoba Agricultural College who is a well known judge of turkeys, will have charge of judging turkey entries. Both men will present several addresses on poultry during the show.

Dr. W. A. Billings, extension veterinarian of the University of Minnesota, who has been most responsible for increasing the turkey production in the Northwest because of his confinement plan of raising turkeys, will speak on turkey deseases on Thursday afternoon.

Of special interest will be the novel turkey race put on by twenty business men and old timers of this city on Thursday at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The race is scheduled to begin at the corner of Main Avenue and Third street and will wind up at the auditorium corner. The business men participating in the race will be Rasmus Oen, Carl Froseth, Harry Brummund. Carl Christofferson, Lars Backe, Mike Burns, W. W. Prichard, Jr., Harry Rhodegaard, Martin Bothun, Ed. Lee, Ole Ostby, J. Provencher, L. J. Cerny, Dr. G. A. Penny, Ed. O'Hara, Jack Brendecke, Eli Rolland, Peter Engelstad, and Severt Benson. At the present time, the betting stands 10 to 7 that Mike Burns will be the winner of the race.

A banquet will be served by the American Legion Auxiliary members at the American Legion rooms at the auditorium on Wednesday evening at 6:30. Anyone interester in poultry raising may attend.

The annual meeting of the Pennington County Poultry association is to be held on Friday afternoon at one o'clock, the final day of the show.

WALLACE GIVES A SUMMARY OF CORN-HOG PLAN

Administration Will Offer Contracts to Signers of 1934 Plan

Provisions of the 1935 corn-hog contract which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will offer both to signers and non-signers of the 1934 contract were announced by Secretary Wallace and Administrator Davis on Monday as follows:

The largest corn acreage the producer may plant under this contract will be 90 percent of the average acreage planted on his farm in 1932-33. However, the producer may hold out of (corn) production from 10 to 30 percent of the two-year base average and receive corn benefit payments in proportion.

The corn adjustment payments will be 35 cents per bushel of yield estimated for the number of acres by which the corn land is kept below the 1932-33 average. The yield will be the average determined by the Community committee for all crop land in the farm which has been in corn at least once during the last five years.

The new contract permits the use of 75 percent as provided in the ing any crop, other than corn, for any purpose. It places no limitation on the total area devoted to cultivated crops, or on the total acreage of any particular crop, excepting corn. Neither does it limit the number of livestock, other than hogs, which may be kept of produced by the farmer.

ANNUAL XMAS SEAL DRIVE TO START TODAY

Funds Are Used to Combat Tuberculosis and to Promote Health

The annual Christmas seal sale starts today, with all arrangements made to push the drive vigorously from now on until the closing day of the campaign. On the committee for this county are E. N. Reiersgord, St. Hilaire; Dr. B. C. Bernard, Mrs. A. M. Smith and Morris Bye.

The theme of the campaign this year commemorates the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of the first sanatorium in the United States for the modern treatment of tuberculosis. The seal design depicts "Little Red", as the cottage that served as the first sanatorium is called.

"Little Red" was established in the Adirondack Mountains by Dr. Edward Livingston Trudeau, and was made possible by his personal experience with the disease, his research and his persistance. His good work is continued today by this penny seal, by means of which local, state and national program is carried out to prevent, find and cure tuberculosis and promote the general health of the nation.

In addition to the design of the little red cottage standing among the pine trees in the snow, the Christmas Seal this year, as always, bears the double-barrel cross by which it may be distinguished from all other seals.

Governor Floyd B.Olson Urges Support of 28th Annual Xmas Seal Sale

Governor Floyd B. Olson issued the following statement stressing the importance of the Christmas Seal drive which starts today:

"The current drive for funds for the campaign against tuberculosis now being conduted by the Minnesota Public Health Association is the 28th annual Christmas Seal sale.

"As Governor, I wish to ask all citizens of the State to do their part in helping to obliterate the dreaded disease—tuberculosis. It is not necessary to remind you that the larger the fund raised in this drive, the more egective will be the campaign against tuberculosis.

"The emblem of the Christmas seal has become the hallmark of human advancement in saving youngsters from early death and giving them years of health, instead. This year the seal very appropriately bears the facsimile of the first sanatorium built in the United States.

"Minnesota, rated as one of the healthiest states in the Union, has long had the reputation of leading the nation in anti-tuberculosis activity.

"I ask that the people of our state contribute generously to this worthy cause and help us maintain Minnesota's present high rating among the states."

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Noto of Fertile left the early part of the week after spending the weekend with the former's brother and sister-in law, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Noto.

State SERA Recreational Tournament Will Have Sixty Thousand Participants

A state-wide, competitive sports program for more than 60,000 participants will be directed this winter by the recreational department of the Minnesota SERA.

Anything similar has never before been attempted in an American state, according to Geo. K. Tuttle, supervisor of recreation.

Plans contemplate contests in basketball and volleyball, speed skating anl hockey. Except for the latter game, to which only men are eligible, entries are open for men, women and children.

The state athletic supervisor, J. W. Crossetti is in charge of the games, which will continue thru the winter months and terminate in the early spring.

For selective purposes, Mr. Crossett explained, Minnesota has been divided into districts, and these in turn into regions. District tournaments are arranged to select eligibles for the regional contests. Top notchers in the regional elimination games will fight for places in the finals.

The concluding events in speed skating and hockey are scheduled to be held in Minneapolis during the first week in February. St. Paul will be the site for the finals in basketball and volleyball during the first week in March, exact date to be announced later.

A wide variety of opportunities for exercise and diversion is offered to people of all ages and conditions thru the general leasure-time projects sponsored by the department, Mr. Tuttle added.

Physical well-being is promoted by community courses in broomball, handball and indoor baseball. Approximately 1,000 skating rinks in the state are available for skating and curling. Other branches of activity encouraged by the department are sled races, tobagganing, ice carnivals and snow sculpture.

Training in dramatics, handicrafts and music study are also important sections of the state recreational program for adolescents and adults, and schooling in puppet shows for children.

Anti-Facism Meeting Wed. Dec. 5, at Co. Courthouse

According to an announcement made by Mr. Van Pelt today, the next meeting of the American League Against War and Fascism will be held at the court house Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p. m.

"All honest opponents of war and lovers of peace are urged to attend and do their bit in preventing another world war," said Mr. Van Pelt; "Another war would be sure to cost this nation millions of young men and boys, for no other purpose than to make profits for a few war makers and money mad people. We appeal to all individuals and organizations to join the American League Against War and Fascism and to use all of your energy and strength to prevent another war. Defeat Fascism, and you have also defeated war." Mr. Van Pelt said.

"The vast expenditures of the present government for war purposes were taken up at the Second U. S. Congress, and can be secured from the league on request. These expenditures were made at the expense of the farming and laboring masses and what should go for relief goes for machines of death. In the twenty-six states constituting the drouth area, thousands of families face hunger and desolation this winter; this desolation is crying a protest against every dollar being spent in the furtherance of war."

Mr. Van Pelt urges everyone who has the future welfare of the country at heart to attend the meeting Wednesday evening.

CHAUFFEURS LICENSES RENEWED IN NOVEMBER

The following provision of law contained in Section 4, Chapter, 433 will be of particular interest at this time to chauffeurs and motor vehicle owners who employ chauffeurs:

> "All chauffeurs' licenses issued hereunder shall expire at midnight on December 31 of the year for which it is isued, but may be renewed without examination upon such evidence as shall satisfy the secretary of state that the licensee is qualified to continue as a chauffeur, but no renewal of a license issued before Nov. 1, in any year shall be granted unless application for such renewal is made during the month of November of the year for which the license was issued."

Chauffeurs expecting to renew their licenses will do well to bear this in mind for by making application to the secretary of state during the month of November they may be spared the inconvenience and extra expense of taking an examination.

Mike Holm, secretary of state, reports that a very large portion of the chauffeurs of the state have not yet sent in their applications. Application blanks were sent out from the secretary of state's office in St. Paul to every chauffeur in the state during the last week of October.

"Many of these blanks have been returned to the office unclaimed," says Mr. Holm, "evidently because those particular chauffeurs have changed their addreses without reporting the change to this office. However, if the chauffeurs will address a letter to this office at once we shall be glad to forward the necessary blanks."

There is no provision in the law for extending the time for renewal without examination. Therefore if the application is not mailed to the secretary of state at St. Paul, before December 1, he cannot issue a license for the coming year except upon a regular examination.

BELIEVE 3,500 DEAD IN SPANISH REVOLT

New York—A conservative estimate of 3,000 dead in the recent Spanish uprisings is made by the Associated Press in a copyrighted article. The wounded are placed at 10,000 and the property loss is thought to be approximately half a billion dollars.

The Austurian fighting, among the miners in Northern Spain is credited with 3,000 dead, 7,000 injured and about half of the total property damage. About 100 were killed in Madrid, and slightly more in Barcelona and vicinity.

"The revolt is suppressed," the Associated Press states, "but political troubles go on, and there are ominous rumblings which portend new troubles for Premier Alejandro Lerroux ."

WANT TO GO TO WAR?

Washington, D. C.—The Infantry Journal, supporting a new proposal that identification numbers be tattooed on both shoulders and both hips of enlisted soldiers, states that it was "impossible to identify hundreds of killed and wounded in the World War because identification tags were missing." The new proposal would make identification possible in almost every case because seldom indeed would the remains of a victim not include one of the specified parts of the body.

SOCIALIST COMPLETES 30 YEARS AS ELECTED OFFICIAL

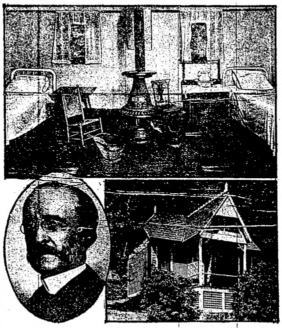
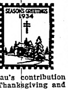
Christmas Seal Commemorates First United States Sanatorium





(Lower Right) In this one room cottage the modern treatment of tuberculosis was begun in February, 1885, at Saranac Lake, N. Y. It marked the beginning of the sanatorium movement in the United States. (Top) Interior of the cottage. (Lower Left) The late Dr. Edward Livingston Trudeau, who cured himself of tuberculosis and then opened the sanatorium for the treatment of others. (Insert) This year's Christmas Seal, which commemorates the fiftieth anniversary of Dr. Trudeau's contribution to American medicine. The seals are sold between Thanksgiving and Christmas to finance the fight against tuberculosis which still kills more persons between the ages of 15 and 45 years of age than any other disease.

Minnesota's first tuberculosis sanatorium was built in 1905. Today there are more than 2000 beds available to tuberculosis sufferers in the fifteen county and state institutions, which offer modern scientific treatment to rich and poor alike.

St. Paul Barbers Union Shop to Serve Jobless

The Barbers' Union of St. Paul and the Minnesota SERA have joined forces in a war on untrimmed beards and shocks of hair.

A barber project has been set up with a two-fold purpose. One is to help the city's homeless to keep tidy thru regular contacts with the shears and razors. The other aims to render corresponding service to the wards of Ramsey county in its charitable institutions.

The stationary parlor gives emoluments to barbers, whose tools would otherwise lie idle and unproductive on the shelves. Here penniless transients can have their locks shorn and stubbles erased without charge.

At regular intergals, these hairdressing artists visit the various welfare establishments of the county, to give the inmates the benefit of their art.

SERA Founds Mattress Factory For the Jobless

Manufacture of mattresses for the needy in Northern Minnesota has begun in the SERA factory at Duluth.

This is the third unit in the setup to produce a total of 60,000 mattresses for the state's relief families. Two plants of the same nature are located in Minneapolis and St. Paul respectively.

A British educator holds that 20 per cent of the people are subnormal.

Transient in Camps Revert to the Ox Cart

Oxen yoked as draft animals are now familiar sights in the transient camps operated by the Minnesota SERA.

Horses and tractors are out of the question in the camps, for financial reasons. The primitive motive power was furnished by human muscles, until the drouth cattle in the north were to be disposed of. A certain number was allotted to the camps for slaughtering.

Then a simple solution of the motive power problem occured to O. W. Behrens, director of the transient relief division. He selected the best steers to be trained to the yoke and thus become useful in other ways, besides as food.

This explains why now 20 yoke of oxen in various transient camps are hauling logs, pulling plows and doing other work, which their ancestors performed before them.

The demand for motive power in the camps has been economically solved.

VIENNA SOCIALISTS RALLY SECRETLY

Vienna—Socialists here celebrated the anniversary of the founding of the Republic in secret rallies held in the forests near Vienna. The largest gathering was on a hill near Kaltenleutgeben, where 2,000 assembled. Another meeting at Pressbaum, attended by 1,000 was surprised by police. One demonstrator was either killed or committed suicide under police examination.

EXPERTS WILL ANALIYZE MINNESOTAS NEED FOR FEDERAL RELIEF FUNDS

Minnesota's entire industrial and economic structure will be examined by experts from the FERA to establish a definite basis for determination of the state's relief needs.

Announcement to this effect has been made by T. J. Edmonds, regional representative, FERA. He reports that the financial department of the National relief administration has instructed its special representative, Lent D. Upson, to cause surveys along these lines to be made in all the states.

It is deemed vitally important to ascertain with certainty the public welfare needs of Minnesota, and other states, and the extent to which each should meet them thru efforts of their own, against the background of known assets.

Hence, the study will be as inclusive as possible and delve into the state's natural resources and tangible wealth, magnitude of tax delinquency, yield from income tax and financial condition of industries and banks.

Mr. Edmonds also announced that Frank Bane, director of the American Public Welfare association, and a FERA advisor, will come west to discuss with the state administrators and the regional office all the questions pertinent to the inquiry.

Invaluable benefits accrue from complete case records in the hands of trained ingestigators, Mr. Edmonds said. The gross relief cost, he stated, is usually proportionately less in states where staffs of efficient relief workers have been organized.

REPEAL AND THE EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL ON PARENTS AND THE CHILDREN TO BE

By W. G. Calderwood

Now that the upswing of the use of intoxicating liquors is again sweeping over the country since repeal, it is timely to study the findings of science in the field of the probable, or at least the possible, effect of alcoholism of parents upon the child life that is to be.

One of the most careful students of this phase of the liquor problem is Dr. Taavetti Laitinen of Finland. He was a child specialist and as a proftssor in the medical college at Helsingfors, he gave particular attention to hereditary traits and pre-natal influences. One of his outstanding studies was of 5,763 families with 19,519 children. The parents were divided into three groups: first, abstainers; second, moderate drinkers, who drank on an average not more than one glass of 4 percent Finnish beer per day; third, immoderate drinkers who indulged more freely, and sometimes to excess.

Of the children of the abstainers, 13 percent died in infancy as compared with 23 percent of the children of the moderate and 32 per cent of the immoderate drinkers.

The late Dr. Rudolph Demme, the Swiss child specialist and professor in the University at Berne, selected ten abstaining or very temperate families and ten intemperate, the entire group being situated socially and economically very similarly

There were 61 children in the temperate group and 57 in the other. Five of the children in the temperate group were defective physicpared with 25 in the intemperate. Six of the children in the temperate group were defectige physically against 22 in the intemperate. This left 50 normal children in the temperate, and ten normal in the intemperate group.

On a percentage basis, 82 per cent of the children of the temperate families were normal as compared with 17.5 persent of the heavier drinkers.

These studies were made by men of high standing in the scientific world, in countries where there is no moral taboo upon the moderate use of intoxicants. This is the voice of science, uninfluenced by any outside slant or prejudice.

Trucks Used in Relief Must Stand Inspection

Plans are being formulated towards a state-wide inspection of all trucks in the service of the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief Administration), it is announced by L. P. immerman, acting administrator.

Only vehicles in good condition and adequately equipped can be used on SERA jobs. They must conform to standards, fixed by the division of safety, according to C. H. Zealand, director. SERA inspectors will examine as to fitness and equipment.

Owners of trucks passing muster, will receive certificates of approval. Defective trucks must be repaired and again subjected to final inspection, Mr. Zealand said.

Examination has started in St. Paul, where the municipal equipment building, 891 No. Dale st., is used for the purpose. A definite procedure is being worked out, applicable to the entire state. Drivers of SERA trucks will be notified when and where examinations are to be held.

KRZYCKI PREDICTS WAVE OF LOCKOUTS

CLEVELAND— Shutdowns of factorities will be adopted widely by industrialists as a weapon against spreading labor organization Leo Krzycki, national chairman of the Socialist party and a vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, told the Cleveland Federation of Labor at its regular meeting here.

The National Association of Mannufacturers is seriously considering lockouts as a regular weapon against labor, Krzycki says. This program was primarily inspired by the recent action of Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., stores in Cleveland of announcing withdrawal from the community because of labor disputes.

EUROPE TRIES CERTAIN PUNISHMENT FOR DRIVERS

Some European countries are trying a new method of encouraging careful driving on the highways. Every time two cars have a collision, the drivers of both cars are put in jail for three days while an official investigation is made.

London, England, plans to hold automobile drivers entirely responsible for all injuries to pedestrians who cross the streets at regular, designated crossings. If a pedestrian is struck while he is within the boundaries of a regular crossing, the driver will automatically be judged guilty and no excuses will be accepted.

GERMAN EXPATRIATES ANNOUNCE THEY WILL FIGHT NAZIS TO END

New York (TIS)The official announcement of the Hitler Government depriving 28 Germans of their citizenship for actions "hostile to the leader anl the Nazi state" has met with a sharp rebuke on the part of two of the victims, at present residing in the United States.

These two leading anti-Nazis are Martin Plettl, former president of the German Clothing Workers Union, and Gerhart Seger, exiled Social-Democratic Reichstag deputy and former general secretary of the German Peace Society. Mr. Plettl is president of the "Deutcher Freiheits Bund" (League of Free Germans), and active in the fight against Nazism and its sympathizers in America. Mr. Steger, who escaped from a German concentration camp after nine months of torture and sufferings, is at present on a lecture tour thruout the United States.

Calmly announcing that "this step on the part of the Nazi rulers does not influence my actions", Mr. Seger stated in an interview with TIS that "my hostility against the monstrosity which holds sway over the Germany of today is in no way altered. It was, however, the Nazi leader of the German War Invalids Association, Herr Oberlindober, who declared 'that all those who suffered and bled for Germany on the battlefields, are honorary citizens of Germany'. Being a war veteran, I have earned this honorary citizenship.

"The day when I was forced to flee from my German fatherland where my ancestors lived for centuries, I took my German heredity and my deep-rooted affiliation with all that is German in the best sense o the word, with me. Not even the Hitler government, strange as it is to the German people, can take these from me. The possession of a passport, or any other piece of paper, does not make me or unmake a German.

"It is a great satisfaction for me to know that the Nazi government is recognizing by its action the battle which I and so many others within and outside of Germany, are waging against the present perversion of the real Germany. The revocation of my citizenship, so brazenly announced by the brown shirted masters, will only serve to remind people the world over that tyrants backed up by an army of heavily armed gangsters, are rulnig over Germany.

"The fight goes on until the great battle for tht liberation of the German people is won, and humanity and freedom again restored on German soil."

MINNESOTA BELOW MOST STATES IN AUTO TAXES

Minnesota taxes its motorists less than any other state in the Union except North Dakota, and Kansas, according to tabulations just received by the state highway department from Washington.

In the matter of motor vehicle license fees and gasoline taxes, Minnesota motorists pay almost one-third less than the national average, altho this state maintains a much larger trunk highway system than most of the others.

The national average for the individual motorists, include both license fees and gas tax, was $34.50 in 1933, the American Association of State Highway Officials reports. In Minnesota the average was only $24.41.

California and Nebraska show slightly lower gas and license fee averages than Minnesota, but both these states also assess a personal property tax against automobiles which brings their total motor vehicle tax higher than Minnesota's.

Foresters Strive to Check Grub Menace

State Foresters are experimenting with various poisons and chemicals to serve as a control of the white grub, the larva of the Brown June beetle, which has caused considerable damage to young seedlings in tree nurseries of the state. These insects in the larval stage live immediately below the surface of the ground and feed on roots of various plants.

In the nursery the first indication of the injury appears when the young seedlings turn brown, according to Grover Conzet, State forester. He stated that upon pulling the seedlings it is found that the roots have been served from the plants. When larvae occur in large numbers the damage to stock growing in nursery beds is great.

Although no definite means of control have been developed as yet, it is hoped that some simple method of killing or controlling the insects will be worked out soon.

At the state nursery at Badoura, near Akeley, this insect has not as yet caused any amage. The soil is finely pulverized before planting and this tends to destroy the grubs and expose the eggs in the soil.

Raccoon Season Ends December 1

Minnesota's coon hunters will be compelled to forego indulging in their favorite sport Sunday, December 1. The open season for the taking of racoons ends on that date in the state. The season opened November 10.

Attention was called by Charles McFarlane, Deputy Director of the Division of Game and Fish to properly prepare pelts in order to secure the top market prices. Protected furbearers upon which there is now open season, besides raccoon, are gray and fox squirrels, skunk and mink.

"Skinning and stretching of pelts is very important as good pelts that are improperly handled bring only poor prices," Mr. McFarlane said. "Here are a few pointers that should be remembered:

"Always skin animals at once if possible."

"Such skins as coyote, fox, mink, skunk, weasel and wolf should be cased. Others, including recoon, should be left open."

"Always use a good sharp knife Have good stretching boards of proper size. Remove all fat and flesh from pelt with a dull knife. Remove all blood, mud, burrs, and the like from the fur. Dry pelts in a cool, shady, well ventilated place. Fox and wolf should be turned fur side out before selling. This should be done before the pelt has dried hard, replacing on board, fur out, to finish the drying process."

"Know the state laws relating to the taking of furbearing animals."

NO WILD MIGRATORY WATER-FOWL MAY BE RETAINED NOW

Under Federal regulations the time for the legal retaining of wild ducks and other migratory waterfowl expired Wednesday, November 21, officials of the state Division of Game and Fish pointed out.

"Ten days following the close of the season is the maximum time allowed for the retaining of wild migratory water fowl according to federal rulings," Erling Swenson, Division Director, said, as he joined in warning Minnesota residents of this regulation.

He also urged all holders of hunting licenses to make returns of game taken at as early a date as pssible. Failure to file returns can ber license next year, Director Swenson cautioned.

Figures compiled by the Division of Game and Fish for the small game season of 1933 revealed that a total of 265,399 ducks were taken as actually reported. Mallards again headed the list of Minnesota ducks with 92,178 reported. Other popular ducks with gunners last season were bluebills and green and blue-winged teal. On down the list were canvasbacks, readheads, pintail and shovelers with a wide scattering of other duck species with a wide scattering of other duck species and small kills completing the tabulated report.

In all, 900 geese were reported taken for the 1033 season, Canadian honkers leading the list with 552 actually listed.

The lowly coot or mudhen as usual provided the most popular of the shore birds, 20,654 being reported in the total of 23,241 birds in all.

Actual returns were only received from 26.4 per cent of the 186,600 small game hunting licenses sold.

Minimum Fire Losses In Protected Forests

Figures compiled by the United States Forest Service for last year indicate the value of adequate protection against fire, E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conservation commented in discussing Minnesota's policy with regard to forest fire prevention. He stated that the area swept over by forest fires was 20 times greater in unprotected sections than in regions where sufficient protection was accorded.

'Red Scare' Booklet Used in California

Those who saw the pamphlet entitled "Thirty Years From Now by Robert C. Emery, which was circulated in the recent campaign, may be interested to know that this same piece of Fascist literature was very freely distributed thruout California just before the election under the title, "Thunder Over California."

Sinclair's name was substituted for Olson's, Anglo-Saxon names for the Scandinavian, and the Catholic church for the Lutheran. The pamphlet appeared first in Minnesota, and described the horrible reign of terror that would supposedly follow Governor Olson's re-election.

The California reactionaries apparently thought the red scare booklet suitable for their purpose and took it over bodily, except for a few minor changes in names. The voters of California seem to have been more gullible in accepting this atrocious propaganda than were the people of Minnesota, altho it unfortunately had its evil effects here as well.

KANSAS DRYS PLAN TO BAN 3.2 BEER

With the determination of Kansas to retain its 54-year old status as a dry state the outstanding expression of state voters in the past election, prohibition leaders pressed Thursday for the mopping up of the 3.2 percent beer flood that followed its national legalization a year ago.

A probable plurality of 80,000 votes for retention of the constitutional prohibition amendment was seen as late votes were counted.

Geo. Y. Hammond, superintendent of the Kansas Anti-Saloon league will fight to suppress beer of 3.2 percent or less of alcohol which has been sold openly in Kansas under a supreme court decision holding it was up to judges and juries to determine whether the beverage was intoxicating in the absence of any statute defining intoxicants.

The fate of 3.2 beer rests with the incoming legislature, the complexion of which has not been determined yet.

Bees and Honey

It takes a swarm of 15,000 or more bees to produce about 40 pounds of honey in a normal season; the working life of a bee only lasts some six weeks.

PURSUING THE WILL O' THE WISP

It seems that another mirage is about to deceive the American people in its wanderings thru the desert of Depression. One would think that a plan so fantastic as the Townsend Pension plan would receive scant attention from people as well versed in the art of mathematics as the American people. The plan for old age pensions, sick benefits, maternity insuranse and other forms of protection for the people advanced by Congressman Ernest Lundeen and other Farmer-Laborites is being denounced as "socialism", "revolutionary", and "visionary" by the kept press and other spokesmen of the Financial interests. Yet their plan is conservative and does not propose to pay to anyone, amounts far in excess of their needs for a comfortable existence. But the Townsend Pension plan which proposes to pay to all over the age of sixty the sum of two hundred dollars per month, which any reasonable person will admit, is far in excess of what the average, or for that matter, even the most extravagant person over sixty years of age would require to live in luxury, is not made the butt of any denunciation, but on the other hand is apparently being to some extent at least, being encouraged by the spokesmen of the special interests .

The reason, we assume, must be that the Townsend plan being financed by a general sales tax would not be a threat to anyone's profits, but would at least for the short time that the circus lasts, make the possibilities for excessive profits greater than ever before, while the plan advocated by Congressman Lundeen, being financed by taxes on inheritances and swollen incomes, would tend to level off the swollen fortunes and use them to secure security and comfort for the great masses of the people.

And so it comes about, that those who advocate an old age pension of thirty dollars a month are "communists", and "wild eyed radicals", while others who would make the pension two hundred dollars a month are considered respectable people.

Townsend Pensions Plan clubs are springing up like mushrooms all over the country, gaining adherants by the millions, and, because it does not threaten anybody's profits it will probably go quite a long ways in the next session of Congress.

While the thoughtful may wonder how long the multitude must continue to pursue the Will o' the Wisp, the next stampede is on, for it is so much easier to run than to think.

UNICAMERAL LEGISLATIVE BODIES

The people of the United States will watch with much interest the state of Nebraska and its experiment with the unicameral (one house) legislature, says the New Ulm Review, adding that it is the first attempt to establish such a form of government in times like the present. So far as we know, it is the first modern attempt on the American continent. However, let us not forget that it is the only form ever used by the state of Norway, and in its Storting, it has the unicameral body functioning with efficiency second to no other government in the civilized world

Norse history, and the history of its law-making body is one of the most interesting in the world. Actually, Norway never was, except for the time that it was under Danish rule, an absolute monarchy. Ancient Kings, while presumable vested with the power of life and death over their subjects, frequently held "Ting", which would possibly be most correctly translated, council, or conference. A call would be issued to the Freemen of the community to meet in "Ting" and at this Ting, where fights and recourse to arms was punished with death, the King presided and administered justice among his subjects. Opinions could be freely expressed and no man could be legally punished for opinions expressed at such meetings. At such meetings laws would be formulated, laid down or repealed by royal decree. History shows that laws made contrary to the will of the people did not long endure, nor did the King who attempted to enforce them. These "Ting"s, held at various times and places, and it appears that they could be called together by most any Freeman, and not only by the King, finally developed into what is now the "Storting", or great council, having definite dates for convening and members elected in much the same maner as we elect our members of the Legislature or Congress. Other "Tings', such as the "Alting" and "Odelsting" are as we understand it pretty much committees of the Storting.

The growth and development of self-government in Norway has given the Norse people an inborn respect for law, and orderly progress, and withal a militant insistence on the rights of the citizen to, "Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness". It is a heritage they are justly proud of.

However, in our opinion, the results are much the same with bicameral representaiton as with unicameral. There is no question that America will watch with interest the experiment in unicameral representation in Nebraska, but noone need look for any great changes in Nebraska state political nor economic status as a result of this change. Some red tape may be eliminated, and some money now lost in duplication of efforts may be saved, but on the whole, good government and economic security depends, not on whether a state, or nation has a unicameral or bicameral legislature, but on the degree of social and political education possessed by its electorate, and the degree to which they put their knowledge to use.

CAPITOL NEWS REVIEW

By
A. I. Harris

With the opening of the deer season, the question of the future of Minnesota's deer herd is brought to the fore. It seems the concensus of opinion among experts that the deer herd, properly protected, can remain a permanent wild life resource in Minnesota, withstanding, as deer do, the encroachments of civiliation. Many experts feel that Minnesota eventually will come to the one-buck law which is said to have proven successful in Pennsylvania and other states.

* * * *

Unless the midwest farmer is given equality with industry, the nation will see an agrarian revolt rising from the farm lands which will develop into a powerful national third party, Governor Olson warned in a recent interview with eastern newspapermen. The Governor pointed out that all of the third parties in the past such as the Populists and Greenbackers which forced old line parties to radical changes of policy have come from just such movements, and added that when such a political uprising came, "I will be in it. There's nothing that I'd like better than to be the campaign manager of such a movement. I'd like to be the one who throws the bricks this time, instead of the one who ducks them." Ironically, he concluded: "You know, out here in the middle west we are beginning to suspect the east of 'Sectionalism.'"

Apparently the people of Minnesota made history when they returned Governor Olson to office for a third term. Since his re-election was sure, newspaper correspondents from all over the East have either been coming in person to the Capitol or else calling by long distance phone. One smart alec who called from Washington, D. C. and inquired "What is the first step you are going to take to abolish capitalism?" was met with: "Abolish that lousy sheet you work on."

Halls of the Capitol are already filled with scurrying legislators, lining up for the coming session of the Legislature which meets the first of January, 1935. The old timers are casting wary weather eyes at the clouds in the sky attempting to see which way the wind will blow, while the newcomers tag along desperately trying to acclimate themselves. One of the characteristics of a Legislature seems to be that it will jump which ever way the wind blows, which explains the blatant headlines of the Twin City newspapers in announcing that the Farmer-Labor party didn't have a chance in the Legislature when check on the legislators shows a good chance for coalition majorities in both houses.

The division of Accident Prevention of the State Industrial Commission issues a warning of some of the hazards which the comng winter months will present. Care should be taken where oil of any kind is used near or in connection with heating plants. Explosives or vapor-producing liquids should be removed from buildings in which stoves or open fire places are located, especially gasoline, alcohol and the like. Stacks, grates and other heating equipment should be in proper working condition. Last year there was a serious explosion when vapors from gasoline which leaked on the floor from a defective carburator circulated to the basement below and came in contact with the fire in the furnace. Remember that "an ounce of prevention is worth ap ound of cure."

On Saturday evening before the recent election, a speaker claiming to talk in the name of the Minnesota Division of the Izaak Walton League, under the guise of a talk on "conservation," delivered a vitriolic attack against the Conservation Commission. Whether the talk was authorized or not, it is hard to escape the conclusion that it was subsidized for political purposes. There is not a little evidence that the Executive Committee of the League during the past year or two has become political-minded either that or their actions have been very peculiar, to say the least.

Governor Olson left last week for Washington to discuss with Federal officials plans for drouth relief. It was intimated that a change in the organization of drouth relief with increased amounts would be asked of the united States government officials. Previously at a meeting in the State Office Building in St. Paul a group of farmers representing the drouth areas passed resolutions demanding that certain changes be made. Among the requests of the farmers were that federal aid be alotted directly to the state with the state administering the funds; that increases be made in the present allowance aof $25 for ten units per farm, and that repayment of loans by the federal government be made in kind instead of cash, It was said that under present drouth relief allotments there is no hope of the farmer ever getting to an income producing level and that the prospect of paying off his debts was very slim under present subsistence conditions.

A shortage of natural food occasioned by Minnesota's continued drouth, severe in many sections especially where upland game birds are abundant, means that it will be imperative for sportsmen's organizations and others interested to maintain bird feeding operations throughout the winter months, Erling Swenson, Game and Fish director, declared.

Huey P. Long, Big Man

Huey P. Long of Louisiana plans to run for the presidency of the United States in 1936, press dispatches say. "I am I," Long says in effect; and in a casual survey around, Huey sees no one besides himself that is fit for such a position. It must be admitted that what he lacked in ability he could make up in guts.

Chance for a Vacation

If you're good at guessing games and thinking of appropriate names for things, here's a chance to earn a three-month's vacation at the most unique educational institution in America—Commonwealth College, Mena Arkansas. They offer a forty-dollar scholarship to the one who sends in the best name for a workers' museum, to be opened at the college in December. The object of the museum is to depict the history of the working class, from ancient times to the present. Anyone interested will get information by writing to the college.

Commonwealth a Center of Culture

Amid beauty of a breath-taking sort, in the Arkansaw Ozarks a small group of "practical idealists," if there are any such animals, have gathered at Commonwealth to [illegible] Karl Marx, Lenin, the rise of Russia, the theory of the leisure class, and the history of the working class in general. Students and teachers wear overalls and gingham dresses; half of the regular class period is spent at useful labor raising food, while the other half is spent in informal discussion and debate. There are no formal classes but Commonwealth students acquire and astonishing culture in a short time. The college has attracted a great number of writers, and students of a high calibre.

The Bill of Rights

Two years ago Lucien Koch, young president of Commonwealth, made a pillgrimage with a couple campanions to the strike-ridden sections of Kentucky. To raise funds for the striking miners, they distributed copies of the first ten amendments to the United States constitution, known as the "Bill of Rights." There were people on the way who never dreamed that they had the right of free speech, the right "peaceably to assemble," etc.; and apparently the hired thugs of the coal interests in Kentucky had the same idea, for Koch and his companions were uncermoniously shown the way out when they arrived at their destination. Nor were they the only ones. Newspaper reporters were shot in the legs, and college students wishing to study the strike were treated roughly and told to move on, leaving the general public with the impression that Kentucky was a place where individual liberty was unheard of.

That the Bill of Rights should be new to many people is not strange. If we possessed all the rights guaranteed to us by it, all would be hunky-dory; but this would not sit so well with the overlords.

"I Disagree With What You Say, But I Defend to the Death Your Right to Say It"—Voltaire.

Last week it was my privilege to "boil down" an article in Common Sense by Michael Ross, in which it is assumed that present-day happenings have invalidated the conclusions of Karl Marx. As I condensed the thing for publication in the Forum several faults in the logic of the thing struck me; but I mention only one. Ross contended that, as the condition is now ripe for a "social revolution" and advantage has not been taken of the fact, it becomes necessary to reject Marxist conclusions.

Now, I can't see it that way. Society goes through certain distinct stages, which may be long or short, as conditions warrant. Russia in in 1917 experienced three distinct stages—liberalism, (under Milieukov), democratic socialism, (under Kerensky), and bolshevism, (under Lenin). Things moved quickly then. But there is no reason to assume that they will move as quickly in America. We are just now entering the liberal stage.

IT LOOKS LIKE ALTRUISM

Millions for advertising but not one cent for temperance. This is the sort of slogan that suggests itself as one reads reports from a convention of wholesale liquor dealers in New York. There it was announced that the wine and liquor industry would spend $16,000,000 this year to increase the consumption of liquor through advertising.

It should not be expected that any of this money will be devoted to making drinkers fewer or more moderate, though that was one of the professed aims behind the legalization of liquor in the United States. Then what will it be used for? To judge by the revenues promised, a tremendous public demand for liquor existed before this sort of advertising was allowed in the American press and in the American home via radio. The "public demand" for liquor was one of the best arguments repealists had. Then why disburse $16,000,000 among advertising mediums?

It looks like altruism. But of course, it isn't.

To begin with, liquor interests don't intend to spend any millions that they can't collest from somebody else. If consumers don't pay for liquor advertising—and a good bit more to boot—there will be a revision of advertising schedules in the near future. And if consumers are going to pay that bill they are going to do it in one of two ways—or both. By drinking more liquor themselves or by becoming more numerous.
quor and becoming more numerous.

The fact that the liquor business must operate under license is recognition that its product is potentially anti-social. It is recognition that some control is necessary to prevent abuse.

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Grays

Thoughts of home are creative of Thanksgiving.

The first fact in our childhood was not service rendered but service received. We did not pay in advance for the love that surrounded us in birth; a love that through the years never faltered in devotion and confidence through betimes cut to the heart with our waywardness.

Home life is built upon the honor system where children are first of all served with uncalculatng devotion and then expected to live by gratitude promptings. In most relationships we work first, with the pay coming afterwards; in a home we are paid first with lavished love and afterwards make our return in thankfulness.

Let us recall this Thanksgiving Season those who obscurely with happy patience, in the midst of difficult circumstances, lived for us and never once quit trying to do their bit and their best because we failed in recognition or in giving credit.

Souvenirs of Joy

BY LAWRENCE HAWTHORNE

Our lives are made of little things
From which our joys we borrow—
Sweet memories of yesterdays,
Bright dreams for each tomorrow;
We cherish many happy thoughts
That bring unending pleasure—
Romantic little souvenirs
Our hearts will always treasure.

A baby's tiny shoes . . . a pool . . .
A party invitation . . .
A garden wall and hollyhocks . . .
A lonely railway station . . .
'Tis things like these that memory
Surrounds with recollections
That grow more precious through the years,
And live in our affections.

A word of praise . . . a sprightly song . . .
An unexpected meeting
With some dear friend of long ago . . .
These things, however fleeting,
Will brighten all the day with cheer;
And when the stars are gleaming,
It is these happy little things
That linger in our dreaming.

THE PLATFORM WON THE DAY

(Minneapolis Labor Review)

Aside from Governor Floyd B. Olson there was nothing that got the Farmer-Labor party so talked about in some places in the last campaign as the FarmerLabor platform.

It is the contention of this publication that the platform aided in the re-electing Governor Olson and the other Farmer-Labor candidates. There are many, among them several Farmer-Laborites and some rather noteworthy ones, who disagree with this contention.

We feel that the platform was the heart and soul of the Farmer-Labor Cause. It made the party stand out in direct contrast to the shuffling reaction of the Republican party and the pussy-footing of the Democratic party.

It was the only campaign document that gave youth any hope.

It was the voluntary expression of the delegates at the nominating convention. It expressed what they thought and believed. Even if it had been a means to defeat if it expressed the beliefs of the party it should have been adopted.

However, it is the contention of this paper that the platform was what saved the day for the Farmer-Labor party.

What is the reason for that conclusion?

Where the Minneapolis Journal and the Minneapolis Tribune and the St. Paul Pioneer Press circulated in greatest numbers the platform had the widest advertising. The two former papers, at least, carried it on the front section pages each Sunday previous to election.

These papers have the largest circulation in Hennepin and Ramsey counties. It was in those counties that the Farmer-Labor party received its largest vote and made its greatest gains.

How then can it be denied that the platform carried the seeds of victory.

Had the platform been given more publicity throughout the entire state the Farmer-Labor victory would have been more sweeping than it was. It happened that in the greater portion of the state the enemies were permitted to take sections out of the platform and emphasize them.

The platform read as a whole was a constructive, vote getting document.

Hennepin and Ramsey county voters have taught the Farmer-Labor party or should have taught it that thinking people look upon election campaigns as a means of education.

The Farmer-Labor platform was the evidence that party was the only one that had anything of educational value for the benefit of the voters. It showed that a political platform is something to run on as well as something to get in on.

WELL-PLEASED

Austin American

Reactionary elements of Minnesota politics are congratulating themselves on the outcome of the general election. Of course, they took a whipping in the gubernatorial race but they did not fare so badly in the legislative and congressional races.

From the start, conservative GOP and Democratic leaders knew that Governor Olson's re-election was inevitable. So, quietly but nevertheless effectively, they set about winning over the legislature and as many seats in congress as possible.

Returns show that the Farmer-Labor party lost ground in the legislature. The senate is definiely Republican-controlled and there appears to be little question but that the house also will be under the thumb of the conservative forces.

For practical purposes, this is precisely what the Republicans and Democrats hoped would happen. When Gov. Olson delivers his message to the legislature he will ask that the program espoused by the Farmer-Labor party be adopted. Beyond a doubt the major planks of the platform will be rejected in the house. If the house should swing to the governor, the senate of course, will block any progressive measures.

And already the plans are being laid to use these circumstances against the administration. The propaganda machine of the reactionaries has started grinding. And when the next election rolls around the big cry will be that the Farmer-Labor party "had a chance and failed." The usual charges of demagoguery, etc., will be hurled. A desperate attempt will be made to make the electorate believe that failure to enact the Farmer-Labor program was the fault of the administration. Whether the voters will fall for that line, remains to be seen.

LETTING LOOSE DEGENERATES

(St. Paul Daily News)

A-year-old murder mystery involving a six-year-old girl has been solved.

Something over a year ago the body of the child, who was brutally assaulted, was found near Kansas City, Kan. The other day a 58-year-old Michigan farmer, father of two daughters, confessed to the murder.

Inquiry developed the fact that this farmer was committed to the insane ward of the Kansas penitentiary for a sex offense. After spending two years there, he was found to be sane and released.

This is the latest of a growing list of sex murders which are charged to former inmates of insane asylums.

There is something wrong with a system which pronounces such an abnormal or degenerate person cured after a brief stay in an institution and thus lets him loose to pray again on the most helpless members of society.

We might better play safe by rendering such persons incapable of such crimes.

STORE UP THE WATER

(Lake Wilson Pilot)

Before we start planting trees, it looks as if we should make some effort to conserve the waters in the lakes, streams and creeks by constructing dams. The sooner we replenish the undersurface water level, the sooner we shall be able to produce not only trees, but crops of grain.

Trouble at the Mallams'

By JANE SPENSE

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

"JIMMY, it's two o'clock in the morning."

Jimmy's bride of four months came down from the landing to peer more closely at her spouse.

"Jimmy, you're drunk!"

The up-to-now model young Mr. Mallam reared himself up indignantly. "Drunk! Like h—l I'm drunk."

Alice Mallam peered closer at her adorable Jimmy.

"You are drunk, Jimmy. Mummy says you're drinking too much."

"Oh, so your mummy says I'm drinking too much, does she? Your mummy says too d—d much." He managed to keep himself on his feet as he whipped up a rage against mothers-in-law. "I've had enough of her. So mummy says I'm drinking too much. By gad, I won't stand for that. I'm a man!"

Mr. James Mallam rocked on his feet, steadied himself, and lashed out with a closed fist. It was a clean knockout. As a matter of fact the only knockout he had achieved in his life. And the one time he had ever lifted his hand against the weaker sex.

His eyes gleamed with the satisfaction of a caveman at this stopping for once and all of mummy's interference. Then nervously this product of the present-day feminized civilization started to wipe sweat from her face.

Dazed and trembling, she leaned against the wall for support. At sound of the heavy, uncertain footsteps of her lord and master she came to life. To lock her door.

Having protected herself against her household, Alice remembered the outer world. She stumbled to her bathroom and started the cold water tap running. Although she had never before had occasion to treat a blackened eye, she resourcefully set about applying cold water applications.

"Alice, let me in," her spouse commanded. "I wanna' go to bed."

"Try sleeping on the floor. I just waxed it this morning," she lashed back.

Later she paced the floor. "The brute," she muttered to herself. She stumbled over his slippers and angrily kicked them out of the way. They went under the bed and she did not fish them out. "The shame of being struck!" she wailed.

She stopped pacing to peer into her dressing table mirror. The eye was going to be very black. She picked up her engagement book. Her engagements included a bridge at Madge Coleman's, dinner at Elsie Griffith's, and the Forum club dance. Everybody in town knew Madge was a direct descendant of the cat family. And Bob Griffith at heart was a cousin to Madge.

Sleep finally eased her misery.

She awoke early. Her eye was a sight. She dressed hurriedly. Pulling out her shiny new week-end bag from the back of her closet, she packed it and put it in the center of the room where her mother's chauffeur could easily get it.

When she unlocked her door she found this man she had given herself to still stretched out at her door in a drunken slumber. She had to step over him to get out of her room. In her fury she let her sharp heel come dangerously near his ear. Then she bent over and quickly kissed him. But she went on out. Right out of his house. "Out of your life, you drunken sot!" she sobbed.

Jimmy's car was at the curb where he had left it. She opened the door, then hesitated. Her mother had given them the money for the car as a wedding present. But finally she tossed her head, slammed the car door, and walked up the street to the corner. There she waited for a taxi, until she thought to look into her purse and discovered she had better walk.

As she approached her mother's house color flamed in her cheeks. The family gardener was working at the front flower bed. She pulled out a handkerchief but couldn't get it to her eye in a way not sure to attract attention. In the end she hurried past her home before the gardener's shrewd old eyes took in her disgrace. She scurried up the street, her face burning red with shame.

* * * * * * *

At noon James Mallam turned footsteps homeward. Ten phone calls that morning had brought only the cool statement that Mrs. Mallam was not at her mother's. "Oke, I get you!" he finally yelled into the receiver. Whereupon he wiped tears from his eyes, had blown his nose loudly, and had taken paper and figured out the most liberal alimony he could possibly afford. Alice's mother was the type of woman who would be a Tartar over alimony. A Rock of Gibraltar standing immovable against a man's figures on alimony.

His footsteps dragged as he approached the empty house of his broken dreams. He almost collided with another person turning into the walk at his house. It was Alice.

"I thought you'd gone back to your mother's," he burst out.

"Oh, no!" Alice smiled sweetly. "I'm my mummy's daughter. I ran into Jake Powers this morning and went with him to his gym. To take boxing lessons. Just in case—"

Wallace Gives Summary of Corn-Hog Plan

The individual contract signers will be asked to hold the number of market hogs he produces from 1935 litters to 90 percent of the adjusted average number produced from 1932 and 1933 litters, instead of 75 percent as provided in the 1934 contracts. Purchases of feeder pigs by contract signers from other contract signers will be unlimited, but purchases of feeder pigs from non-signers will remain limited to the average number bought during 1932-1933.

The contract signer will receive a hog adjustment payment of $15 for each hog included in the 10 percent reduction. Altho this payment is at the same rate per hog reduced as in 1934, the total hog payment per farm will be less because a smaller reduction will be required.

Including returns from the increased number of hogs the producer may raise, however, his total income will be larger under this contract than under the old one, the Secretary pointed out. Contracting producers who do not raise the full number of hogs allowed under the contract will have more corn to sell or for future livestock feeding.

"A burdensome surplus of corn in the fall of 1935 is a virtual certainty unless a large percentage of farmers agree this coming spring to hold plantings within reasonable limits," says A. G. Black, chief of the Adjustment Administration's corn-hog section. "First, the normal response to severe, though temporary, feed shortages and high feed prices it that of planting a larger-than-average corn acreage. Second, the marked adjustment in both cattle and hog numbers since a year ago has reduced corn needs. Third, severe drouth damage to many new pastures and meadow seedings has released much land for planting to some other crop. Fourth, in many localities, seed corn will be relatively cheaper and more plentiful than a number of other farm seeds.

"An increase in corn production would be accompanied, after a year or two, with an increased production of livestock, particularly hogs, which existing conditions do not yet warrant.

The offering of a new contract for 1935 was endorsed by more than two-thirds of all producers voting in the corn-hog referendum in October." Dr. Black says.

State and national Adjustment Administration officials will meet in key cities soon after Thanksgiving to discuss the contract. It is expected that local producers will hold meetings in January.

Rural Credit Lands In Heavy Demand Locally

The Rural Credit office here announces that there is a strong demand for land in this territory, most of the demand being from local people.

Nearly all of the sweet clover raised on farms belonging to the department in this vicinity has been marketed thru the Land O' Lakes sweet clover pool and a good price is expected.

The local bureau has attempted to dispose of all its hay in this territory at a reasonable price rather than to sell it outside, officials state

The collection of rentals and the collection or shares has been generally good and the rent for lands in this territory has far exceeded that of any previous year. Some quarters report a state share of as high as $700, according to officials.

The demand for land for rental for next year by far exceeds the land available, it is said.

The individual contract signers will be asked to hold the number of market hogs he produces from 35 litters to 90 percent of the adjusted average number produced from 1932 and 1933 litters, instead of 75 percent as provided in the 1934 contracts. Purchases of feeder pigs by contract signers from other contract signers will be unlimited, but purchases of feeder pigs from non-signers will remain limited to the average number bought during 1932-1933.

The contract signer will receive a hog adjustment payment of $15 for each hog included in the 10 percent reduction. Altho this payment is at the same rate per hog reduced as in 1934, the total hog payment per farm will be less because a smaller reduction will be required.

Including returns from the increased number of hogs the producer may raise, however, his total income will be larger under this contract than under the old one, the Secretary pointed out. Contracting producers who do not raise the full number of hogs allowed under the contract will have more corn to sell or for future livestock feeding.

"A burdensome surplus of corn in the fall of 1935 is a virtual certainty unless a large percentage of farmers agree this coming spring to hold plantings within reasonable limits," says A. G. Black, chief of the Adjustment Administration's corn-hog section. "First, the normal response to severe, though temporary, feed shortages and high feed prices it that of planting a larger-than-average corn acreage. Second, the marked adjustment in both cattle and hog numbers since a year ago has reduced corn needs. Third, severe drouth damage to many new pastures and meadow seedings has released much land for planting to some other crop. Fourth, in many localities, seed corn will be relatively cheaper and more plentiful than a number of other farm seeds.

"An increase in corn production would be accompanied, after a year or two, with an increased production of livestock, particularly hogs, which existing conditions do not yet warrant.

"The offering of a new contract for 1935 was endorsed by more than two-thirds of all producers voting in the corn-hog referendum in October." Dr. Black says.

State and national Adjustment Administration officials will meet in key cities soon after Thanksgiving to discuss the contract. It is expected that local producers will hold meetings in January.

Rural Credit Lands In Heavy Demand Locally

The Rural Credit office here announces that there is a strong demand for land in this territory, most of the demand being from local people.

Nearly all of the sweet clover raised on farms belonging to the department in this vicinity has been marketed thru the Land O' Lakes sweet clover pool and a good price is expected.

The local bureau has attempted to dispose of all its hay in this territory at a reasonable price rather than to sell it outside, officials state

The collection of rentals and the collection or shares has been generally good and the rent for lands in this territory has far exceeded that of any previous year. Some quarters report a state share of as high as $700, according to officials.

The demand for land for rental for next year by far exceeds the land available, it is said.

Land O' Lakes Makes Thanksgiving Turkey Pool Final Settlement

The local Land O' Lakes plant has sent out the final settlement on the Thanksgiving turkey pool, according to B. O. Norby, Manager. Following are the quotations paid by the local plant:

Land O' Lakes Young Toms	22½
Land O' Lakes Young Hens	21½
No. 1 Young Toms	17½
No. 1 Young Hens	16½
No. 1 Old Hens	17½
No. 1 Old Toms	16½
No. 2 Turkeys	13½

Mr. Norby states that the Land O' Lakes plant paid one cent more per pound net to the producer th was paid by the private buyers. He believes that this is conclusive proof of the soundness of cooperative marketing. Volume and up-to-date machinery in the poultry dressing plant has made it no for the plant to offer dressing service on turkeys at the extemely low cost of 10c per bird.

Christmas turkeys are coming in strong, says Mr. Norby, and the dressing plant is being operated to its capacity. The market continues firm and steady.

ROSEWOOD YOUTH FOLLOWS IN STEPS OF DANIEL BOONE

Claiming that the free life of the outdoor trapper and hunter is much in preference to the daily grind of school and the farm chores, 11-year old Donald Sandry of Rosewood, left school recently under an excuse and struck out for the wide open spaces. When he failed to return from school a general community alarm was sent-out, and before dark his footprints were found in the snow. He was followed for six miles to where he had found a sidetracked boxcar and decided to stay over night. Sound asleep when found at 4 o'clock the following morning, he showed no desire to return, and proudly displayed a weasel he had caught, which he claimed when sold, would bring him food until another one could be caught.

Back in school today he still ponders over the necesssity of tiresome chores and school books when trapping affords a much more pleasant pastime and profit.

COUNTY AGENT REPORTS 1934 SUCCESSFUL YR.

Good Crops and Higher Prices Combine to Aid Farmers

"Pennington County in 1934 was one of those fortunately located territories which had enough rain to grow a crop," says County Agent R. M. Douglass in his annual report for the past year.

Mr. Douglass states that to obtain a crop this year with prices as they are has enabled many a farmer, who for the past two or three years has been losnig money, to help make up this loss and in many cases to get out of debt.

He further states, "Dairy and livestock which are the principal sources of income in this county have not been as favorable this year as compared with the price of grain. However, there has been an improvement in the prices of dairy products and with the big improvement of grain, seed, and poultry prices, the farmers in the county are very fortunate this year

"The attitude of the farmers this year is considerably better than for the last three years and there has been a general increase in the farm population in the county. Practically all farms available with buildings that are habitable have been occupied and much tax delinqu land has been taken up. Many who have been troubled with chattel mortgages and seed loans have been able to pay them up and get in a position to carry on and in many cases to buy farms.

"Emergency work has been the most important project of the County Extension Service this year. The organization of the Production Credit Association, Pennington, Red Lake Corn-Hog Control Association, Pennington County Wheat Production Control Association, in addition to seed loans, grasshopper work, Bang's Disease Testing, and hail relief have taken up practically all the time that was ordinarily given to other projects.

"These emergency projects have been of the utmost importance to the farmer and have helped many of them to take advantage of government aid and has brought Extension Service into greater prominence thru direct contact with more farmers than ever before."

George Jones, Bagley, Files Recount Demand

George Jones of Bagley, defeated candidate for the legislature in the November election, this week added a bit of comedy to the contest jumble by filling a recount demand. Mr. Jones was on the tail end of the string with a vote of 4,271 Marius Waldal. who was defeated on the voting but was seated by an error of the canvassing board, received 5,257 votes, while J. O Melby, the high man, received 5,285 votes, and W. E. Day recieved 5,230.

Retailers Are Liable for Tax on Slaughtered Hogs

Farmers who slaughter hogs and sell the products to retailers or other commercial handlers will no longer be held responsible for the processing tax, under a redefinition of the term "first domestic processing", recently announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

A new regulation transfers to commercial handlers all responsibilty for paying the processing tax on hog products derived from hogs slaughtered by producers and feeders. However, this ruling does not apply to the farmer who slaughters hogs and sells direct to consumers.

The producers who slaughters his own hogs and sells or exchanges directly to consumers not more than 300 pounds of the products derived during any marketing year (November 5 to November 4, following) is not required to pay the tax. If the producer sells more than 300 pounds but not more than 1,000 pounds of pork products from his own hogs direct to consumers he is liable for the tax only on the volume sold in excess of the 300 pound exemption. If he sells more than 1,000 pounds during any marketing year he loses his 300 pound exemption and is liable for the tax on all products derived from his hogs which he has sold. The tax is $2.25 a hundred of live hogs. Dressed weight may be changed to live weight by the use of a set of figures prescribed in the regulations and available in any county agent's office.

Farmers who slaughter and sell purchased hogs are not entitled to the 300 pound exemption. Any farmer who processes hogs for consumption by his own household, however, is exempt from paying the tax on such hogs.

314 DIE OF T. B. IN PENNINGTON CO. IN 23 YEARS

Public Health Bulletin Shows Decrease in Death Rate Result of Seal Sale

Tuberculosis has been at work in the past year in Pennington county. Including its victims of 1933, the disease has taken a toll of 314 lives of men, women and children of the county during the last 23 years. In the same period nearly 50,000 deaths from the disease have been reported throughout the state of Minnesota. These facts are contained in a Christmas Seal bulletin issued by the Minnesota Public Health Association.

With more than 1,000 tuberculosis fatalities occuring in the state for the year 1933 alone, the actual death rate has decreased slightly from the previous year. Deaths reported in 1933 were 1,003 as compared with 1,049 in 1932.

Minnesota has maintained its place in the nation as eighth lowest in number of deaths per population, states a report of the National Tuberculosis Association. Arizona has the highest death rate of any state with 236.9 per 100,000 population which is a decrease from the state's showing for 1932 of 250 per 100,000. Minnesota had 38.7 last year compared with 40.8 for 1932.

While the percentage of deaths from this plague has decreased remarkably during past years, it is still a leading cause of death between the ages of 15 and 45, the bulletin shows. A constant battle against the disease has been carried on in every state and county including a program of public health, nursing, tuberculin testing, clinics for school children and health education for both children and adults all carried on by funds derived from the annual Christmas Seal sale.

VOTE RECOUNT IS ASKED FOR IN SENATE RACE

Paul Harris, Counted Out By 101 Votes, Cites a Few Irregularities

Affidavits requesting a recount of the vote cast in the 65th district for the office of state senator were filed with the Clerk of Court on Friday by Paul A. Harris, Farmer-Labor candidate, apparently defeated by 101 votes in the November election.

It is expected that the principals in the recount action, E. L. Tungseth, successful candidate and Mr. Harris will name their tellers and that the recount will get under way next week.

Numerous irregularities are cited by Mr. Harris as his grounds for requesting the recount. He cites the fact the corrections by the canvassing boards show that the various election boards, particularly in the city of Thief River Falls, were overworked, and as a result of fatigue were unable to read and tally with accuracy. The petition for a recount also points out that an unusually heavy vote was cast and that there is grounds to believe that persons who were not legal voters have ballotted. Cases of assistance being given to voters by others who were not regularly sworn to perform such service is also cited.

"The recount may not change the results," Mr. Harris stated, "but because of the exceedingly heavy vote cast and the peculiar circumstances of the past election which sets it apart from other that have gone before, we think it is only fair that the ballots be recounted by competent people, working in regular hours which will give them an opportunity to do justice to their work. Whatever the final results may be, we shall be satisfied when the work is completed."

H. O. Berve of this city, O. E. Lewis of Bagley and Chas. Boughton, Sr. of Red Lake Falls are attorneys for Mr. Harris.

Forum Will Again Feature Exchange For Farmer Subs.

Beginning next week, the Forum will again carry the Farmer's Exchage, which was previously featured in this paper. This will be a special department for all farmer subscribers. Any ad in order to quality in this exchane, must deal strictly with farm products and machinery: that is, farmers may advertise seed grains, trade or sell livestock, and trade farm machinery, but they cannot advertise automobiles or lands in this department. These ads must be open ads giving the name and the addresses of the advertisers.

This year's good crops, responsible for increased activity in buying and selling seeds, is the reason for opening up this service again, and we hope it will be of benefit and service to the farmers of the community.

Thi Ri Fa Mu Club Has First Meeting of Year

The Thi Ri Mu club held its first meeting of this year on Monday evening at the studio of their counsellor, Thema Holm Erickson.

Piano selections included on the evening's program were "To the Sea" (MacDowell) by Robert Douville, and "Tango" (Albaniz) by Vivian Ward. Mrs. Erickson gave a report on the meeting of the state board of the Minnesota Federation of Music Clubs in Minneapolis in October, of which she is the first vice-president. She also gave an interesting discussion on hearing the operas "Il Trovatore" and "Madame Butterbly" which were presented by the San Carlos opera company in Winnipeg recently. While there, she also heard Serge Rachmaninoff present a concert in piano.

The club decided to have meetings on the second and fourth Tuesdays of every month hereafter during the rest of the club year. At the conclusion of the evening lunch was served by Margaret Fabrick and Violet Rhodegaard, hostesses.

License Corrections Net State $149,872

The state highway patrol has been instrumental in adding $149,872 to the state's motor vehicle license income in the first 10 months of 1934, according to a highway department bulletin. This money, mostly from commercial truck owners, represents payments made for correct license plates by persons found to have been driving with improper plates. Reports show the patrol, in the 10 month period, also collected $30,401 in fines, exclusive of license corrections; traveled 2,454,645 miles, gave aid to 764,698 motorists, warned 148,883 of law violations, tagged 27,276 for illegal equipment and 6,847 for illegal registration and arrested 2,082 drivers for various infractions of state highway laws.

State Comptroller's Audit Reveals Poor Stewardship

Shortage and Illegal Payments Totalling $5,314.06 in Report on School Dist. 18

Board Has Failed to Set Up Teachers' Salary and Bond Fund

TREASURER'S BOND IS DECLARED INADEQUATE

Depository's Collateral Is Not Assigned to Protect the District's Funds

A number of gross irregularities in the conduct of the affairs of Independent School District No. 18, are revealed in the report of the state examiner, filed last Wednesday, and covering a six year period ending July 17, 1934.

The examination which was made at the request of ten taxpayers of the district, cites a shortage of $1,167.99 in the accounts of L. M. Rayson, former treasurer, which was made good by Mr. Rayson during the course of the audit; an illegal payment of $5.00 to V. C. Noper; a string of illegal payments to Olaf Neset, totalling $47.80; another long list of illegal payments to A. E. Mattson and to the Thief River Falls Times totalling $4,022.65; and some small payments, also illegal, to the Commercial club and for traveling expenses for members of the board.

The report, which contains 76 typewritten pages also calls attention to an illegal settlement made with sureties of the defunct Citizens State Bank thru which the school district lost $822.11 and unapproved cancellation clause in the treasurer's bond, as well as the inadequacy of the bond which is stated to be less than half of the amount required by law. A teachers' salary fund, required by law, has not been provided by the board, nor has a bond and interest retirement fund also required by law been set up. No assignment of the securities posted by the Union State Bank, the district's depository, in lieu of a surety bond has been made, the report states, and consequently in case the bank should fail, the district would have no authority to sell the securities to cover its loss.

The state comptroller's summary, pages two to eight of the report follow: (The schedules referred to are not published owing to their length. The entire report is on file at the office of the county auditor, at the office of the city's superintendent of schools and at the Forum office.)

Clerk

The clerk's register of receipts and disbursements is in the form as prescribed by the state. Such forms as recently revised by the state department and the state comptroller was installed with the beginning of the 1930-31 fiscal year and is now in use.

Claims

Except for minor changes, allocations and subdivisions, the analysis of disbursements as shown by the clerk's records was used.

Shipments are checked to invoices. In nearly all instances claims are supported by requisitions and duly passed upon by the the board before payment.

Records

The clerk's records are maintained by the superintendent's secretary. During the first three years under review no record of receipts is shown on either the clerks' or treasurer's register.

A number of redeemed orders were found without the chairman's signature.

Treasurer

Cash

The cash in banks was verified by comparison with the certificates received from the several depositories on Sept. 4, 1934.

Receipts

Prior to July 20, 1931 no register of receipts was maintained in the treasurer's annual report to the board.

Disbursements

The treasurer's register of orders paid should show the date of redemption, instead of the date of issuance.

Orders drawn on the treasurer were presented direct to the depository for payment. Checks were drawn by the treasurer, from time to time, taking up groups of these orders.

The treasurer informed the examiner that these checks were destroyed.

It was therefore very difficult and would involve considerable time and expense to attempt to identify each withdrawal shown on the treasurer's disbursement record.

State NRA Director Calls Attention To Code Requirements

Mrs. Anna Dickie Olesen, state compliance director of the NRA calls attention to various phases of the codes in the following letter to the press:

"Payment of an overtime rate for hours in excess of the maximum permitted by any code can not justify disregard of maximum hour provisions of the code.

"Employers faced with a shortage of labor should apply to the appropriate office of the United States Employment Service for workers. If they are then unable to obtain the type of workers they need, and if they obtain a certificate to that effect from the United States Employment Service, they then may apply to NRA for an exception from the code provisions or for a stay of them."

In other words, if an employer is confronted with an excess of work, instead of disregarding the maximum hours of labor of his Code, he should apply to the United States Employment Service for labor. In case he cannot find the workers needed, he then has the right to apply to NRA in Washington for an exemption from the Code or for a stay of certain provisions.

Before he can receive exceptions from the Code on account of a shortage of labor, he must show the government that he has tried his best through the United States Employment Service to secure the workers.

Tungseth; secretary, Mrs. Thom Holten; treasurer, Mrs. Bertha Saugen. The trustees include Emil Anderson, John Hanson and Chas. Sagmoen. The deacons are Thom Holten and B. P. Sagmoen. Miss Thea Saugen was elected organist, and John Hanson janitor.

Comparison Shows the Effect of the Homestead Tax Law on City Real Estate

The assessed valuation of the county for 1934 tax levy is $3,556,826.00 as compared with $3,994,978 in 1933, (last year), according to H. L. Fowler, county auditor. The drop in valuation is brougt about thru the reduction of taxable valuation on homes and homesteads as provided by the Homestead Tax Law passed by the 1933 legislature. The reduction in valuation will necessitate a raise in the mill levy, Mr. Fowler stated, the county levy this year being 30.65 mills as compared with a mill rate of 28.64 last year. In spite of the increase in the mill levy the tax money raised this year for the county will be considerably less than a year ago when the levy was computed to raise $114,400 as compared with $110,400 this year.

There has been a small change in the valuation of the city of Thief River Falls. The taxes levied on city real estate this year will be as follows:

State	11.95
County	30.65
City	29.10
School District	39.05
Total in mills	111.20

Now that the levy has been fixed it is possible to compute the saving to the home owner and the approximate increase in taxation on business property brought about by the Homestead Tax law enacted by the last session of the legislature.

Taking a city property valued at $4,000 as a basis of comparison it is found that such a property paid last year when the mill levy was 105 mills, taxes amounting to $168.00. This year if the property in question is a business property it will with the mill rate being 111.20 mills, pay the som of $177.92, altho the total amount of taxes levied by units of government, are less in dollars and cents than last year.

If on the other hand, the property in question is a home occupied by the owner, and therefore subject to the lower valuation prescribed by the Homestead Tax Law the tax this year will be 111.20.

It will therefore be seen that if a person has two residence properties of equal value (both $4,000) one of which he is renting and the other of which he is occupying as his own home he will pay on the property he is renting $117.92 in taxes, and on the property that he himself is occupying as a home, he will pay only 111.20.

PREMIUM LIST BEING PREPARED FOR RED RIVER VALLEY SHOW

Preliminary plans are well under way for the silver anniversary celebration of the Red River Valley Winter Shows which will be held in Crookston February 4th to 8th. John Saugstad, business manager, states that the premium list covering prizes offered to livestock, farm crops and poultry exhibitors is now being prepared and will be ready for distribution at an early date in January. With satisfactory crop yields thruout most of the Red River Valley, together with the highest prices since 1929 and 1930, it is anticipated that the attendance will surpass all records for the past five years.

Features of the week, in addition to the exhibits, will include numerous educational contests for farmers' clubs, agricultural high schools schools of agriculture and 4-H club members. These meetings will deal primarily with problems of the farm and the home. Huge mass meetings will also be held each evening during the week, at which time speakers of national and international prominence will be heard. The Northwestern Minnesota Singers' association will also appear on the program during the week.

Activities of the week are coordinated through the Winter Show Board of Managers, of which Dr. A. A. Dowell, superintendent of the Northwest School and Station, is president; John Saugstad, business manager; F. A. Green, Stephen, representing the Red River Valley Livestock Breeders' association; C. M. Pesek, Red River Valley Dairymen's Association; R. S. Dunham, Red River Valley Crops and Soils Association; E. W. Spring, Crookston Association of Public Affairs; H. A. Pflughoeft, District Club leader, and C. L. McNelly, District County Agent leader. A successor to W. R. Low, who for many years represented the Red River Valley Development Association as its secretary, has not yet been announced. Wm. Dahlquist, Thief River Falls, is president of this organization.

HOUSEHOLD BUDGET SHOWS THE NAZI ECONOMIC MISERY

Hannover (TIS)The standard of living of a German family is characteristically described in a letter published by the organ of National Socialist women. The letter bears the title "The Wife of an Unemployed Must be an Artist in Arithmetics". The letter, which follows, appears typical for lviing conditions in the Third Reich.

"I would like you to see my household accounts. My husband receives for himself, for me, and for my two year old child, a weekly stipend of 12 marks, 80 pfennig. Our weekly rent is five marks, and my husband gives me seven marks for housekeeping. The 80 pfennig left to him must be used for paying for light, coal, repairs, and other incidental expenses. To refute those who in spite of ample monthly incomes complain of hard times, I furnish you with the following list of foodstuffs on which we three people have had to live for the last two years. Our weekly provisions are:

7 liter (quarts) milk	1.40 Marks
2 lbs. margarine (at a reduced rate)	0.76
1 lb. of sugar	0.40
1 bl. kidney beans	0.40
1 bl. of meat	0.40
1 lb. white cheese	0.19
Eggs	0.24
2 loaves of bread	1.10
1 lb. lard	0.50
1 lb. of malt coffee	0.11

JUDGES ARE SELECTED FOR R.R.VALLEY WINTER SHOWS

Thirteen judges have been engaged to make the open class awards and take charge of the many judging contests scheduled for Winter Shows Week, February 4 to 8. Professor W. H. Peters, chief of the Division of Animal Husbandry, University Farm, will judge the beef cattle; P. A. Anderson, sheep; H. G. Zavoral, swine; E. A. Hanson, dairy cattle, and C. L. McNelly, horses. Crop judges include A. C. Arny, University Farm and T. E. Stoa, North Dakota Agricultural college, grains and grasses; Dr. Iver Johnson, corn; A. G. Tolaas, potatoes and onions and C. G. Ash, bee and honey products. It is expected that George Hackett, Wayzata, veteran of many former shows, will again serve as judge of poultry.

Ralph F. Crim, extension agronomist; Dr. H. K. Wilson, agronomist, and A. W. Aamodt, Moorhead, will supervise the crops judging contests; one for Schools of Agriculture and the other for agricultural high schools. Seperate livestock judging contests are being arranged for schools of agriculture, agricultural high schools, farmers' clubs and 4-H club members. R. S. Dunham, Northwest School agronomist, will serve as superintendent of the crops judging contests, while R. J. Christgau will have charge of the livestock judging events.

Teams from Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Canada will take part in the School of Ariculture livestock and crops judging contests. Agricultural high school teams from all parts of the Northwest will likewise compete in these events. The livestock judging contests for farmers' clubs and 4-H club members are limited to teams from Northwestern Minnesota counties.

MURDERER OF GERMAN WRITER GETS HIGH COMMAND

Munich (TIS) The murderer of Muehsam Eicke, former commander of the concentration camp Dachau, has been elevated to the rank of Nazi inspector of all concentration camps and right hand man of the S. S. storm troop police chief Himmler.

Together with the recognition of Eicke's services in doing away with the bitterly hated Muehsam, the following details show the manner in which the murder of the well-known writer was committed. Muehsam was taken to the administration building. He was tortured and beaten until he lost consciousness. Then an injection was administered, which killed him. The body was taken to a closet in the rear of the building and hung on a rafter so as to create the impression the Muehsam had committed suicide. The men who aided the Eicke are the storm troop leaders Ehrath and Konstantin Werner.

MISLEADING STATEMENTS MADE ABOUT FOOD VALUE OF INTOXICATING DRINKS

By W. G. Calderwood

Some medical men have recently been making a pastime of public statements comparing the food value of a bottle of beer or a cocktail favorably with a plate of ham and eggs, or other well known and nourishing foods. This practice could doubtless be made a highly profitable diversion.

For a number of years, up to the adoption of prohibition, the United States Brewers Association issued a year book, carrying statistics and other information of general interest to the beer industry. In the issue for 1913 appeared the statement: "Chemists and brewers admit that, practically, the food value of alcohol, and even of beer, is inconsiderable." The accuracy of this statement has never been questioned by food chemists and experts. If generally known to the public, the statement would fully negative the present shrewd and subtle effort to revive the old slogans of the brewers: "Beer is liquid food," "Drink your bread," and similar false propaganda.

Calories and vitamins are the essential constituents of nutrient food. Alcohol has no nutrient calories, and no vitamins. Therefore, alcohol is out, so far as nutrient fool is concerned. Alcohol does supply a small amount of heat calories. A pint of beer contains about 85 nutrient calories, 105 heat calories, and no vitamins. A half pint of light, or four ounces of fortified wine, contains about 125 heat calories each, htwi practically no nutrient content. Two ounces of proof whiskey would carry 156 heat calories each, with practically tent.

For comparison—one pound of each of the following contains the calories indicated: ham 1,042; white bread, 1,199; pork chops, 1,530; macaroni, 1,625; full cream cheese, 1,890; zweibak, 1,915; sausage, 2,030; peanuts, 2,490; or chocolate with 30 percent sugar, 2,768. All of these have a large percentage of nutrient calories, and each has a substantial content of one or more necessary vitamins.

Primarily, alcohol is a poison. As the brewers admit, its food value is negligible, even when taken in beer.

Rural Rehabilitation Conference at U.Farm

Purposes and details of the government's rural rehabilitation program will be brought out in a special rural rehabilitation conference to be held in connection with the Farmers and Homemakers week at University Farm, St. Paul, January 14-19. The program which is new this year, will last the full week, part of the sessions being held jointly with those of the agricultural economics division.

Among the vital topics to be presented will be such as the processing tax, land uses, farm earnings, livestock practices re-establishment of farm business after the drouth, county rural rehabilitation, land values and loans, farm debt problems, national farm loan associations, and short term credit.

W. I. Myers, governor of the Farm Credit Administration at Washington, D. C., will be one of the principal speakers on the rehabilitation program. He will also talk on farm credit before an assemblage of the entire short course group, Thursday noon, January 17.

Other speakers to appear on the rural rehabilitation program will be Roy Nelson, president of the Federal Land Bank, St. Paul; C. F. Monroe, secretary, Bank for Co-operatives, St. Paul; S. B. Cleland of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and almost a score of others.

Jet Found in Three Countries

Jet, the metal much prized for mourning jewelry and for rosary beads and crosses, is found in Asia Minor, France and Great Britain. In France the deposits are large and many persons find employment in producing the mineral. An imitation is made from ebonite, a hardened rubber, and from glass.

BRITISH LABOR'S PROGRAM FOR ACTION IS DESCRIBED

London—Writing in "The New Nation", Arthur Greenwood, M. P., summarizes the recent Southport conference report, "For Socialism and Peace," as follows:

"The Labor party believes in democracy.

"It does not believe that democracy can be effective unless—

"Peace is asured, and

"Democratic principles are applied to every phase of public life.

"Labor, therefore, stands for the establishment and enforcement of the rule of law in international affairs.

"It realizes that the great problems which confront mankind are constructive, and that they can be solved only by the whole-hearted cooperation. It believes, that is to say, in constructive international Socialism.

"It holds that democracy is a principle which must be applied to the economic system. It therefore stands for the public ownership and control of the means of production, distribution and exchange by which the people live.

"It applies this principle to the great social services by means of which the people collectively can be assured that their needs will be satisfied.

"Finally, it asserts that Parliament must be adopted to meet the needs of the new age, and to carry the will of the people into effect without let or hindrance."

LAC QUI PARLE CONTROL PLAN WILL BE REALIZED

The vast water conservation plan centering around Lac Qui Parle and involving control of the flood waters of the Minnesota and Chippewa rivers are nearing realization, it is announced by the workers division of the Minnesota SERA.

Announcement was made in Washington by Governor Floyd B. Olson that federal undertaking is certain as soon as funds are available. The project will be financed by the state and federal governments.

This project is one of the most pretentious in Minnesota's general conservation program. It is estimated that a year will be needed for its completion. It will cost $1,500,000.

The water level of the Lac Qui Parle will be raised by means of two dykes, one about two and a half miles across the Minnesota river valley northwest of Watson, and the other across the Chippewa river east of said place. The surface area of the lake will be enlarged, and extended to a length of 40 miles.

The higher water level in the lake and resulting inundation of considerable land in the vicinity, will necessitate erection of a new bridge accross the narrows of the lake near Milan. The highway running across the lake at this spot must also be rerouted as will the tracks of the C. M. St.P. & P. railroad.

When informed of the positive results from the discussions in Washington, the works division felt warranted to order the completion of options on the remaining parcels of land involved in the execution of the project. Two-thirds of the required land is already tied up by option. The works division also gave its approval to the construction of the raised approaches made necessary for the bridge across the lake, according to Walter F. MacGregor, director of the works division.

Northwest Fruit For Minn. Relief Families

Enough winesaps, jonathans, wenatchees and other northwest apples to fill 68 railway freight cars has been alloted to Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration) by the Federal Surplus Relief corporation, for the benefit of the needy.

The announcement is made by Fred Gilbert, SERA director of community distribution. He also reports the donation, from the same source, of 400,000 yards mattress ticking, and material for comforters in the form of 250,000 pounds of cotton and 470,000 yards of covering.

Mattresses an quilts for relief clients will be manufactured from the bedding material.

High School Addition For Little Falls O.K.'d

Construction of a $180,000 addition to the Little Falls high school will start on submission of final specifications to the works division of the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief admistration), according to an announcement by Walter F. MacGregor, director.

The addition will be two stories high, providing an auditorium, a gymnasium and more classroom space. Financing was accomplished through a $50,000 city bond issue, augmented by relief funds. It is expected that all the available relief labor in the city and vicinity will be occupied on this project for five of sx months.

Conditional approval also has been granted by the works division for the remodeling of the Kelliher village hall to furnish space for an auditorium and a fire hall. Of the total cost of $10,000, one half is to be raised by the village. Employment will be provided for 51 persons.

The two projects are designed to furnish suitable work relief during the winter months, Mr. MacGregor explained.

Low Injury Rate On Relief Jobs

A degree of safety greater than in any other industry has been attained on the work projects of the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration), it is announced by A. V. Rohweder, chief advisor of the safety division.

Injury records which cover 46,000 employes have been studied during the 10 weeks following September 1, when the self-insurance plan went into effect. They show only 10 accidents reported per 1,000,000 man-hours, Mr. Rohweder stated. This number of man-hours represents 46.000 men working 7 hours and 15 minutes a day for three days.

An accident rate of only 10 per 1,000,000 man-hours compares favorably with 22 to 23 in mining, 32 in public works and highway building, 38 in construction industry, and 70 in cannery activities.

This good showing, according to W. T. Norton, supervisor of safety and compensation, is largely due to the accident prevention campaign carried on by the division. It is effectively promoted by means of 10 district and 87 county inspectors.

Mr. Norton explained that the safety record has been achieved against heavy odds. Some of the SERA projects call for such risky activities as gravel pit excavation and public works construction jobs. Many of the laborers are farmers without previous training in the industrial vocation, and unaquainted with modern safety methods or devices.

INDUSTRIAL SECTIONS OF GERMANY RAVAGED BY STARVATION

Goslar (TIS)—At times, even the Nazis are beginning to see the light. The misery prevailing among the workers of the province of Thuringia is vividly reported in an article which recently appeared in the "Deutsche", the organ of the German Labor Front. The correspondent who has just returned from Thuringia, was tremendously impressed by the signs of starvation encountered everywhere and writes,

"The first impression one gets is one of profound misery. A worker making dolls and glass toys did not even earn enough money to heat his home. Another glass-blower at Tausche earned a weekly wage of 18 to 20 marks ($8.00) although his wife and six children helped him in his ten hours work at home. The family often lack the necessary food. Thousands of other families live similarly; potatoes and salt are their only food. 225 inhabitants out of the p50 of Steinheid receive relief, and the district of Sonnenberg reports 33,000 unemployed out of a total of 80,000 inhabitants."

Practically all of the 80,000 inhabitants are unable to feed and clothe themselves, the Nazi journalist admits.

Bois de Sioux River Control Is Studied

Browns Vally is the headquarters for a crew of surveys from the works division of the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief admisitration.)

Their immediate object is to examine the topography surrounding the Bois de Sioux river and its outlet into Lake Traverse. They must also ascertain what bearing an emergtncy channel in the river would have on the problem of flood control confronting the district.

The tentative new channel would be auxiliary to a dam at the north end of Lake Traverse.

Oregon white oak is practically the only wood used for ax handles, and insulator pins in the Pacific Northwest. In the Eastern States hickory ranks first among handle woods, and black locust among woods for insulator pins.

THE LAWS ARE TO BE ENFORCED

Last week the mayor circulated a letter to the beer parlors of the city admonishing them that the laws are to be enforced. There must be no selling of beer to intoxicated persons nor to minors. Is this an admission that the laws have not been enforced in the past? If not, then why not also post a potice to burglars that housebreaking will be prosecuted. It would be just as logical.

However, we are glad that even at this late stage the city administration has decided to enforce the law in regard to the regulation of beer parlors.

May we also call attention to the provision in the ordinance which stipulates that the council may revoke or suspend the license of any dispensor of non-intoxicating malt beverages who violates its provisions?

Licenses have been revoked in two instances before; once when the proprietor of a beer parlor said, "Here comes the cop," when a patrolman entered his place, and the other because the administration, after the entire police force had stood at the counter of a "night club" for something like one and a half hours, decided that if they hadn't been watching, someone might have done some "spiking."

This is fine of course, there must be no compromise when principles are at stake.—Therefore in case the mayor and his worthy co-enforcers have forgotten the incident, we hasten to remind them that another beer parlor was raided by the officers of the State Liquor Control Commission some time ago and three cases of hard liquor confiscatd. Up to this writing we have heard of no move on the part of the mayor nor of the council to revoke the license. The election being over, the place is no longer needed for a campaign headquarters,—so why not enforce the law?

IT IS HUMAN TO ERR—AND MANLY TO MAKE RESTITUTION

The examination of the accounts of School District No. 18, made public by the state comptroller last week, reflects very little credit upon the persons who have been and are, members of the Board of Education. It is somewhat of a shock to find that those broad-chested gentlemen who have paraded among us as the "Pillars of Society" are just human clay after all.

If the affairs of the school district had been in the hands of workinymen and farmers having no knowledge of accountancy, business practice and law, we might have expected some bungling, but, inasmuch as the board of education is the one department of government which the elite, the elect, the Keepers of the Golden Fleece have always insisted upon keeping in their own hands, we believe that we have a right to be disappointed with their stewardship.

However, it is possible that we should not be too severe in our criticism. The members of the board are all engaged in business and have probably had little time to devote to affairs of state. Being busy with their own affairs during a time when business conditions have been such as to require all of the time, of even the best of us to keep things on an even keel, they should perhaps be pardoned if they have been guilty of some oversights in conducting the school district's business. It is human to err—and it is manly to make restitution. The former treasurer has made restitution of his shortage, and we feel confident that when we go to press next week, we shall be able to bring the information to the people, that those who have taken illegal payments from the district, have also made full restitution, now that the law has been called to their attention.

THE MAD DANCE CONTINUES

Monday's daily papers carry an announcement to the effect that the federal government will make another bond issue on the fifteenth of this month. The amount is stated to be $900,000,000. The interest ranges from one and one-eight to three percent. The annual interest alone will amount to upward of $18,000,000.

On with the dance; increase the pace;
Let drums and tomtoms rattle.
The Shylock's fiendish, leering face,
The politician's prattle,
Fain would cover.
Heap high the lurid flames with flesh
Of human sacrifice to Mammon.
What matters mothers' broods enmesh'd
And future broods contamin'd
With putrid debts?
On with the dance. Pour forth the wine,
There's birthright yet, to squander.
Serve pottage to the human swine!
Let God of Creation ponder,
Our destiny.

DON'T START ANY BANDWAGONS

We note that at least one Farmer-Labor paper is inclined to start a little boom for someone for the next candidate for governor. We suggest that it is too early to start a boom for anyone.

What the Farmer-Labor press should be concerned with now, is two years of good government. Without that, we will need no candidate for the governorship two years hence. And a lot of band wagons will not be conducive to good government. It is human to have ambitions, and if there are men within our ranks who hope that the next convention will see fit to select them for the highest office in the state, that ambition is the right and the privilege of every good citizen. But if booms are started for this fellow or that, it will unavoidably create some friction and jealousy among those who are entrusted with carrying on the various departments of state government, and that does not make for good government.

Let us keep our candidatorial preferences to ourselves and devote ourselves to strengthening the party's position with the people by insisting on clean government, efficient administration and progressive legislation and we will find that when the time comes we will have a strong candidate for governor. As our columnist said some time ago, "When the lights go out, Moses will be there."

Some Specious Reasoning

A contemporary journal named the Pathfinder has a headline, "Farm Prospects Bright, but Prices Still Too Low to Give Farmers Fair Share of Income." Evidently the editor of that sheet is in favor of inflation, the chimera of most so-called "liberals" of today.

What good would it do to increase the salary of everyone 100 percent? The price of everything we had to buy would increase proportionately, and the profit cut for the fatboys would also increase, thus sending us merrily to another 1929. In fact, Frederick Shelton authority on economics (and big business advisor) sees nothing but gloom ahead; for if inflation comes there will be another "big bust" about the year 1939.

Tables have been compiled showing that the "big wages" paid to workers during the period of prosperity were less, proportionately than those paid workers before the war. It's hard to make people understand that a dollar has only a relative value.

Go To, Huey!

Huey Long's legislature in Louisiana passed a bill providing for a two-year moratorium on all personal debts over $8. In a recent newsreel Huey voiced a desire to cancel all debts, and start with a clean slate.

We think a lot of Huey as it is; but if he would now go ahead and abolish the profit system and institute an exchange system based on work instead of appropriative power, we'd think more of him. But then, when we take into account what we have done, Huey has done wonders.

"The Disinherited"

If you don't read advertisements, don't read this. I warn you.—Once there was a youth who thought he was different from other youths He lived and loved in a coal mining camp; and when he married he found that he had to do what other "rugged individualists" did—go to work for the Great Regimenters of labor who were wont to extoll American individualism at Fourth of July gatherings.

The young man early found out that there was something wrong for this sort of individualism killed practically all the incentive he had—all but a little bit. When he was fired from his job in 1930 he went back home to live in a shack with his wife and four kids, and found that he had plenty leisure to do what he had wanted to do all his life—to write a book.

And so he wrote "The Disinherited," in which the workers with whom he met on equal terms in the mines, on the railroads, and in the factories, move with epic tread. The author is Jack Conroy the publishers Covici-Friede, of New York. If you can't afford to buy a copy, ask your librarian to procure one. This is one book that should be read by every working man, and every farmer.

Can People Think?

We used to study books on logic and subscribed heartily to the doctrine of rationalism. There was nothing, we said, that could not be subjected to the test of logic and reasoning.

Now we're not so sure. We have been guilty ourselves of calling the American people a group of morons. But if they are that, can they help it? Recent psychologists say we are what we are because our environment makes us so. For this reason, it is difficult to see how people, as a whole, can be taught to vote and act intelligently under the capitalistic system.

The thing to do is—to change the environment. Then, and then only, can we hope for rational thought and action. Until then, we must be governed by mob-rule. If the mob accidentally carries us towards the Ideal Society, well and good. If not, we must accept what we get philosophically.

The Liberal Digest

CALIFORNIA'S UTOPIA, INC.
By Aaron Allen Heist
in the October "Christian Century"
(Condensed by B. C. Hagglund)

"The Utopian Society is the greatest agency for the education of morons that has ever been devised." This offhand appraisal by an enthusiastic but cynical member gives the essence of the most interesting and potentially effective organization of our depression period.

The most important factor in the amazing growth of California's latest "biggest ever" is that the great middle class is moving to the charity rolls. The former Iowan's dream of a sweet old age amid fragrant orange blossoms has turned to a nightmare. Thousands of citizens who had made provisions for the rainy day are now receiving their dole of supplies from the same depot patronized by those most "rugged" of Americans—California's real estate promotors

Two other factors should be taken into account. In its day, Technocracy became a sort of new religion to many Californians, and from this they became economic-minded. Finally, no group deserved more credit for the growth of the Utopian movement than the Better American federation and its mouthpiece, the Los Angeles Times and subservient police officials: for they created an atmosphere of suppression from which the Utopian Society is a welcome escape.

Adult Education

The Utopian Society so far has been an adult education movement. It functioned as a secret order until the number of its members made newspaper criticism dangerous to circulation. Another reason for secrecy is the psychology involved. "Put a guard outside the place where a good thing is being explained, and they come begging to let in." The usual method of gaining converts is this: You are approached thus, "Would you be interested in learning something about a society, growing at the rate of 5,000 a day right here in Los Angeles, which teaches not only the reason why you are where you are but also a workable way out by constitutional means?" Invited to "see for yourself", without obligation to join, you accept a card bearing the code number of your friend. This admits you past the guard at the home designated where you find yourself in the company of ten or twenty who have been brought in as you were.

Plenty of Patriotism

The society fairly leans backwards in its "Americanism," to insure against the charge of "subversive teaching." A big flag hangs in front of you and before the meeting proceeds, all pledge allegiance to it in approved post-war, public school fashion. At the close of the customary lecture, you are informed that if you desire to proceed further you must not only pledge secrecy, but "it becomes necessary that you take an oath to uphold the United States constitution."

This ritual over, the leader gives the aims of the society, which include guaranteeing employment to all, eliminating poverty, taking care of the old and feeble, preserving the American family, preventing speculation in our medium of exchange, etc. Somewhere along the way we learn that "man's interests" will be served with an annual income of $15,000 for every worker, plenty of leisure every day, and no work after the age of forty-five.

Each candidate is then led before three examiners, and a fairly complete record of his views and usefulness to the group is obtained.

Mass Meetings

After the house meeting, the fraternal lodge gives way to a showmanship which permanently relegates Aimee Semple McPherson to the novice class. Four "cycles" are shown to thousands—pageants depicting the progress of the "Children of Darkness" who have awakened to the insanity of an order in which people suffer in the midst of plenty, and have decided to find the legendary hermit, "Reason," who guides them to the land of "Plenty for All." The Pilgrims need only to quit thinking that "poverty is necessary" and, lo, he finds that when everyone works to "produce for use" each has "all he can use." Seven stations—practical, political and social experiments—mark the way to the promised land.

The sheer power and beauty of this ritual and drama compels acceptance of the Utopian message by literally hundreds of thousands. And with many there is more—they get an evangelistic thrill.

"Shall I be believed when I say that even my health and energy seemed increased at that moment?" says one. "It is for all of us a career, and a destiny, and we feel willing to work, live and die for the privilege of being among the first to usher humanity into the new order. Here is none of the animosity, prejudice and hatred that makes us sad about many modern movements. We swear together to drive all malice from our hearts and to practice the Golden Rule. I experience a new thrill of life and hope." This is typical testimony.

Is It Utopia?

Is it Utopia, indeed? Students of history have hesitated and generally refused to join a secret society designed for action, as long as its leaders remained unknown. The ghosts of a long line, from the Know Nothings to the unlamented K. K. K. haunted them. More insistent was the question: What is to guarantee that the organization will not ultimately be used for fascist purposes even if the present leaders are honest?

It should interest students of such movements that internal difficulties are due to the failure of hard-pressed leaders to develop a plan of action to carry out their promises. For once we have a liberal movement actually demanding that something be done about it If new leaders are able to use the educational methods already at hand to sell a real program of action "US, Incorporated" will make history. If not, it will prove just another liberal movement, adding to the average man's sense of futility.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

"Long experience has, I believe, demonstrated the fact that no contested political battle can be won without an active and enthusiastic organization which will put at work in their own localities, with their own neighbors and friends, a considerable pertentage of the people." W. G. Calderwood says. "Right in the corner where you are. Elections are usually reported by states but they are always won by precincts."

"The chief need at this hour is for the national leadership of every church and every other interested organization to arouse the leadership of the local units into an intense, organized, systematic campaign till the polls are closed and the ballots are counted (somtimes we win at the ballot box and lose on the tally sheets). If and when that is done, victory is as certain as sunrise."

PROFIT MOTIVE MUST PASS, SAYS WRITER
(Contributed)

The last book by H. A. Overstreet, professor and head of the department of philosophy and psychology, New York City college entitled, "We Move in New Directions," begins his first chapter thusly:

"The profit system economy is fated to pass away. This now seems certain for three major reasons. In the first place, the basic motivation involved is too low for what we have come to expect of civilized life. In the second place, the system is too wasteful to recommend itself to an intelligent, grown person accustomed to the precision and economies of science. In the third place, it is inherently self-contradictory.

"These three reasons, to alert minds, are now so evident that it would seem a waste of time to elaborate."

THE FUTURE OF 'EPIC'

Upton Sinclair: "We have Governor Merriam in a tight place, for in the last terrified moments of the Republican State Convention, realizing that they had to dress the old gentleman up as a progressive they put into their platform a demand for a thirty-hour week.

"Now we shall bring that proposal before the legislature and start a recall proceeding against every Republican who repudiates the platform pledge. That will include Merriam and it will be fun to watch him squirm.

Up and down the state I told the people that our plan of production for use was bound to come, regardless of who won the election. Imagine my amusement when two day after the election Merriam came out with an interview saying that while he did not believe in a barter as a permanent system, it might be that was the only way to may the unemployed self-supporting at the present, and that personally he would favor it. If you are interested, you may look in Professor Moley's magazine "Today" and find me making that same statement on October 27."

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

The New Deal had to come and likewise its experiments.

But if its experiments include dividing a one-man job into a two, three or four-man job THAT is not the way out.

Distribution must begin at the apex of our economic house not at the bottom.

It is evident that the New Deal is experimenting with an increase cost in living, THAT is not the way out.

To take a dollar away from a man who has been making say, a fair living and divide that dollar with two or more other men and at the same time lower the purchasing value of that dollar may be a New Deal, but it is a Rotten Deal and certainly will not end favorably for those responsible.

The powers that are responsible for keeping the wheels of industry going had better cooperate, whatever the sacrifice in finding a way out for legitimate work with reasonable income, otherwise there will be new captains at the wheels.

TURKEYS BRING US FAME
By D.A.W. "Off a Reporters Cuff" In Minneapolis Journal

Now that you've stuffed yourself full of turkey, like a silly ape we'd like to rub it in a bit, and make you read some more about turkeys:

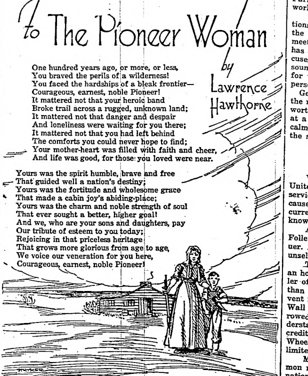
Minnesota is the second state in total turkey production in America But Thief River Falls, Minn., is the largest turkey shipping point in all of America. It's about a nine to one shot that the turkey you just gorged yourself on, came from Thief River Falls. The Land O' Lakes Creameries have shipped out 350,000 turkeys for eastern Thanksgiving tables in the past few days This makes 175 carloals of gobblers, which brought $875,000. Incidently, Minnesota farmers get about five cents a pound more this year than last. This establishes H F. Meyer, salesmanager for the Land O' Lakes, as All-American turkey seller. And I hope your turkey made you sick.

Freak Virginia Chimneys Natural Rock Formations

The Virginia "towers" or "chimneys," as they are called locally, range from 60 to 75 feet in height and at a distance look like the partially wrecked walls of a venerable castle—again like aged chimneys set down in the midst of a grove. There are seven, and they consist of time-stained limestone and rise perpendicularly from the alluvial borders of the stream which winds about their bases, forming a natural moat.

The Virginia chimneys are more regular in their strata than the picturesque Palisades of New York and appear to have been arranged by nature with perfect workmanship, with projections like dilapidated cornices designed by some noted Grecian architect, according to the Washington Star.

Geologists and scientists believe the chimneys are the product of geological upheavals of thousands of centuries ago. A great lake or river by the might of its turbulent waters many generations ago may have washed and whipped against the sides of these submerged walls of rock and gradually ground them to their present curious configurations. Later, after those waters disappeared, exposure of the limestone towers to weathering and alternating summer heat and winter cold may have completed the phenomenon.



To The Pioneer Woman
by
Lawrence Hawthorne

One hundred years ago, or more, or less,
You braved the perils of a wilderness!
You faced the hardships of a bleak frontier—
Courageous, earnest, noble Pioneer!
It mattered not that your heroic band
Broke trail across a rugged, unknown land;
It mattered not that danger and despair
And loneliness were waiting for you there;
It mattered not that you had left behind
The comforts you could never hope to find;
Your mother-heart was filled with faith and cheer,
And life was good, for those you loved were near.

Yours was the spirit humble, brave and free
That guided well a nation's destiny;
Yours was the fortitude and wholesome grace
That made a cabin joy's abiding-place;
Yours was the charm and noble strength of soul
That ever sought a better, higher goal!
And we, who are your sons and daughters, pay
Our tribute of esteem to you today;
Rejoicing in that priceless heritage
That grows more glorious from age to age,
We voice our veneration for you here,
Courageous, earnest, noble Pioneer!

Editorial Comment
From Our Exchanges

IN MONEY AND SORROW
Grand Rapids Herald Review

The repeal of the prohibition laws was to change many things. It has.

The bootlegger is still in business and the government does not know what to do about it.

Everyone is affected by increases in the casualty insurance that a car owner pays.

Here is some comment from the Christian Science Monitor:—

Sober automobile drivers, as well as those not so sober, may have to pay more for casulty insurance in the future as the result of drunken driving which is on the increase since repeal, it is declared by several insurance executives here.

The number of accidents determines the trend of rates, they explain, and if the curve of mishaps continues to mount, so will the price of insurance policies.

"A new and startling situation," arising since repeal, was called to the attention of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce recently by Mr. James S. Kemper, president of the Lumberman's Mutual Casualty Company. Damage from liquor during prohibitinon was deplorable, he said, but the present situation is much worse.

"All were shocked by deaths resulting from speakeasy raids and the dringing of poison alcohol under prohibition," said Mr. Kemper. "And yet what do we find today? As compared with the occasional loss of life from these causes during prohibition, we are now killing every day at least ten times as many persons (above the already terrific street and highway toll) not perhaps so much because of prohibition repeal as from improper regulation of the liquor traffic.

"In far too many cases these deaths are among the young men and women and children of our cities and towns."

Booze and gasoline do not mix. The public must some day choose which one must be given up.

The restoration of hard liquor was a great economic crime.

PUBLIC VS. PRIVATE OWNERSHIP
Stephen Messenger

Entrance of the U. S. Government into construction and operation of power projects has intensified the repetition of two assumption;; one, that private enterprise always is efficient; the other the public ventures are always wasteful. Everyone knows that private enterprise is not always efficient. Not only has everyone experienced mistakes made by private business, but most persons have had close contact with private enterprises so grossly inefficient that they became bankrupt. Herbert Hoover sponsored an investigation whose report on "Wastes in Industry" showed how far from efficiency was private operation of most enterprises.

Records for 50 years show almost 19 failures out of every 20 in wholesale, retail, manufacturing, and railroads. It is a discouraging record for investor to face.

The charge that the post office is filled with appointees with greater political "pull" than individual merit comes with poor grace from companies whose own appointments so often are based on nepotism; nor is bureaucracy absent from many of our great private businesses most of which are combined into "unions" or trusts and monopolies. The assumption that private business is efficient and public enterprise is not can not be accepted on the evidence of record.

EDUCATION NEEDED
Austin American

The slogan carried in the last issue of the Farmer Labor Leader that "the campaign started at midnight, November 6, 1934," was strictly to the point.

There is much to be done between now and the next election. A program of education must be carried to every precinct in the state. It is true that many persons who failed to support the Farmer-Labor platform this year did so because of false propaganda distributed by the reactionary forces, exemplified in the Republican party.

When any party has the support of the daily and weekly press to the extent the Republican party has, it is not surprising that many honest voters were "taken in." The Republicans realize this. They know that when a gospel, be it one of reaction or progressivism, is hammered hard enough, long enough and widely enough, the law of averages will swing a certain percentage.

It is with this realization that leaders of the Farmer-Labor movement have issued a call to party workers to start educating NOW.

Since the press of the state, with a few exceptions, seems unwilling to give both sides of the story the education can be accomplished only by group meetings and discussions. The Farmer-Labor party has a program—a very definite one. It makes no excuses for that program because it is fundamentally sound. The Republican party must make its appeal for votes by offering fake issues and by rendering personal attacks on the characters of its opponents.

Getting the aims of the party across is the job of the next two years. Educating the people to the true worth of the Cooperative Commonwealth program, at a time when it can be considered sanely and calmly, is the task before Farmer-Labor workers in the state today.

SILVER—NOT JUST CONVERSATION
Mid-West American

With the re-election of Burton K. Wheeler to the United States Senate, the country has again the services of a man who can see clearly that the prime cause for the strangulation of trade is the lack of currency—and who is not afraid to say what he knows.

Always a liberal, Wheeler in 1924 ran with La-Follette. Before that he was a Nonpartisan Leaguer. Always a friend of the Indian, he has worked unselfishly against the Indian Bureau abuses.

There has been a strong feeling in the West that an honest New Deal would have picked either Wheeler of Thomas for Secretary of the Treasury rather than Woodin or Morgenthau, but apparently Roosevent felt that he should fill that post with a proper Wall Street man. Now that billions have been borrowed and spent while the brain trusters cannot understand why people who have neither money nor credit don't buy, possibly Roosevelt will be ready for Wheeler's straight forward bill for the free and unlimited coinage of silver in the proportion of 16 to 1.

Money that can get into the hands of the common man, money that is not cotrolled by the international bankers—this is offered by the Wheeler silver bill. Is Roosevelt ready?

Nazi Corruptions Are Shown by Party Order

Hannover (TIS)—The mass corruption of the Nazi regime becomes more and more evident as shown by hundreds of cases of embezzlement, fraud and corruption pending before the local courts. To understand the extent to which corruption has permeated all sections of the Nazi government, it is only necessary to call attention to a new party order issued by Reichs Minister Rudolph Hess the righthand man of Adolph Hitler. .The order explicitly forbids all sections of the Nazi party to give publicity to commercial and other products, go into partnership with business firms or to canvass for business firms.

One of the latest cases is the mayor of Andisleben, who has just been sentenced to two and a half years in prison for forgeries and embezzlement of large funds for winter relief.

Farm Planned for Every Transient Camp in 1935

The men in the transient camps will produce their own food requirements next year, it is announced by Oscar W. Behrens, director, transient relief division, Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration).

A few experimental farms in the transient set-up were successfully cultivated this season. More than a carload of vegetables was raised and canned for use during the winter.

The feasibility of the plan proven, it will be extended next spring to utilize a thousand acres. This is the aggregate area of the small farms that are to be operated in conjunction with the camps.

All work on the farms will be done by the transients themselves. Minnesota master farmers will act as instructors. Between 150 and 200 milk cows will be apportioned between the camps, as well as an adequate number of hogs. Feed crops also will be raised, and pasturage provided.

The new venture may make the camps entirely self-supporting, as regards the basic food needs of the men, Mr. Behrens isad.

$4,000 Patronage Dividend Declared by Farmers' Union Oil Company of Roseau

After having been in business for ony six months the Farmers' Union Oil Station of Roseau Co. has declared a $4,000 patronage dividend. The original cash investment amounted to $4,600 which was raised by the selling of stock in Roseau County.

The first meeting of the Farmers' Union in the locality was held in Aug. 1933 at which meeting about ten people were present. Shortly before Christmas in 1933 another meeting was called by C. D. Egley and J. T. Mc Laughlin for the purpose of discussing the establishment of an oil station at which meeting only about a dozen people attended; articles of incorporation were drawn and officers were elected shortly afterwards.

Stock was sold in the company during March and April 1934 and on April 23 business began. Hjalmer Carlson, former light-weight wrestling champion from Sweden, was elected manager of the new institution. Two trucks were added to their equipment shortly after they had begun a business.

Otto Olson of Badger started handling Farmers' Union gas and oils and added another truck, the Ford Motor and the Peterson Motor Companies of Roseau also started buying their gas from the Famrers' Union. In October a service station was constructed in the city of Roseau.

During the harvest season 35,000 pounds of twine was handled thru the Farmers' Union which, according to reports, was only about half of what could have been sold if there had been adequate space for conducting the business.

Much of the success of the Roseau F. U. Oil Company can be attributed to the Northern Minnesota Leader because of the friendly attitude which they assumed towards the Union and the publishing of news pertaining to the activities of the Farmers Union, officials state.

During the business meeting held in Roseau last Monday afternoon Mr. Ralph Ingerson, manager of the Farmers' Union Central Exchange in St. Paul, spoke and described the trend towards cooperative enterprises since the depression; he stated that there are approximately 100,000 people now directly interested in cooperative enterprises in the middlewest and that the harder the times the more pronounced is the trend towards coops. Consumer Cooperatives show more immediate results than producers coops and are therefore of more value at the present time than the producer cooperatives because they show the effects of cooperation in the form of dividend checks and are a strong argument nn favor of the movement, according to Mr. Ingerson. He cited the need for following up of the good work started in cooperatives in Roseau County and stated that when all good business is run cooperatively that depressions would never again occur.

In discussing the dividend checks that were to be paid Monday, Mr. Ingerson told of the hard time organizers of the company had in selling stock of $4,600 and then cited how nearly the same amount was raised without a bit of effort other than to sell the product to the public; he asked the group, which numbered about 200, if they don't think it was easier to raise money by going into business for themselves than to go out and try to raise money by selling stock; with this in mind, he asked the audience to begin organizing other cooperative businesses in Roseau County and to help the coop, movement generally.

Mr. McLaughin spoke and explained to them how oil was processed and the cost of processing. He mentioned the difference in size of the attendance from that which had gathered last spring when the company was organized as a sign of healthy growth. Roseau County is now one of the leading counties of the United States in cooperative movement, he said.

Five percent of the patronage dividend is to be used for educational purposes by the state organization. It is the hope of the board of directors to establish cooperatives more extensively in business enterprise in the U. S. thru their educational program.

Most Widely Used Word

The world's most widely used word is "Amen," the old Hebrew expression meaning "So it is" or "So be it." It is employed by nearly one billion Christians, Jews and Mohammedans, or just half of the population of the world, says S. D. Kent, Seattle, in Collier's Weekly. The Mohammedans even end their letters and other manuscripts with it.

Love Is Like That

"IF I never see you again, Jack Alder, it will be too soon!"

"That's O. K. by me," Jack returned with as much anger as she had shown. "And now perhaps you wouldn't mind going into the house?"

Angelica Rice slammed the front door before her escort could get to the top of the porch steps. And that slam had a finality not to be denied. His ego hurt, Jack swore softly and then winced as he recalled how his fiery little sweetheart had reacted to his accusations an hour ago.

"You—you—" she had cried. "How could you ever believe that—that cat!" She grew stormier—"See here, Jack! If you can't trust me, our engagement is off, understand?"

If he had only had sense enough to keep quiet instead of urging her to say she hadn't dined with Ted.

"You are both too stubborn, Jill," Edith Mason said one day. "You know that Alice is just a jealous little cat. I heard her say once that she'd do anything to get Jack to look at her."

"Well, from reports, she's succeeded," Jill retorted. "They're together everywhere. And Jack doesn't seem to be terribly downcast when he's with her."

"He's just trying to make you jealous, old dear," Edith comforted. "But to get back to the question: you admit your attitude was wrong, even though Jack was unjust. . . ."

"Jack has admitted that he was wrong, too," Jill answered. "Oh, not to me," she put in hastily. "To every one but me. And now that he's taken up with that troublemaker."

"Call her up, Jack," Ted urged. "You know Alice was just stirring up trouble when she told you I took your girl to dinner. You should know I wouldn't."

"Well, if you didn't, she should have said so. If she wants to see me she can call me. I won't give in to her whims. Anyway, she probably wouldn't see me now." His resentment changed to pleading. "But what can I do, Ted? I miss her like the dickens."

"You certainly are the prize chump! Why not try getting Mary Benson's advice if you won't take mine?" Ted asked. "She's a good friend of both your families."

A good looking fellow, if rather sheepish, sat facing his mother's old friend ("Eloise, advisor to the love-lorn") next morning. The office door of the Daily Gazette was securely closed behind them.

"It's this way, Mrs. Benson," he said. "Day after tomorrow is Jill's birthday and I want to take her out. Can you help me patch things up?"

"Leave it to me, Jack," she said.

"Angelica, my dear, how are you? I called to see if you'd come down to the Gazette tomorrow. This year I want you to choose your own birthday present."

Mrs. Benson was phoning when Jill entered. "I'll be right over," she said hanging up.

"What a shame, Angelica," turning to the girl. "I have to run out for about ten minutes and there isn't a soul to take my phone. Would you mind looking after it until I come back?

"You probably won't have a single call," Mrs. Benson continued. "But if you do, answer as best you can, unless you're absolutely stumped. In that case tell them to call after 1:30. Think you can manage it?" Mrs. Benson looked so concerned that Jill reassured her quickly. When the older woman was gone, Jill felt full of responsibility.

The phone bell—"This is Eloise speaking." Jill answered as she was told. "Yes, it is perfectly correct for a girl to answer a boy's friendly letter if her parents do not object to the correspondence."

Five minutes, then the phone rang again. "This is Eloise speaking. . . ." She listened to a man's voice saying, "My fiancee and I had a falling out because of a meddlesome third person. We quarreled, parted and now we've found out that we both were wrong in our attitudes. But neither of us is big enough to call the other. Could you please advise me? I can truthfully say that we are still very much in love."

"The silly fools," Jill thought. Then she replied, "It is a good deal harder for a girl to call a man than the other way around. Put your silly pride aside. I'm positive your former fiancee will welcome you with open arms." Jill hesitated, and then burst out, "If you don't do this you two will be as miserable as another couple I know who are too pig-headed to realize how much they really love each other. Take it from me, I know!" Jill could not stifle the sob in her voice, and she hung up quickly.

Two minutes later she was startled as the door rushed open. "Darling!" Jack caught the teary-eyed girl in his arms. "Oh, sweet, I've been such a fool!" he whispered into her curls.

Mrs. Benson, loitering outside, closed the door softly before leaving for lunch.

King Killed in War

In 1578, King Sebastian of Portugal went to war in Morocco and was killed. His countrymen did not believe he had died and the idea that he would return spread rapidly. Up to 1832, or 254 years later, this idea still gripped Portugal and Brazil, and not only was the night sky watched constantly for his reappearance but commodities frequently were sold with the bills to be paid on "the return of Sebastian."—Collier's Weekly.

Hearings on valuation for taxation purposes of the properties of the mining companies of Northern Minnesota began on Monday before the State Tax Commission sitting as a State Board of Equalization for 1934 taxes payable in 1935. The mining companies are seeking a reduction on valuations.

Minnesota highway engineers returning from a national convention of highway officials, report that a nation-wide movement is under way to bring automobile manufacturers, safety experts and road designers into better agreement on the question of proper speed for motor travel. At present, automobiles are being built for greater and greater speed, demands are made of engineers to design roads for these speeds, and yet safety groups are clamoring for less speed in order to reduce traffic fatalities. By working together, the three groups can accomplish more for the public good.

Governor Olson declared that "it is essential that public ownership of forest land be increased and that long time land use planning be applied to forest lands in private ownership as well as to publicly owned forest lands." This is a far cry from the lackadaisical policy of the state government in the past when it was considered les majeste to interfere with the looting of our natural resources by greedy individuals and soul-less corporations.

Farmers of the 17 drouth counties of Minnesota are staring disaster straight in the eye, according to a survey of conditions made recently. Herds depleted by drouth and the government's cattle buying program are without sufficient feed to carry them thru the winter and many of the dairy cattle have dried up due to insufficient feed, thus depriving the farmers of their sole remaining source of income, the cream check. "Unless we have feed within three or four days, all of us will have to go on the relief lines," farmers say. A blizzard or severe snowstorm will kill off almost all the cattle, weakened from lack of sufficient feed since the summer of 1933.

..Governor Olson, in Washington,. in an effort to secure some real relief for the drouth stricken farmers, announced that 20,000,000 seedlings in the tree belt planting program of the federal government have been allocated to Minnesota for spring planting and that immediate work will be given Minnesota farmers in clearing present shelter belts and preparing the land.

Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, took a severe beating at the hands of the National Educational and Cooperative Union of America assembled in a national convention at Sioux Falls, S. Dak. recently. The principal point of attack was the AAA program of crop reduction. In the midst of the poverty and suffering of the people of the land, it is criminal to destroy necessities of life such as the triple A has been doing, it was said.

Variety, sprightly magazine of theatrical, radio and motion picture news published in New York, had the following comments to make on the action of the press in the recent Minnesota election: "Rags ran scare heads, throughout the campaign deploring Olson's 'communistic policies', shed tears over the certainty of business firms scramming the state if Olson was reelected, and in general cried Bogey Man so loudly that the public finally tired of it all. Papers which battled Olson tooth and nail were such die hards that they lacked even the usual courtesy of running the winner's photo after the finals came in. Neither were congrats forthcoming from the losers."

A close co-operative relation continues to exsist between the NRA Compliance Division, under the direction of Anna Dickie Oleson, and the Division of Women and Children of the Minnesota Industrial Commission. The Industrial Commission is charged with the responsibility of investigating cases of handicapped workers who are permitted under the various industry codes to work at a reduced wage if and when they obtain certificates of handicap from the Industrial Commission. In carrying out this responsibility investigation of approximately 100 of such permits was made in November to see if wages specified in the agreement were paid. Wage deficiencies and failure to comply with other standards set up by the U. S. Department of Labor were disclosed in certain industries. Material relating to these violations has in turn been sent to the State Compliance Director of Minnesota or to the Code Authority for such action as they may deem fit.

Cash dividends to depositors closed banks in Minnesota ha been paid at the rate of better th one a day since January 1, 19 according to Elmer N. Bens state commissioner of banks. A total of 355 dividends were declared up to November 1, 1934, amounting to $4,724,951.95. In the last thirty days, 45 dividends have been declared, amounting to $679,564.79.

Agricultural representatives of the mid-west states listened eagerly to Minnesota's plan for grasshopper eradication at the second regional conference on grasshopper control held at Fargo last week. The hoppers have been nearly eliminated in Minnesota through the application of a four year program of control with poison mash, reducing the infested acreage from five million acres in 1932 to less than a half a million acres in 1934. Other states where the hoppers have increased to serious proportions are becoming alarmed over the poosibility of a crop loss next year. The remedy lies with the Minnesota plan; where a danger exists should adopt it.

Marshall Co. Auditor Refutes False Campaign Statements

TO THE CITIZENS OF MARSHALL COUNTY:

Pursuant to my statement of two weeks ago I will give some facts in regard to the administration of the County Auditor's Office, in answer to a charge circulated by my opposition on the eve of the campaign in regard to auditor's clerk hire.

Now, after the campaign excitement is over and the people have given me an excelient endorsement, it may look like arguing a case to a jury who has already decided the case in my favor, but the charge which was aimed at me is also a serious censure of the County Board, County Attorney,Comptroller and Attorney General, who, in their respective positions, have full supervision and control of the matter of clerk hire allowance, and also in responce to numerous responce to numerous requests from friends I will give the matter a brief analysis.

The fact that the mud-slinging was offered to the very last days should be evidence enough as to the merit of their argument.

The object was to make the voters believe it is improper to ask for, or to allow, additional clerk hire under exsisting ordinary circumstances, and second, that I was not qualified for this work and had to depend on my helpers for doing the work I was hired for, and third that Marshall County has paid proportionately more than adjoining counties. In reply to the first will say, it is a physical impossibility for anyone to run the auditor's office in a manner required by the State Examining Department, without additional allowance, especially after the taxable valuation has dropped over 40%. In reply to the second, I will let someone else pass judgement. I hope no one knows me as a vain boaster, but I wish to assure you that I have made a strong effort to accomplish that which should be reasonably expected of me as a public servant, and have worked more overtime than most, if not all, employed in the county court house. In connection herewith I wish to state that I have enjoyed the best co-operation from my helpers in the office. In regard to the third, will say the Marshall County is not proportionately paying more in auditor's office salaries than adjoining counties, taking everything into consideration. In the famous pamphlet compiled by the campaign manager of my opponent, an unfair scheme was attempted in comparing the clerk hire alone, not the total office salary including the auditor's salary as should have done, with the smaller counties, namely: Kittson, Pennington and Red Lake, and not giving any comparison as to area or valuation of said counties.

The Auditor's Office salaries for the neighboring counties for the last three years were:

Kittson	3,692.00	3,292.00	3,292.00
Penn.	2,420.00	2,420.00	2,430.00
Red Lake	2,691.20	2,655.00	2,600.00
Marshall	6,165.11	5,929.65	4,680.00
Polk	7,596.00	7,611.00	7,239.90

The largest portion of the work in the Auditor's office is in connection with the assessment roll and tax levy and is in proportion to the number of items on said roll. These numbers not being available for the various counties, the area and valuation should be considered. The next largest is the delinquent taxes—making list, figuring penalties, reports, statements, assignments, receipts, distribution, etc Therefore, the amount of delinquency should also be considered. To abbreviate matters we will now analyze the taxing period 1932-1933 by using percentages, Marshall County being taken as a basis of 100%.

	Area	Assessed Value	Value per A.	Tax Delinq.	Auditor's Office Salary
Kittson	65	68	115	73	62
Penn.	37	58	119	99	46
Red Lake	25	36	129	89	49
Total	—	—	—	—	—
3 counties	127	162	119	86	157
Marshall	100	100	100	100	100
Polk	120	228	168	53	140

(It is understood the numbers represent percents.)

In analyzing the above let us consider the three counties which you were supposed to believe were paying less for running their auditor's office than Marshall County alone. Although the area is but 127% of Marshall County's, the taxable valuation is 162%, the reason for this difference being higher value per acre of unpatted property. For example, it takes 119 section of land in Marshall County to equal in value 100 sections scattered proportiontaely in the three counties and second more city property, especially so in Pennington. Then consider that the tax delinquency in the three counties is only 86% of the delinquency in Marshall and you must agree that Marshall County is proportionately not payng more for Auditor's office salary than these neighboring counties. Now let us glance at our apparently neglected neighbor Polk County: Area 120% of Marshall's apply 168%, the comparative value per acre, and you have a difference of 26% to reach the 228% valuation, the difference being in the proportional larger amount in city property.

The number of items on their tax roll should therefor be about 146% of ours and then considering the tax delinquency of only 53% of that of our county you must agree that proportionately we are not paying more that Polk County.

Finally, let us compare the auditor's office salaries paid under the administration of the former auditor of Marshall County, for whom the same crowd that opposed me now were boosting, trying to make believe that he was the best auditor in the State of Minnesota: Average per year for period 1927-1930, his last term, $6,301.71, as compared to average per year for 1932_1933 of $5,304.82, or nearly $1,000.00 per year less. The reason I do not include 1931 is the enormous amount of work that was essential to get the records in proper shape, on account of neglect by the former auditor and would not be fair for comparative purpose.

Another outstanding item of reducing cost to the county is the consolidation of the published financial statement. For period of 1927-1930 average per year $1,519.35, as compared to $758.15 for 1932-1933, or approximately to one_ half the cost.

In conclusion I will quote from Comptroller's Report: "Comparison of Disbursements for 1932 and 1933 shows an approximate reduction of $7,000.00 during 1933 in general expense, not including payments of $9,232.00 for interest on warrants and $3,740.00 bond issue expense not incurred in 1933."

Anticipating greater accomplishments the next term of office, I remain,

Yours for service,
LEVI G. JOHNSON

School Audit Shows Poor Management

Shortage

The report of the former treasurer, L. M. Rayson, as of July 17 [illegible]28 showed a balance of $63,987.[illegible] but he had not included in his receipts an item of $223.20 interest on certificates of deposit. His balance therefore on that date should have been $64,210.49, as is shown on this report. His bank balance on that date as shown herein was only $63,954.59. The shortage at the beginning of the period covered by the audit was therefore $[illegible]5.90.

Verification of the treasurer's balance on July 10, 1933, the date on which Mr. Rayson left office shows a shortage on that date in the sum of $1,167.99, an analysis of which is shown in Schedule G hereof.

In an interview with the examiner on October 1, 1934, Mr. L. M. Rayson, was unable to account for the discrepency but admitted his liability for the sum of $1,167.99 and restitution of that amount was made during the course of the examination.

Apparently no verification was made of the treasurer's balance by the auditing committee appointed by the board, although the members of such committee were paid a nominal fee for their services, such payment being illegal.

Investments, Certificates of Deposit and Interest

No record was maintained of the investments except totals as shown in the annual reports submitted by the treasurer.

Investments, certificates of deposit and interest received on investments were verified by direct examination of the record of the various banks and of the city of Thief River Falls, a detail of which is set forth in Schedule L of this report.

A detailed record of investments should be maintained by the treasurer.

Tax Levies Voted by the Board

The clerk's record fails to show the levy as made by the board in the year 1929.

Except for the first year the levies are shown in mills. Levies should be made in specific amounts and not in mills, as required by Mason's Statutes, Sec. 2055.

Funds

A teachers' salary fund is not maintained. There are certain moneys of a school district which can be disbursed only for teachers' salaries and should be placed in a separate fund, according to the attorney general's opinion, copy of which is hereto attached.

A bond and interest fund should also be established in which should be placed all moneys derived from taxes levied for this purpose, and also from income tax. Attached are copies of attorney general's opinions that income tax apportionment can be used only for payment of bonds and interest.

Automobile Liability Insurance

Liability insurance is carried by the district. The attorney general has held that a school district incurs no liability in such cases, and therefore has no authority to insure. Copy of opinion is hereto attached.

Treasurer's Bonds

The bonds of L. M. Rayson, treasurer, covering the first two years years under audit were not available for inspection. The records indicate, however, that such bonds had been written by the First National Insurance Agency and the premium paid by orders no.21328 and No. 22488, in amounts of $50. each.

Bonds have been insufficient to meet the legal requirements. The bond covering the current year has been reduced to $5,000.00.

Section 2884, Mason's Statutes, provides that the treasurer shall give bond, if furnished by a surety company, in a sum equal to the amount of money that probably will be in his hands at any one time during his term. The tax settlements received from the county treasurer last year varied from about $2,000.00 to $12,000.00.

All treasurer's bonds listed in this report contain a clause exempting the treasurer from liability in case of failure by the bank.

Bonds containing an exemption clause are not approved by this department nor by the attorney general. Attached is a copy of attorney general's opinion.

Depository Collateral

The Union State Bank is the designated depository for the district's funds.

Collateral security has been deposited in lieu of a surety bond but no assignment has been made to the district of such collateral, in conformity with Chapter 370, Laws 1929.

Without such assignment the district does not have title to the securities and authority to sell in case of bank failure.

Citizens State Bank of Thief River Falls—Closed

The Citizens State Bank was closed in 1924. At the time of closing, the district had a balance of $2,301.79 in checking account and $3,064.76 in time certificates, in all totaling $5,366.55.

On March 8,1926 there was credited a dividend from the state banking department in amount of $544.44 reducing the amount to $4,366.55.

On March 8, 1926 there was credited a dividend from the state banking department in amount of $544.44 reducing the amount to $4,822.11. The district had a depository bond signed by five sureties, which bond is not available for inspection. Two payments from Rasmus Oen, surety, of $500.00 each, were credited on October 3, 1928 and on October 8, 1929, respectively leaving $3,822.11 unpaid. Mr. Oen, and possibly another, were the only sureties from which moneys were collected.

At a meeting of the board held on April 8, 1930 the board entered into an agreement with Mr. Oen in which a compromise settlement was made accepting $3,000.00 as payment in full. Members of the board stated that it was agreed that any subsequent bank dividends should revert to Mr. Oen. The agreement above mentioned, as recorded in the clerk's record, contains no such stipulation, how ever.

Members of the board further stated that inasmuch as only one or two sureties were able to contribute, the board felt that it was unfair to compel them to pay the full amount.

The board as trustees of the school district had no legal right to release the sureties except upon the payment of the total amount of the loss.

First National Bank of Thief River Falls—Closed

..At the closing of this bank the district had $372.87 in a checking account and $301.94 interest added, in time certificates. This is secured by a $1,000.00 htate highway bond but this bank will soon pay 85% in dividends, and it appears that all depositors will eventually be paid in full.

Payments—No Orders

Several instances appear where the treasurer has made payments by checking before the issuance of orders. In such payments are included such items as purchase of land, payments of taxes, commencement speaker and bonds and interest.

Section 2833, as amended by Chapter 187, Laws 1931, provides that the treasurer "shall receive and be responsible for all moneys of the district, and shall disburse the same on orders signed by the isgned by the clerkan d counterchairman or other vouchers authorized by law."

Inasmuch as the dates of maturity of bonds and the payments of interest are fixed, the treasurer has ample time to secure the order before payment, as provided by the above mentioned statutes.

Land

By resolution adopted at the annual meeting lots 12 to 20, of block 8, were purchased in 1932 for $1,200.00.

At the annual meeting held in July, 1930, it was resolved to purchase lots 14, 15 and 16 of block 66, for the sum of $4,000.00.

The board took over a contract on such property, entered into between Emma Hall, party of the first part and Clarence Pope, party of the second part, the amount of such contract being $4,000.00 and payments to be made at the rate of $40.00 per month, with interest at the rate of 6% per annum after maturity, and with an option of paying the whole sum before maturity.

On July 17, 1934, the close of the 1933-34 fiscal year, a balance of $1,920.00 remained unpaid.

Illegal Payments—Schedule K. Officers Interested in Contracts

Section 10305, Mason's Statutes, provides that no public officer who shall be authorized to make any contract in his official capacity shall voluntarily become interested individually, directly or indirectly, in such contract.

The Thief River Falls Times, a weekly newspaper, has furnished a large amount of supplies to the district. A. E. Mattson is part owner of such newspaper.

The Thief River Falls Times has during the entire period under review been designated as the official paper for the district. In this connection the board stated that up to the spring of 1933, such paper was the only legal newspaper in the district However, during the period covering the 1933-34 fiscal year there were and still are two legal newspapers within the district.

Unauthorized Appropriations

By order No. 24195 the Thief Rvier Falls Commercial Club was paid $3.00 for supplies for lunches at a legislative meeting.

Unauthorized Traveling

Chapter 98, Laws of 1925, provides that the board, by a two-thirds vote may become a member of the Minnesota School Board's Association and pay the actual and necessary expenses incurred by one member of the board in attending such meetings.

It is noted, however, that two members attended conventions at the expense of the district.

The records do not show that L. M. Rayson was appointed a delegate, except during the first year under audit.

Financial

An analysis of the district's financial condition at the end of the 1933-34 fiscal year with a corresponding date six years prior, discloses that while the cash has been reduced approximately $50,000.00 the bonded debt has been reduced by $66,000.00. In addition to this the Industrial Arts Building was remodeled at a cost of $21,600.00, a bus was purchased, new seats and other furniture and equipment, also a stoker has been installed, and the amount of $3,820.00 has been disbursed for land.

The tax rate has been reduced from 45.2 mills in 1928 to 37 mills in 1933.

Leads in Mineral Products

Pennsylvania surpasses all other states in the annual value of its mineral products. In 1930 the total value of its mineral output was $605,336,200; 327,473 persons were engaged in mining industries and 57,539 in clay, glass and stone industries. By far the most valuable and most abundant resource is coal. From 1830 to 1880 Pennsylvania produced two-thirds of the annual tonnage of coal mined in the United States, while the proportion in 1929 was 39.3 per cent of the total output.

Revolutionary Calendar of the French Republic

The revolutionary calendar was the calendar of the first French republic, says a writer in the Indianapolis News. It was substituted for the ordinary calendar by a decree of the national convention in 1793. The 22nd of September, 1792, the day from which the existence of the republic was reckoned, was the date of the new calendar. The year began at midnight of the day of the autumnal equinox, and was divided into twelve months of 30 days, with five additional days (sans-culottides) for festivals, and six in every fourth year. Each month was divided into three decades of ten days each, the week being abolished. The names of the months, with their English significance, and the approximate dates of their commencement are as follows: Vendemiaire (vintage), September 22; Brumaire (fog), October 22; Frimaire (sleet), November 21; Nivose (snow), December 21; Pluviose (rain), January 20; Ventose (wind), February 19; Germinal (seed), March 21; Floreal (blossom), April 20; Prairial (pasture), May 20; Messidor (harvest), June 19; Thermidor or Fervidor (heat), July 19, and Fructidor (fruit), August 18. The five regular sans-culottides were dedicated respectively to the Virtues, Genius, Labor, Opinion and Rewards. This calendar was abolished by Napoleon at the end of 1805.

Crippled Children Aided Through Sale of Seals

Nearly 700 crippled children were examined during the year at Orthopedic Clinics conducted in various sections of the state. Examination by doctors, specialists in their line, and advice on the medical and vocational procedure to be taken are given at the clinics, which are made possible through Christmas Seals. A typical clinic scene is pictured above.

Shortage

The report of the former treasurer, L. M. Rayson, as of July 17 28 showed a balance of $63,987.- but he had not included in his receipts an item of $223.20 interest on certificates of deposit. His balance therefore on that date should have been $64,210.49, as is shown on this report. His bank balance on that date as shown herein was only $63,954.59. The shortage at the beginning of the period covered by the audit was therefore $[illegible]5.90.

Verification of the treasurer's balance on July 10, 1933, the date on which Mr. Rayson left office shows a shortage on that date in the sum of $1,167.99, an analysis of which is shown in Schedule G hereof.

In an interview with the examiner on October 1, 1934, Mr. L. M. Rayson, was unable to account for the discrepency but admitted his liability for the sum of $1,167.99 and restitution of that amount was made during the course of the examination.

Apparently no verification was made of the treasurer's balance by the auditing committee appointed by the board, although the members of such committee were paid a nominal fee for their services, such payment being illegal.

Investments, Certificates of Deposit and Interest

No record was maintained of the investments except totals as shown in the annual reports submitted by the treasurer.

Investments, certificates of deposit and interest received on investments were verified by direct examination of the record of the various banks and of the city of Thief River Falls, a detail of which is set forth in Schedule L of this report.

A detailed record of investments should be maintained by the treasurer.

Tax Levies Voted by the Board

The clerk's record fails to show the levy as made by the board in the year 1929.

Except for the first year the levies are shown in mills. Levies should be made in specific amounts and not in mills, as required by Mason's Statutes, Sec. 2055.

Funds

A teachers' salary fund is not maintained. There are certain moneys of a school district which can be disbursed only for teachers' salaries and should be placed in a separate fund, according to the attorney general's opinion, copy of which is hereto attached.

A bond and interest fund should also be established in which should be placed all moneys derived from taxes levied for this purpose, and also from income tax. Attached are copies of attorney general's opinions that income tax apportionment can be used only for payment of bonds and interest.

Automobile Liability Insurance

Liability insurance is carried by the district. The attorney general has held that a school district incurs no liability in such cases, and therefore has no authority to insure. Copy of opinion is hereto attached.

The tax settlements received from the county treasurer last year varied from about $2,000.00 to $12,000.00.

All treasurer's bonds listed in this report contain a clause exempting the treasurer from liability in case of failure by the bank.

Bonds containing an exemption clause are not approved by this department nor by the attorney general. Attached is a copy of attorney general's opinion.

At the annual meeting held in July, 1930, it was resolved to purchase lots 14, 15 and 16 of block 66, for the sum of $4,000.00.

The board took over a contract on such property, entered into between Emma Hall, party of the first part and Clarence Pope, party of the second part, the amount of such contract being $4,000.00 and payments to be made at the rate of $40.00 per month, with interest at the rate of 6% per annum after maturity, and with an option of paying the whole sum before maturity.

On July 17, 1934, the close of the 1933-34 fiscal year, a balance of $1,920.00 remained unpaid.

The Thief River Falls Times, a weekly newspaper, has furnished a large amount of supplies to the district. A. E. Mattson is part owner of such newspaper.

The Thief River Falls Times has during the entire period under review been designated as the official paper for the district. In this connection the board stated that up to the spring of 1933, such paper was the only legal newspaper in the district However, during the period covering the 1933-34 fiscal year there were and still are two legal newspapers within the district.

Unauthorized Appropriations

By order No. 24195 the Thief Rvier Falls Commercial Club was paid $3.00 for supplies for lunches at a legislative meeting.

Unauthorized Traveling

Chapter 98, Laws of 1925, provides that the board, by a two-thirds vote may become a member of the Minnesota School Board's Association and pay the actual and necessary expenses incurred by one member of the board in attending such meetings.

It is noted, however, that two members attended conventions at the expense of the district.

The records do not show that L. M. Rayson was appointed a delegate, except during the first year under audit.

Financial

An analysis of the district's financial condition at the end of the 1933-34 fiscal year with a corresponding date six years prior, discloses that while the cash has been reduced approximately $50,000.00 the bonded debt has been reduced by $66,000.00. In addition to this the Industrial Arts Building was remodeled at a cost of $21,600.00, a bus was purchased, new seats and other furniture and equipment, also a stoker has been installed, and the amount of $3,820.00 has been disbursed for land.

The tax rate has been reduced from 45.2 mills in 1928 to 37 mills in 1933.

Pennsylvania surpasses all other states in the annual value of its mineral products. In 1930 the total value of its mineral output was $605,336,200; 327,473 persons were engaged in mining industries and 57,539 in clay, glass and stone industries. From 1830 to 1880 Pennsylvania produced two-thirds of the annual tonnage of coal mined in the United States, while the proportion in 1929 was 30.3 per cent of the total output.

Revolutionary Calendar of the French Republic

The revolutionary calendar was the calendar of the first French republic, says a writer in the Indianapolis News. It was substituted for the ordinary calendar by a decree of the national convention in 1793. The 22nd of September, 1792, the day from which the existence of the republic was reckoned, was the date of the new calendar. The year began at midnight of the day of the autumnal equinox, and was divided into twelve months of 30 days, with five additional days (sans-culottides) for festivals, and six in every fourth year. Each month was divided into three decades of ten days each, the week being abolished. The names of the months, with their English significance, and the approximate dates of their commencement, are as follows: Vendemiaire (vintage), September 22; Brumaire (fog), October 22; Frimaire (sleet), November 21; Nivose (snow), December 21; Pluviose (rain), January 20; Ventose (wind), February 19; Germinal (seed), March 21; Floreal (blossom), April 20; Prairial (pasture), May 20; Messidor (harvest), June 19; Thermidor or Fervidor (heat), July 19, and Fructidor (fruit), August 18. The five regular sans-culottides were dedicated respectively to the Virtues, Genius, Labor, Opinion and Rewards. This calendar was abolished by Napoleon at the end of 1805.

COUNTY BOARD APPROPRIATES AGENT $1,500

Increase Cost of Operation Causes Budget Increase Of $ 300

The county board met Tuesday and Wednesday of this week at the county courthouse and took up the routine business of tax adjustments and road gravelling. An incidental fund of $250 for the auditor office was voted by the board.

Gilbert Fabrick, of the SERA, appeared before the board asking that the county allow money to pay for the hauling in of 200 cords of wood to be distributed to the poor of the county; he stated that the SERA would pay for the help needed but money could not be gotten to hire trucks. The county board allowed fifty cents a cord for the first hundred cords hauled in but stipulated that no more than 100 cords would be accepted.

The County Agent, Douglass turned in a financial report of the expenses of the office during the past year which was accepted by board. His budget for next year was estimated at $1500 as compared with an appropiation of $1200 last year. An appropiation of $1500 was made with the understanding that no more than was needed would be used.

CORRECTION!

In the story carrying a comparison of taxes under the new Homestead Tax law in last week's issue of the Forum a typographical error in the last paragraph gives the taxes that would be paid upon a business property of $4,000 valuation in the city of Thief River Falls at $117.92. This should have been $177.92. The difference in taxes on a business property and a "homestead" of equal value (both $4,000) would be $66.72.

County Loan of $250,000 Obtained by Co. Auditor

Fowler negociated with the State Board of Investmbents for a loan of $250,000 for Pennington County to be used in taking up the county's 6% indebtedness with bonds from the state bearing 4½% interest. This does not increase the debt of the county, says Mr. Fowler, but merely effects a saving in the interest rate of 1¾%.

Milk Prices Raised To 9c at a Recent Meeting of Dealers

The retail price of milk will be increased to nine cents per quart effective Dec. 15, according to an announcement by the Milk Dealers Organization made this week. Cream will increase to 18c per pint and half-pints to nine cents.

A considerable increase in the cost of production, due to advancing feed prices, is given as the reason for the increase. An analysis shows that even at the advancing price, milk is cheaper considering feed costs, than it has been for several years.

The decision was reached in a meeting of the Milk Dealers Organization composed of the following: P. Engelstad, Waldie Christensen V. C. Noper, I. G. Lane and Son, V E. Copp, C. H. Norquist, F. W. Smith, C. T. Thompson, Produce Dairy, Hans Sande, Hardy North Dairy, William Korstad, I. G. Newland.

Mr. Douville announced that a very important meeting would be held on Monday night Dec. 17 at the courthouse. All members and all those interested in the group are urged to attend.

VALUATION OF SCHOOL DIST. DOWN 11 PCT.

Tax Rate Increases 2.5 Mills Over 1933 According To Supt. Bye

The board of education of Independent School District No. 18 met Monday evening, December 10 at the high school.

A report submitted to the school board by Superintendent Morris Bye indicated that the 1934 assessed valuation for the school district is $1,417,444.00 or $175,916.00 less than the 1933 valuation of $1,593,360. This represents a decrease of 11% in valuation. The valuation in the rural area of the district decreased 22% while in the city the valuation decreased 9.8%.

The total 1934 school tax rate for this district is 39.5 mills. The total 1933 tax rate was 37 mills, so the 1934 rate is 6.7% higher, but since the assessed valuation is 11% less this year, the 1934 rate will raise 4.3% less money.

Mr. Bye states that the December tax settlement indicated that tax delinquency is decreasing. It was noted that the receipts from the special maintenance levy this year were only 84% less than December 1933, even though this year's rate is 12% lower.

SMILEY CLUB IS WINNER OF PLAY CONTEST

Old - Fashioned Style Revue And Singing School Featured

With it's presentation of "Quack, Quack," the Smiley Community club was awarded first place in the one-act play contest conducted by the Pennington county community clubs at the city auditorium Saturday evening.

A brief synopsis of the playlet reveals two doctors, Dr. Paine and Dr. Slycum as two doctors who planned to make a great deal of money in a hurry, and the incurring humorous incidents which finally resulted in their rapid exit. The cast of characters were well suited to their parts, and included Jim McCrum, Patrick Culkins Clarence Weckworth, Violet Larson, Mrs. Walter Lendobeja, Mrs. J. McCrum, Mrs. Owen Weckworth Junior Allen, Mrs. Elias Peterson W. E. McCrum, Ruth Stenseth, Arthur Stenseth and Norton Nelson The members of the play will receive a free trip to the farmers and home makers short course at St. Paul in January as reward for their achievement.

The Steiner community club placed second with its play, "When the Worm Turned", which was splendidly enacted by a limited cast which included Harvey Copp Vernon Malberg and Thea Saugen Other plays presented were "The Wedding" by the Rocksbury club and "Jumbo Jim" by the Silverton club. All the plays were so ably presented that the judges had dificulty in picking the winners. Judges of the contest were Miss Bena Johnson, Dr. A. E. Jacobson, and Arnold E. Carlson.

Following the play contest, members of the various community clubs took part in an old-fashioned style revue, modeling costumes of the good old days of hoops and bustles, derbies and swallow-tailed coats.

Mrs. Theodore Lendobeja of the Kratka community club was first prize winner in the revue, wearing a costume of homespun which had been spun, woven, dyed and sewed by her great grandmother Mrs. Freeman Allen of the Smiley club placed second with her "Old Grey Bonnet" costume of the year 1905.

Winners in the style revue from the various clubs were as follows: Adeline Mathison (1854), and Mrs Hans Prestby (1904), Wyandotte; Mrs. Theodore Lendobeja (1844) and Agnes Anenson (1885), Kratka; Eunice Thoreson (1900), and Miss Holappa (1905), Goodridge: Mrs. Louise Anderson (1905), and Mrs. Henry Oen (1878), Rocksbury; Miss Caroline Austinson (1900) and Miss Nina Malberg (1895) Steiner; Miss Doris Leiran (1882) and Miss Anna Hegernes (1880) Silverton; Mrs. Freeman Allen (1905) and Mrs. Ole Peterson (1895), Smiley.

Comprising the judging committee for the style revue, were Mrs Emil Zeh of this city, Mrs. John Hanson of St.Hilaire and Mrs. J Paine of Goodridge.

An old fashioned singing school led by "Professor" V. C. Noper with the various clubs dramatizing the songs that were sung brought the evenings program to a successful closing.

The large municipal skating rink opened for skating the last part of last week and was welcomed by the young people in large numbers. Each team will be composed of two members, who will debate both sides of the question during the first three rounds, after which the winner will be decided by elimination.

Members of the Lincoln high school debate team are Francis Engle, Oscar Bickley, Corlan Dokken Malcolm Magnuson, Dorothy Rau and Kendall Gustafson. Judges will be the visiting coaches, faculty members and townspeople.

SENIOR HOCKEY GROUP DISCUSS PLANS MON EVE

Regional Hockey Playoff to To Be Held On Local Rink

A group of prospective hockey players met in the Veterans' Memorial Room at the Auditorium on Monday evening to discuss plans for financing a team for the coming year. Alex Campbell, chairman of the meeting outlined the prospects for the proposition. Roy Lambert was chosen chairman of the finance committee and instructed to raise money for equipment in any way he saw fit. Mr. Lambert was not present.

Much sentiment for a senior hockey team has developed during the past week. Since the regional hockey tournament is to be held here; it would be appropriate for Thief River Falls to have a team entered, according to M. Messenger Regional Director of Leisure Time Projects for this region consisting of eight counties.

Prospects are bright for an A-1 team this year, Mr. Campbell stated as there are five men available who played on the team of two years ago, and, in addition, there are two boys who will be brought up from the Junior League and three men from outside who have played a great deal of hockey before coming here.

One of the topics under discussion last night was the possibility of importing a "player-coach" from either one of the "Range" towns or Canada to take charge of the Junior teams and to coach and play on the city team. This plan is being used in all the larger centers and has been found to be one of the best ways to put a well coached team on the ice.

The first game scheduled for the year will be against Red Lake Falls on New Year's Day and it is planned to compete with all the best teams in this section of the state.

CITY ENGINEER VIEBAHN QUITS YEAR-OLD POST

City Council Holds a Busy Session Last Tues. Evening

The regular meeting of the city council was held Tuesday evening and because Christmas falls on the date for the next regular meeting the time was postponed to Friday Dec. 28.

A controversy arose between Dr. Penney and Messrs. Benson and Salveson over a building permit that the latter two had applied for. The permit asked for permission to remodel the upstairs of the Benson-Salveson building which, according the Dr. Penney would create a fire hazard and would increase the insurance rates for the occupants of the Dahl building. The council took no action on the petition but passed a motion to refer the application to the State Fire Marshall.

E. B. Burstad was granted a permit to continue giving dances at the Sons of Norway Hall; a license was granted to J. Midvid to sell Grain Belt beer. Because the city has been unable to get a contract for the stoker which was installed in the auditorium, and because ample time has not yet lapsed in which to test out the stoker the mayor vetoed the payment to the company that was approved by the council at the last meeting.

Some difficulty has been met in the drive to eliminate radio reception interference in that the people owning the interfering machines refused to pay for suppressors for the motors; the city attorney stated that this matter would be taken care of at the earliest possible time. Dr. Newell appeared before the council and stated that because he was planning on moving out of the city limits as soon as it was possible for him to build next spring that the petition regarding his dogs should be laid over. The city attorney stated that it was necessary to have a hearing but time enough would be granted so that Dr. Newell could save his dogs by moving in the spring.

A representative of the Pioneer Weatherstripping Company asked the council to consider weather stripping the auditorium and de-

Fowler Attends Tax Committee Meeting In Cities Last Wk.

County Auditor H. L. Fowler returned Sunday from Minneapolis where he attended a meeting of Governor Olson's Interim Tax Committee on Friday, December 7 Mr. Fowler is a member of the committee.

According to Mr. Fowler, the committee recommended the discontinuance of discount sales on taxes. The present law on discounts goes out of effect Dec. 31st of this year, after which there will be no more discounts, therefore Mr. Fowler urges anyone wishing to redeem their lands to attend to the matter before the end of the year as there will probably be no law passed to that effect in the next legislative session.

The committee would recommend that the legislature place a discount on payment of taxes while current, to encourage tax collections and that the period of redemption from tax sales be placed at sixty days instead of one year. was changed by the last legislature.

These are but afew of the high lights of the committee's report says Mr. Fowler, but the report will be filed with Governer Olson on Dec. 15 after which it will be made public.

$3,825,000 More Needed to Match the U. S. Highway Aid

Approximately $3,825,000 additional income will be needed by the Minnesota Highway department next year if it is to match the federal aid allotment anticipated for this state, according to N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner.

Beginning in 1935, the federal government will demand dollar for dollar matching of highway funds by the state. In the past two years the national government gave Minnesota more than $15,000,000 in emergency highway grants as an employment measure. This money has kept state highway construction going since motor vehicle license fees were reduced in 1933 Mr. Elsberg said, but now that outright grants have been discontinued, very little construction will be possible with present state revenues.

Commissioner Elsberg gave the following analysis of state highway finances for the coming year:

1935 Estimated Revenues

(Based on average receipts during 1933 and 1934, with no change in present motor vehicle license fees.)

License fees	$ 6,400,000
2|3 share of gas tax	6,700,000
Miscel. receipts	175,000
Total revenues	$13,275,000

1935 Estimated Expenditures

Bond chgs. (int. & prin.)	4,100,000
Expenses of Sec. State's office, payment to state general fund and department admin.	1,000,000
Maintainance	5,500,000
Contracted obligations	500,000
Right of way, special agreement, etc,	1,000,000
Equipment	400,000
State expense in completing NRA program	350,000
Highway patrol	250,000
Total expenditures	$13,100,000
Revenues	$13,275,000
Expenditures	$13,100,000
Balance free for matching	$175,000
Amount of federal aid expected to be offered to Minnesota	$ 3,400,000
*Amount of state funds necessary to match	$ 4,000,000
Total state funds needed	$4,000,000
State funds available	$ 175,000
Additional state funds required for matching	$3,825,000

*(From a practical, working standpoint it is impossible to plan and carry out a construction program in which state funds will exactly balance federal funds. A considerable leeway for contingencies is required.

NORTHWEST STATION GIVES FACTS ON SOIL MOISTURE

Inquiries received at the Northwest Experiment Station verify the old statement that the weather is one subject which continues to hold the interest of human beings regardless of constant repetition. As a partial answer to the many questions which have been received during recent weeks, R. S. Dunham, agronomist, has prepared a brief summary of some of the more important climatic factors of the past season.

Acording to Mr. Dunham, records at this station for 1934 shows a total precipitation of 16.9 inches to December 1, compared with an average of 19.9 inches for the past 34 years. During the past six years the precipitation has failed to reach the 34 year average in amount varing from .8 to 5.8 inches a year. During the period, April 1 to October 1, which is generally considered the growing season, the precipitation this year was 13 inches, while the 34 year average was 14.1 inches. This average however, has not been reached since 1928.

The rapid reduction of soil moisture through the late spring and summer is also brought out by soil samples which were taken at various times. In May 1934 soil at the experiment station contained 27 percent water in the surface six inches, 24 percent at 12 inches below the surface, 20 percent at 24 inches, and 20 percent at 36 inches. The soil was again sampled in September at which time the surface soil contained only 11 per cent water; at 12 inches, 10 per cent; at 24 inches, 10 percent; and at 36 inches, 11.5 percent. Thus a total loss of moisture in the upper 36 inches of soil amounted to 405 tons an acre or an equivalent of 3.3 inches of rain. Soil sampled the first of November had regained about 243 tons or an equivalent of slightly over 2 inches of rain. Since 3.8 inches of rain fell during September and October, over half of this water was absorbed by the soil in a layer three feet deep.

The winter of 1933-34 was the coldest since 1922 with an average temperature of 18.9 degrees. The summer of 1934 was likewise unusually cool, being the coolest since 1929 with an average temperature of 60 degrees. Individual months varied considerably with the month of May being the warmest on record, while September was the coolest recorded at this station

The season between the frosts was only 120 days this year with the last frost in the spring occurring May 24 and the first killing frost on October 21. A light frost injured some corn on September 6 but a general killing frost did not occur until 15 day later. The average frost-free period for this station has been 126.8 days.

Local News Item Causes Arrest of a Deer Hunter

An apparent desire on the part of a deer hunter or one of his comrades to tell the home town folks that he brought down three deer resulted in misfortune for Edward Sorenson of Pelican Rapids two weeks ago. His arrest was brought about by a news item in the local paper, which was observed by game warden Emil Frank. Mr. Sorenson was brought before Justice of the Peace C. M. McCasland, where he entered a guilty plea and was fined $25.00 and costs, of which $10.00 was suspended. Sorenson was one of a party of eight hunters which brought down six deer—three by Sorenson.

CHANGE IS MADE IN FERA REGIONAL DISTRICTS

The federal system of supervising the activities of the various state emergenry relief administrations has been rearranged as regards 14 states, including Minneota, according to word from Washington.

Until now, Minnesota has been embraced in a midwest area made up of these additional states: Iowa North and South Dakota, Kansas Nebraska , and Missouri.

The new district will include only Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota.

SERA Starts Project of Manufacturing Fertilizer

Production of artificial fertilizer from limestone deposits in southeastern Minnesota has been devised as a means of livelihood for about 500 relief laborers, according to Dr. R. W. Murchie, director f rural rehabilitation, Minnesota SERA.

All the phases of the industry from the removal of the deposits to the grinding of the rock and its distribution, will give work to relief clients. The same wage scale will apply as is in force on other SERA work projects in the state.

Practically all the limestone crushers in 12 southeastern counties are to be put in operation immediately, Dr. Murchie said.

Farmers on relief may secure supplies of this manufactured soil food for their lands, in exchange for cash, kind or work on SERA projects. Others may purchase the product at regular rates at the quarries.

ILLEGAL PAPER REPORTS INDREASING RESISTANCE TO NAZI ORGANIZATION

Berlin (TIS)—The number of illegal anti-Nazi papers is constantly increasing. Numerous arrests have been made in Western Germany and other industrial districts in order to ascertain the responsible ones, and to put an end to these publications. All measures have however, been without effect. The papers appear regularly and are distributed in ever larger quantities.

The TIS correspondent is in possession of the latest issue of the "Siemens Lautsprecher", the illegal organ of the workers or the Siemen's enterprise. An article describes the situation in these gigantic factories and offers at the same time an interesting insight into the unrest of the workers. We find, for instance, that all efforts to introduce piece-work wages instead of regular hourly wages are meeting with the determined resistance of the workers. The workers, who are well aware that this would mean new wage reductions, threatened passive resistance, with the result that the management dropped the project. Other attempts to lower wages have met with a similar fate In one of the cable manufacturing plants, the opposition became so threatening, that the management was forced to drop all plans of wage reductions, and to restore a part of former wage cuts.

Georgia's Natural Wonders

The seven natural wonders of the state of Georgia, according to a state librarian, include Amicola Falls, in Dawson county, the highest natural waterfall in the state; Okefenokee swamp, near Waycross, Ga.; marble vein in Longswamp valley, in Pickens county; Warm Springs, in Merlwether county; Stone mountain, in DeKalb county; Tallalulah river gorge, in

MONDAY FEB. 4, WILL BE LIVESTOCK AND CROP DAY AT ANNUAL WINTER SHOWS

Monday, February 4, which will be the opening day of the Northwest School Farmers' Week and Red River Valley Winter Shows has been designated livestock and crops judging day. Teams from three states and Canada are expected to participate in each of the School of Agriculture contests Seperate contests have likewise been arranged for the agricultural high schools throughout the Northwest; and livestock judging contests are being arranged for farmers' clubs and 4-H clubs from Northwestern Minnesota counties. The livestock juding contest will be supervised by R. J. Christgau, while R. S Duham will have charge of the crops judging events.

Judges include P. A. Anderson sheep; W. H. Peters, beef cattle; H. G. Zavoral, swine; E. A. Hanson, dairy cattle; C. L. McNelly horses; R. F. Crim and Dr. H. K. Wilson, University Farm, St.Paul and A. W. Aamodt, Moorhead, crops judging contest.

Winter Show officials consider the judging contests to be among the more important educational events of the week. In addition to the livestock, farm crops, poultry and industrial exhibits, special short course meetings are being arranged during the day climaxed by huge mass meetings each evening throughout the week.

AUSTRIAN WORKERS SUFFER TREMENDOUS WAGE LOSES

Vienna (TIS)—The rapid decline of wages in the city of Vienna offers convincing proof of the ravages which Fascism has wrought upon the Austrian people Total wages in Vienna during the first half of 1934 amounted to 515,000,000 schillings against 556,000,000 during the first half of 1933, and 683,000,000 schillings during the first half of 1932.

The Arbeiter Zeitung, the illegal organ of the Austrian Socialist Party, which is smuggled in ever growing numbers into Austria from Bruenn, Czechoslovakia, comments:

> "In those two years during which Fascism consolidated itself in Austria, gradually eating away the strength of the working class by the abolition of parliament, the undermining of the right of association and of freedom of speech, until the final destruction in February 1934, the income of the Viennese workers, manual and nonmanual, has fallen by 24 per cent, or practically onefourth."

WINTER FEEDING OF OUR GAME BIRDS IS URGED

In order to preserve our game birds, winter feeding of these birds will be necessary, Charles McFarlane, deputy director of the division of game and fish declared in a statement issued last week. Mr. Mc Farlane's statement follows:

"There are many loyal birds in Minnesota that are willing to take a chance and spend the winter with us. These birds are only able to withstand our rigerous winters provided sufficient food is available to them so that they may retain their necessary high temperature

"Heavy snowfalls are expected this year and bird lovers must help the birds out with food. This activity may be carried on by all conservation clubs, Boy Scout troops and interested individuals.

"Certain fundamental rules are of importance in the erection of winter feeding shelters. These rules must be observed if success is to be obtained. Shelters must be protected from stormy winds, which are usually north and west in Minnesota. They must be sufficiently open so that the feeding birds may escape the attacks of their natural enemies. It should at no time act as a baiting trap for birds. It must be built so that heavy snowfalls will not break it down or hinder its accessability. It should be constructed so that frequent visits to the place with food supplies will not be necessary in case of a protracted spell of stormy weather or when storm conditions tie up traffic and roads are impassable.

In all of these feeding shelters it is advisable to place a layer of hay siftings, chaff or fine cut hay, both for the warmth and the scratching exercise it affords the birds. This carpet will also have a tendency to prevent drifting in snow from packing hard. Quite a choice of food is available which can be used successfully in these feeding shelters.

"A fine cut mixture of grain commonly called chick feed, any commercial scrap feed mixture of whole grains is acceptable, cracked corn, oats, wheat, cow peas, millet, buckwheat, sun flower seeds and screenings can be used to god advantage. In feeding quail and Hungarian partridges the fine cut grain in streams are preferable.

"Shelters should be placed in placed in spots known to be frequented by birds and a semblance of newness should be avoided as much as possible. Several snow shelters are preferable to one large one. This avoids the concentrated attack of vermin which naturally follows the congregation of a large number of birds. Birds need this assistance now, not only to prevent starvation, but to build up the individual birds to physical perfection and prepare for a successful breeding season."

Lack of Raw Material Is Critical to Germany

Hannover (TIS)—The fight against the rise of prices in Germany is in full swing, but without much success. Hundreds of small groceries and other food stores have been closed by the Nazi authorities for alleged violation of the price rules, but no steps whatever have been taken against large business and manufacturing enterprises. The enforced closing of bakeries and butcher stores has led to numerous public manifestations which the authorities were only able to appease by the promise that the employees would continue to receive their salaries.

In view of the growing lack of raw materials, the Central Association of Clothing and Underwear Manufacturers, has instructed its members not to accept any orders or to deliver already accepted orders, until early in 1935. Orders for caps and other summer articles must not be delivered before Mar 1935, irrespective of the urgent need of the retailer. It must be kept in mind, however, that even these instructions are worthless since the manufacturers are incapable of filling orders for lack of raw materials.

HOW IS A 'TECHNICAL' VIOLATION DIFFERENT FROM ANY OTHER?

"There is no intimation in the criticism of the examiners that the printing and publication charges of the Times were excessive during Mr. Mattson's service on the board," an editorial in the Times stated last week. "—In none of the criticism along this line is it inferred that the school district has not received full value for what money has been spent. The violations have been entirely technical." The Times continues.

May we respectfully point out that it is quite beyond the province of the examiners to state what constitutes an "excessive charge" except in the case of official publications where the rate is limited by law, not to exceed 50 cents per folio? We must confess that we are at a loss to understand just what the Times means when it refers to "technical violations". We have heard of intentional violations, when the law is broken with full knowledge of its portent and penalty. And there are unintentional violations, committed thru ignorance of the law. Surely, Mr. Mattson will not plead ignorance of the law. Even if he should, we know that "ignorance of the law excuses no-one." Furthermore, the fact that the school board has been run very much like "a closed corporation," for the exclusive benefit of certain members of the board, has been criticized openly for many years, and the violation of the law pointed out. Even if Mr. Mattson's knowledge of affairs was so limited that he would not otherwise have known it, the storm that has been kicked up around every school election should have warned him.

It is quite apparent that Mr. Mattson accepted the position on the board with full knowledge of his intention of doing business with the school district, and therefore with full intent of violating the law. Knowing that he intended to continue to do business with the school district in his capacity of printer and publisher, it was Mr. Mattson's duty to refuse to accept election or to qualify for a position on the board. The schools would not have suffered, for the district contains some around five thousand inhabitants, several hundred, at least, of whom are fully as capable of filling the office of trustee as Mr. Mattson is.

This same criticism applies with equal force to other members of the board who have violated the same law, altho their racket has been smaller, in dollars and cents.

The Times has always prided itself upon being "the great family journal", and a guardian of the public weal and morals, and we are certainly surprised; first to find that they have violated the law; and second, that they would try to squeeze out of responsibility by making such a silly plea as "technical violations."

O, TRAGEDIANTE! A FARMER-LABOR PAPER ENDORSES THE TOWNSEND PENSION PLAN

"And you told me this is a Farmer-Labor paper." Our friend threw an exchange in our face and stormed out of the office. When we had recovered from our discomfiture, we picked up the exchange and found it to be a copy of the Pope County Tribune, and on the front page, a two column editorial proclaiming to the world that the Tribune is sold on it as the one and only panecea for our economic ills and a Fountain of Youth from which Prosperity shall arise like the Goddess of the Morning and quaff life and youth everlasting—and is our face red?

And so we must revise the opinion we have had for some time; that Farmer-Labor editors are all well enough founded in economics to recognize a chimera, and solid enough in their principles to fight a sales tax, no matter how sugar coated it may be.

We wonder if our friend Editor Barsness knows that the Townsend Plan was conceived and brought out as an anti-thesis to Upton Sinclair's EPIC and thru the fact that it was accepted by Governor Merriam, became the instrument which misled enough voters to defeat Sinclair in the November election. We wonder if when he speaks of it being able to bring back prosperity such as we saw during the war, he realizes that he is in the same breath voicing the most powerful argument against it. The prosperity of the war was prosperity of big business. The farmers and laborers went deeper into poverty and the nation was saddled with forty billion dollars in debts during the war. If you think that creating five thousand millionaires on the misery of one hundred and twenty million people, is prosperity, Mr. Barsness, then the Townsend Plan will bring prosperity.

Your two columns of much reitterated cant about the development of labor saving machinery, over-production, under-consumption and want in the midst of plenty, does not prove the feasibility of the Townsend Plan, Friend Barsness, if anything it merely emphasizes the demoralizing effect of an economic system based on the profit motive. Under a cooperative commonwealth, where everything is produced for use, and not for profit, it is conceivable that the wheels of industry could be kept running at top speed and all the surplus (above a bare living for the workers) could be heaped into the lap of the aged, and ultimately find its way back into the hands of all the people with a reasonable degree of equity. But under an economic system such as we are afflicted with, the plan would work about as follows:

The government collects from the people as a whole (who are already overloaded with taxes as delinquency records testify) a sales tax amounting to about twenty billion dollars a year,(we use your own figures) and passes it out to the aged. The aged in turn spend it thru the regular avenues of trade, thus passing it to the owners of industry. The owners of industry passes it back to the people thru wages and purchases of raw commodities, but retains its profit amounting to from ten to twenty or more percent.. Thus the people get back to pay to the government again in the form of taxes to pay the second year's pension to the aged, not twenty billion dollars, but twenty billion less the profit to industial barons; or about sixteen billion dollars, or less.

Four billion dollars out of the poverty of the people to make more millionaires—more paupers.

You may argue that the owners of industry will turn their profits back into the channels of trade in the form of expansion. Quite true, but only at a profit.

In the second year, assuming that your farce-tragedy would last that long, the people would be called upon to pay, twenty billion dollars in taxes, and interest on the four billion or more we borrowed in the form of "expansion" with only again sixteen billions to pay it with. Each year the paper profits would mount until the bubble burst again, just as it did in 1929.

Added to the fact that the plan is illogical and fantastic, bordering on idiocy, any attempt to usher it in will result in an era of wholesale graft and falsification of records as the mad scramble to become "sixty years old" begins. Let us also call your attention to the fact that according to your own words TWO bills will be introduced in congress; one the pension bill, and the other the sales tax bill. Now, write this on your cuff: if such an unhappy event should come to pass, that the bills are introduced and become law; the pension will be emasculated until it will be as ineffective as the Minnesota Old Age Pension law; a dead letter. But the sales tax will effectively saddle the common people with the entire cost of government.

WHY FARMERS GO CRAZY
New Ulm Review

We often feel sorry for the farmer in days like these. With trained agricultural economists directing everything but the opening and closing of his barn door, we imagine most producers yearn for that forgotten day when a man could thresh his bushel of wheat, sell it to the elevator and wash his hands of the entire crop.

Life is not so simple for him today. For example, there is the recent ruling with regard to the processing taxes on hogs, a mighty and all-inclusive regulation that almost induces the farmer to hire an expert accountant for his complicated record keeping.

This ruling transfers to commercial handlers all liability for paying the processing tax on hog products derived from swine slaughtered by producers and feeders. But it does not apply to the farmer who kills hogs and sells them direct to the consumer. And that is where the entanglement starts.

If Farmer Jones does not slaughter and sell more than 300 pounds of pork in one year, he can forget about paying the tax. But let him sell 301 pounds, and he becomes what one might call a "professional," and must share his earnings with the government. If his sales during the year exceeds 1,000 pounds, then he loses all exemptions and must pay a tax on all of it.

Mind you, however, these hogs must be home grown. Any producer who purchases a one-week-old pig, raises it and butchers it some months later, is fully liable for the tax and receives no exemptions. The one bright spot is that he may kill pork for his own family without paying anything.

Perhaps this ramification to peace of mind is entirely justified. However, will not the cost of enforcement more than offset its benefits, if there are any?

RUSSIA MURDERS 66
St. Paul Daily News

A few days ago Stalin's right-hand man was assassinated in Russia.

The actual assassin was caught, according to official reports.

Now a terse official statement reveals that 66 persons have been executed for their alleged part in the political murder. They were charged with organizing acts of terrorism against the government officials.

There are unconfirmed reports to a British newspaper from its Moscow correspondent that in all some 200 persons, including the assassin's wife, sons, daughters and mother, are victims of the "blood purge."

The trials, if any, were in secret and held quite quickly. If the accused had any chance to defend themselves, it is not more than indicated. Names of those given out as having been executed do not reveal persons of any prominence in Russian or international affairs.

There is no doubt that the government has acted swiftly and effectively to discourage counter revolt. Yet it is to be noted that despite its iron-clad control, an assassination was successfully carried out in accordance, by its own admission, of an organized terrorism. The same sort of quick action to quell criticism and revolt would be taken by Italy and Germany.

An American may well ponder on this kind of dictatorship and autocracy. There are lots of things wrong with our country, but, thank God, we havn't as yet been reduced to wholesale political murder.

It is a short step, however, to dictatorship and there are plenty of nit-wits at large today who talk glibly of one brand or another. If they are ever successful in bringing them about, we hereby nominate them for the first victims of whatever official terror comes into existence.

A DICTATORSHIP
Austin American

There is more truth than poetry to the recent declarations of General Smedley D. Butler that Wall Street contemplates a dictatorship in this country.

Before a congressional sub-committee the former marine commander related how he had been approached by a bond salesman acting for a prominent brokerage firm. The salesman denied the accusations and charged Butler with seeking publicity, but others have backed up the story.

It has since been revealed that early in 1933 the Hoover administration, fearing an "insurection," was making plans to crush it. Military units were converging on Washington. Had this plan carried through it would have made the bonus massacre look like a Sunday school party.

Why does Wall Street want a dictatorship? So it can force by military pressure, state capitalism. The rabid press talks of liberty. Under a dictatorship that word is removed from the dictionary. Economic slavery of today would be fastened on the workers with iron-clad laws and enforced at the point of guns.

Wall Street knows the capitalist system is tottering and it would seek, as a last means of preservation, the dictatorship, under which small crumbs would be thrown to the workers while the monied class would take even more of the world's goods.

America does not want a dictatorship and if it threatens, there is just one thing to do. That is to meet fire with fire.

Footnote on the American Political Scene

There are at least six Communist parties in the U.S.A. twenty "radical" parties; sixteen right-wing socialist-minded groups; and a host of "reform" movements;—all for which have a political set-up and have put forth candidates for public office at one time or another, on their own platforms. The reason for these multifarious eddies and whirls on the gigantic river of politics is identical with the reason for numerous sects in religion—the "holy word" can be interpreted in various ways.

I call myself a Marxian student yet I am not connected with any political party whatsoever. My field is not politics. I am more interested in tracing out the effects of an economic set-up on a people; and it seems to me that all the sweating over deviations, all the ruptures, divisions, and reformations of radical movements come to naught when we realize that the great mass of workers and farmers, at whom these parties and attempts at parties are aimed at, remain passive. I do not say that theorizing is useless: I say that a great deal of it is uncalled for, when the object of the theorizing doesn't know what it is all about, and doesn't give a damn.

I say with the old wise-cracker that one should save one's breath to cool one's soup and to "strike when the iron is hot." Despite the bromidity of these axioms, it remains true that there is a season for everything, and that most of our radical activities are confined to a lot of unnecessary talking and writing about what should be done when the occasion arises. This is all we can do, it seems; and if I should expand my idea further, I would create a new radical "sect". All the differences between various parties concern tactics—methods of approach. The goal is the same—they all want to get to "heaven on earth". If I should say that this never will be, would I be killing a pretty utopian dream?

The Bankruptcy of Capitalistic Movies

As a patron of the movies, it cannot escape me that the producers are hard put to it to turn out pictures that entertain and yet do not remind us too vividly of the depression and the everyday struggles of mankind. If such a picture does go through, the hero gains love, or money, or high position,—he is rewarded somehow for his fight with the "big bad wolf."

When the movie czars are not stuffing us with glamous historical romances, they serve up gangster pictures, college pictures, or pictures based on shows—the imitation of an imitation of life!

There are a couple of film companies that are trying to teach the American public to like realistic pictures—pictures of depression times, of the working stiff, of the farmers, and all implications thereto. Of course, this is "propaganda" —anything pertaining to real life under capitalism is that— therefore verboten.

Liberal movie houses in the larger cities are now showing pictures like "Potemkin"—the Russian five-year plan, and "Thunder Over Mexico," Sergei Eisenstein's interpretation of peonage (produced by Upton Sinclair). If you ever get a chance to see these, do not hesitate.

In Russia the movie situation is different—But why talk about that?

How's Your Vogabbleuary?

There's a crying need for a dictionary of new words which depict what the old words they imitate really have come to mean, I'll illustrate:

Demockrazy—a mockery of freedom, crazy government.
Polite-tricks— method of selecting men for public office.
Uncommonwealth—capitalism, that is, the opposite of commonwealth.
Illiterature—daily newspapers,—literature for illterates.

And so on and so forth. Maybe I could think of a dozen; maybe more. If you don't mind, I'm going to present a few words each week to add to your vogabbleuary; if you do mind, just skip it.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

AN INDICTMENT OF JOHN BARLEYCORN

"We know now that John Barleycorn on parole has picked the nation's pocket to the extent of $2,000,000,000 in the last fis year, while Uncle Sam collected in liquor taxes only $258,911,332 which was about one-fourth of the amount spent for Federal relief by the FERA," says the Christian Advocate (New York) editorially "In other words, while the people of this country have wasted two billions of dollars for a non-essential, anti-social commodity, the tax payers have been obliged to contribute another billion to care for the unemployed, many made unemployable through liquor."

The editor continues with his indictment by summarizing figures which should be thoroughly committed to memory and kept ready for use because money values comprise the only sort of argument which will appeal to some people "Take beer alone," says the editorial, "thirty-two million barrels paid $169,000,000 tax. But beer drinkers paid out $1,066,000,000 leaving $87,000,000 for the brewers and dealers. That is, for every dollar that reached the federal treasury, the beer drinkers paid out $6.31—a monstrous waste for a minimum of gain. On distilled liquors the showing was even worse The thirsty consumers paid $688 000,000 for his beverage, of which only $86,000,000 went to Washington, leaving the tidy sum of $602,000,000 sticking to the palms of distillers and liquor dealers. Uncle Sam got one dollar out of every eight that came out of the forgotten man's purse. It is the trade, not the government, that has prospered."

"We need the money," was the prevailing motive which put over repeal. But it is already proving an unwise financial investment. "We need the money" is now being urged as adequate reason why Uncle Sam and his forty-eight nephews should authorize lotteries When all factors are taken into careful consideration, will it not be seen that this too is an unsafe prodcedure? Moreover, an old book which asserts that "the love of money is a root of all evil," also declares that "righteousness exalteth a nation." Even from the financial standpoint, liquor and lotteries give only a false promise of prosperity.

THE READER'S ROSTRUM

The Thief River Falls Forum;
Thief River Falls, Minn.
Dear Editor;

After reading your write-up in the Forum of Nov. 22, in regards to my statements made at the Anti-War and Fascist meeting in Thier River, held on Wednesday 21st, must say that the writing is very misleading as to my statements or position, on the question of suppressing your paper which I dealt with. To correct the article and to present our position properly, will say the following, for which we ask for the space in your columns for its publication.

Am a member of the Communist Party. I firmly believe in the principals and program of that party. As to whether your paper is against the capitalist class, we Communists do not think so. On the contrary, we believe that it is a capitalist class newspaper.

But as a paper, disregarding its contents, your paper or any other paper, if suppressed, or an attempt is made to take away its publishing rights, because of its contents, we will be willing to join in a United Front with the Farmer-Labor Party, and with other workers, in a struggle for the paper's rights.

As stated in the meeting, if one paper is suppressed, we are absolutely sure, that the next one will be our official organ, the Daily Worker, for which we would call upon all workers and farmers regardless of their political affiliations, to support the struggle for its publishing rights.

Robert Salo
Bemidji, Minn

Editor's note: We want to assure Mr. Salo that we appreciate his kind offer of assistance in case the Forum should be suppressed or an attempt made to suppress it However, inasmuch as you believe it to be a capitalistic paper and consequently should be in no danger of suppression, your offer of assistance becomes rather an idle gesture. Does it not?

Editor: the Forum,
Dear Sir:

Much hilarity is being expressed in conservative quarters since Governor Olson and his co-operative commonwealth platform was not given a supporting legislature. May I suggest to such folks that they have their fun now. It won't last forever.

As a result of such contrast in voting there will be no change in the social order. Capitalism will remain indefinitely. And that means continued exploitation thru private profit.

Continued exploitation means continued dissatisfaction on the part of the exploited—farmers and workers. You can't fool them forever. As history shows us their resentment will some day result in some form of action. I shall not attempt at this time to predict what form that will be.

Respectfully yours,

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

So constant are changes that new situations inevitably call for adjustments in methods and policies.

Living with century old ideas and methods in the midst of drastic scientific, political, economic and religious changes, result not only in mistrust, unbelief, chaos and confusion, but reveals the stubbornness, incompetency and unwillingness of controlling forces to make the necessary sacrifice for the greater good.

Right now, we are faced with new problems that challenge solution. They are, modern advertising, the added individual use of alcohol and nicotine. The insistence of armament preparedness, added leisure, church chisms, liquor and gasoline, and social cooperation versus indiual greed. To try and face these pressing problems with the methods and policies used in preceding ages for their particular problems, which were so decidedly different to those of today, is but to head us into a nasty muddling mess.

Essential fundamentals to aid us in our modernism are the Ten Commandments, the Sermon on the Mount and the Golden Rule.

LIBERAL DIGEST

MAYOR HOAN DESCRIBES THE FIGHT FOR FEDERAL RELIEF

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, as the newly elected president of the American Conference of Mayors, explained the accomplishments of that group, measured by millions of dollars worth of federal appropriations, during the Socialist quarter-hour, Sunday over radio station WTMJ.

The mayor dramatically described the fight for federal aid to the unemployed which resulted in the present public works administration set-up and other measures since adopted by the federal government in the following words:

"We were being told by President Hoover that relief was a local problem and none of the national government's business.

"Out of this appalling situation over 100 of the chief executive officers of America's largest cities assembled in Detroit in June, 1932. At that conference I was asked to open the discussion on this problem of caring for the unemployed.

"Following this discussion I was placed on the resolutions committee. As a member of that body I made the motion which was unanimously adopted by the committee and, with one dissenting vote, by the conference, that we advocate the immediate launching by the federal government of a five billion dollar public works program.

"I also made a second motion in the resolutions committee, that the federal government immediately appropriate sufficient funds to insure adequate relief during the depression. Both proposals were taken from the Socialist national platform. Both motions carried unanimously in the committee and with only one or two dissenting votes at the conference.

Take Fight to Washington

"It is worth noting that this is the first group of elected officials in United States who up to this time had proposed that the federal government launch a huge public works program as well as supplying its share of relief. The conference thereupon appointed a committee of seven mayors, of which I had the pleasure of being a member, to visit the leaders of the lower house of congess, of the senate of the United States, and the president, and lay before them the serious situation which existed in the large communities of this country, to call their attention to the danger of threatened food riots and perhaps more serious consequences unless immediate action was taken.

"On the very morning we arrived in Washington we were afforded a hearing in the lower house of congress by speaker Rainey to which he invited the leaders of both the Democratic and Republican parties. The same courtesy was extended in the senate. As a result our resolutions were introduced into both branches of congress the same day.

Hoover Opposes Program

"The next morning we were granted the opportunity of meeting President Hoover face to face for the purpose of challenging his position that the care of the unemployed was the sole job of local government. The meeting in that office was dramatic.

"The story can now be told. The spokesman of our committee minced no words. The president at the outset appeared as fixed as the Rock of Gibralter in his position that he would approve no change in his position on relief. His face was stern, worn and pale. He told the assembled mayors that they should be as much interested as he is in maintaining the credit of the nation; that if all these bonds were issued the credit would be impaired; that then the nation would be forced off the gold standard; that this would result in the greatest catastrophe this nation has yet known.

Force Federal Relief

"Our spokesmen were unawed and undaunted. They told the president that it was certain that we were faced in all large cities with hunger, starvation and even riot: that unless congress appropriated funds to feed the hungry they would spend far more in employing federal troops to keep the peace. After our committe withdrew, one spokesman remained This was the then Mayor Curley of Boston, now governor-elect of Massachusetts. He asked President Hoover whether there was anything worse, than abandoning the gold standard. The reply was 'no'.

"'Have you ever thought,' continued the mayor, 'of revolution? I have traveled all over this nation and the word "revolution" is now uttered by scores of business men.'

"The president grew ghastly pale. He turned and walked away Mayor Curley withdrew. Congress appropriated its first 300 million dollars for relief. President Hoover signed the bill. The problem of relief had at last become a national undertaking."

Amber Holds Magnetism

Authentic amber can be easily detected—its magnetic property appears after friction. The Greeks knew it as "electron," from which we derive our word "electricity."

They'll Soon be Men
by Lawrence Hawthorne

There's nothing "cute" about them any more;
They've lost the cunning ways of baby days;
The dimples and the curls they onetime wore
No longer win for them such glowing praise—
Our boys are getting big and growing strong;
And, where they once were chubby, they are long!

Those gentle baby voices that we heard
Have taken on a deeper, harsher tone;
And, oftentimes, they use a phrase or word
That, in their tender years, was never known;
Where once we only taught them proper speech,
We find it necessary now to preach!

They freely contemplate a broader view;
Their longings and ambitions are proclaimed;
They often show determination, too,
In reaching an objective they have named;
No longer do they readily depend
Upon the aid or guidance we can lend.

The little ones that were our pride and joy
No longer do the tricks of baby days;
Each baby has become a husky boy,
And has adopted boyhood's normal ways . .
I'd like to have our babies back again,
But I'll be mighty proud when they are men!

WHAT PRICE PROFITS?

By

KAY JACKSON

Reprinted by permission from 'Action', Vol. 1, No. 1

The Profit System is at the bottom of most of our troubles today just as it has been for, lo, these many years. Upton Sinclair in "The Jungle" showed greed for profits to be the real reason for the horrible conditions uncovered in the meat-packing industry. Short-sighted captains of the industry then saw in any financial outlay to better those conditions only a lessening of their profits. Now some of them know that increased production due to better working conditions and higher wages more than offsets the increased cost, so that their profits, too, are larger.

Lincoln Steffens, "The Shame of the Cities" revealed the unbelievable graft everywhere prevalent. Again the the desire for profits—for more profits, was shown to be the sole cause of those revolting conditions. Charles Edward Russell in his, "Stories of the Great Railroads" again uncovered shocking conditions. Again greed for profits was the reason for the then wholesale disregard for human life evidenced by lack of safety devices, deterorating tracks and trains increasing accidents. Ida M. Tarbell in her "History of Standard Oil" showed its single purpose in its entire sordid lifetime was to pile up its profits rather than to distribute kerosene to the lamps of the nation. All of this was some thirty years ago.

Long before Prohibition was seriously considered it was freely admitted that the tremendous profits in the liquor business provided the chief difficulty to its effectual control. During Prohibition it was the profits in bootlegging which made enforcement a farce. Everyone admits it was the possibility of quick and large profits that led in 1929 directly to such an over-playing of the hand that the game blew up through the roof, and now five years afterwards the fragments are still falling. Likewise it was the possibility of quick and large profits that made kidnaping a major industry, that raised bank holdups and banditry to the level of a profession, and today everyone is being shown what many have long suspected, the part that profits played in prolonging wars. The facts about the sordid, illicit, trafficing in arms and munitions, the complete disregard for humanity where big profits were the goal, and all but incomprehensible profits actually gleaned from the slaughter business, are just beginning to come out. So long as the Profit System lives the entire story will never become public property. The lesson is too plain. The people would simply have no more of it if they knew. Already the government has so reduced the profits in the legal liquor business that bootlegging has come back with a bounce. With the profits removed from the armaments business, bootlegging of battle supplies would follow just as dawn follows the night. In short the profit System itself must be entirely done away with, not merely driven under cover. It seems to be the motive only for ignoble acts and pursuits. History teaches it has never been needed as a motive for worth-while deeds. The Edisons, the Wrights, Stenmetz, Marconi, Curie, these and hosts of others labored not for profits. Pride of achievement, joy of discovery, pleasure of creating these have been the prime movers all down the ages. And with these motives given half a chance they will suffice today for all the advancement in every laudable direction that this aation can stand u under. But if we are ever to ascend to a high, sane, and orderly plane as a people, as an entire nation the Profit Sustem must be definitely and persmanently squelched.

All of which brings us to a consideration of what can be done about it.

Profits the Mainspring

Coming down to the immediate present, it is the Profit System that is alone blocking our path to so-called "recovery". Production will never begin unless and until profits from it are assured, just as production ceased only because profits from it ceased. It makes no difference how great the need is If people haven't money to pay for cost of production and profits there is no production. Today people haven't the money, so the government is giving it to them—to twenty-odd million of them. But that is not the worst of it, bad as that is from the taxpayers' point of view. The final and over-powering fact is the dreadful doom to which we have been condemned by the great and near great who tell us it must always be this way.

The great Sir Josiah Stamp, Director of the Bank of England, expert second only to Montagu Norman as to reputation, Chairman, Colonel, General Treasurer, Lecturer, and Briton extraordinary was speaking his mind about our New Deal to reporters not long ago. Said he, "You cannot make profits under a new order unless first of all you are making them under some kind or order. First of profits". * * * "You cannot revive industry while you are sitting on the mainspring. After all, the mainspring of all individualistic enterprise of any kind is the making of profits. Unless you are getting people to 'make money' you will never get re-employment." Our own Secretary of Commerce Mr. Daniel C. Roper has gone out of his way to assure businessmen that the New Deal will not interfere with the merry game of making profits,—with the Profit System. Thus we are doomed. "Never' is a long long time. "Let private businessmen make profits", urges Sir Josiah. "Go ahead and operate under the benign influence of the Profit System", echoes Secretary Roper. What's holding you, Mr. Businessman? Why don't you get going? But possibly something about this "crisis" is causing the delay. Let us see.

First off, we are using the wrong word more than half the time The dictionary defines crisis as "a turning point"—"a critical turn the course of a disease." We are suffering from a disease, all right a bad one, but to reach the crisis and then hang there for five years is to outrage all the laws of medical science. Fortunately a second definition is given, "time of danger or difficulty; as, a crisis in history." And this seems to fit our We will leap lightly over the danger because though millions believe we are in danger, no two individuals exactly agree as to just what that danger is. We will discuss only the difficulty. Just what is the difficulty? For ninety-five of every hundred of us it is trying to get along without money Nobody has sufficient money. Do not take our word for this, ask your next-door neighbor. Ask all your neighbors. And if you want figures look at the record. Of a hundred and thirty million individuals living today under the brave old flag fewer than four million pay an income tax. Four out of a hundred and thirty. The remaining hundred and twenty-six do not now, never have, and never wil pay one. An income tax is as remote from all of these people as are the rings of Saturn. And this despite the very modest income figures that are subject to the tax. Four out of a hundred and thirty!

After viewing Glazier Park en route home from his Hawaiian trip, President Roosevelt urged the entire nation, all 'with the means', to come there and enjoy that matchless scenery. Again, for ninety-five of every hundred of us who have not already made the trip, Glacier Park is as inaccessible as the nethermost base of the South Pole. A large portion of the ninety-five haven't 'the means' to travel out of their native Township, and a still bigger group, if they succeeded in getting to Glacier Park, would have to remain right there, for, as the President added, "Camp-sites are free."

The single difficulty, then, that is afflicting everybody in this 'crisis in history,' is simply trying to do without money. The difficulty is still with us for five years, and as we have seen, some do say that it is always going to remain - that it is truly insurmountable.

The Present Use For Money

Now why is all this? There is no famine of money. There is not even a shortage of money. Every day the financial pages tell of increasing bank balances and surpluses, and complain that there is no place to invest them save Government Bonds which are not sufficiently 'attractive'. Yet the demand for money is as constant, as steady and as universal, as the demand for air. Spending money is just as natural as breathing. And if the same rules obtained in both cases it is not hard to picture ninety-five of every hundred of us with our nostrils pressed to the leaking seams of the storage tanks, clawing and fighting among ourselves for a whiff of the life-giving ozone. This while the remaining five owners of the tanks, lazily lounged about, just waiting for 'something to break,' or impatiently cursed the 'depression' and its lack of opportunity to release some of the stored-up air into channels of trade and industry at 'adequate profits.'

President J. W. Nichols of the First National Bank of Englewood Ill. offers mechanical pencils to all his savings depositors whose balances are $100 or less if they'll come and take their money away. In his plaintive communication sent to all such depositors he writes: "Money has become a burden. Like commodities it has a value so long as it can be put to some good use." Just any use is a "good" use if it will only yield the profits.

President Roosevelt was elected to bring "the more abundant life for all," also, and here is the rub to do it with the slightest interference possible in the merry game of making profits. Reading the reports from both sectors of how this is being done will give this impression. Left, right, left, right left, right, and to complete the marching picture, the President himself exclaims, "We are on our way." But since his two objectives are at opposite poles, it is superfluous to point out that he has reached neither goal. But he has taken a lot of steps in both directions!

Numerous Varieties of Bothersome Cockroaches

While there are many varieties of cockroaches belonging to the same family, among which are the German and Australian, the American is the most common and widely distributed species in the corn belt, according to an authority in the Missouri Farmer.

About eleven months' time is required for a cockroach to hatch and grow to maturity. The female lays a number of eggs which she deposits in a brown capsule. This capsule she retains in her body until the young are about ready to hatch, whereupon she deposits it along the run-ways of the insect. When the young hatch they live for a time with the old pair. At night they sneak into kitchen and pantry and track around over the food. They excrete a material over food and in their run-ways that has a foreign, and very offensive, odor. That they are exceedingly filthy and dangerous to human health is obvious when it is known that they eat and track over anything from a dead mouse, a bed bug, an empty egg capsule, to all kinds of human foods.

Knew Their Winds

The ancient Greek navigators knew enough about the seasons and directions of certain winds, such as etesians and the Indian monsoons, to utilize them in making voyages that would have been difficult or impossible without such knowledge, states a writer in the New York Tribune. After the Fifteenth century the trade winds of the Atlantic and the Pacific were similarly turned to account. At the close of the Seventeenth century the earliest attempt to chart ocean winds was made by Halley, the English astronomer, whose crude map of the trade winds and monsoons implies that he had a certain amount of statistical information at his disposal.

Water as Food

Commonly speaking, foods are those substances eaten or drunk for the building up and maintenance of the human body and to supply those constituents of the foods consumed which are actually assimilated are considered foods, the remainder being waste. Water may be regarded as the most important of foods, constituting nearly 70 per cent of the human body. It is an absolute necessity for the maintenance of life. The average weight of water consumed per day, only part of which is assimilated, exceeds the dry weight of all the other foods combined.

Roger Bacon's Prophecy

Approximately 700 years ago Roger Bacon said: "Machines for navigating are possible without rowers, so that great ships suited to river or ocean, guided by one man, can be borne with greater speed than if they were full of men. Likewise cars may be made. . . . so that without a draft animal they may be moved with inestimable speed . . . and flying machines are possible so that a man may sit in the middle turning some device by which artificial wings may beat the air in the manner of a flying bird."

Golfers Wear Red Coats

There are golf courses in England that compel the golfers to wear red coats. This custom originated when golf first started in England, where, because of the requirement of great open spaces, the common lands, where villagers had grazing rights for cattle, were used. Because of the danger to peasant and live stock from this strange round, white missile, all golfers were required to wear red coats. In this land of tradition, there is one club, only 12 miles from London, where this practice still holds.

The White Squall

When a squall, or sudden fierce rush of wind, comes unaccompanied by any loss of light, it is known as a white squall, which is usually heralded by dark clouds and heavy rain. The white squall is the more dangerous of the two, as there is no warning of its coming, save the white foam it raises on the surface of the sea and a thin haze.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

CAPITOL NEWS REVIEW

By
A. I. Harris

December in even numbered years is always the busiest month of the biennium for state officials. This month they are burning electricity preparing their reports and recommendations for the 1935 Legislature.

* * * *

The Department of Rural Credit has liquidated $1,000,000 of bonds held by the state investment board Increased collections of back rent and interest in the Red River Valley region is responsible, according to Ted Arens, Conservator.

* * * *

The political chopping block is being dragged from the closet and being dusted off in anticipation of the heads that are due to fall, according to all reports in the Capitol. Stories have been carried naming those who are slated to look for new jobs, but most of these were denied by the Governor's office. It was learned from authoritative sources, however, that many socalled "big shots" are due to go.

Plans are under way for the city of Alexandria to over the power plant owned by the village of Nelson anl operate it for the benefit of Alexandria patrons, but there will have to be a vote of approval from the city of Alexandria before the plans can be completed, the opinion signed by David J. Erickson, as assistant attorney general read.

Past experience has taught legislatures that it requires about 10 per cent of tax revenue collected for administration of the collection office. It was generally conceded around the legislative halls at the extra-session that if the agency collecting liquor taxes did so at the 10 per cent figure, a good job would have been accomplished. Up to date the office of the state liquor control commissioner has expended only seven per cent of receipts for collection. And not only has this office collected liquor and malt taxes but it has enforced the liquor control law as well.

After many delays caused by resorting to technical means for delaying trial, the case against Northwest Bancorporation officials for alleged fraud in the selling of that chain bank stock will be oper in Moorhead before district Judge Roeser on Friday, December 7. J Cameron Thomson, president of the Banco, will be the first defendant Separate trials have been asked by each of those charged.

The relief funds alloted to Minnesota for the winter will be almost a million larger each month than last year. This increase was arranged by Gov. Olson on his recent business sojourn in Washington. Drought ravages in some 20 counties required this boost. The federal relief appropriation for all purposes for December in this state will total approximately $4,100,000

Carl Erickson, state purchasing agent, has been subjected to much good natured raillery by his state house friends because of an item carried by the press associaton wires which said that he might desert his office for a job in the talking pictures.

Acceleration of the Minnesota farm debt adjustment committee's program has been accompanied by an agreement reached between this group and the SERA rural rehabilitation division. Under the terms of this agreement facilities of the SERA have been made available to the debt adjustment committee to expedite its work. This means that relief clients selected for rural rehabilitation by the SERA will now have their credit problems taken up by the debt adjustment unit. Debt adjustment, according to relief officials, protects the rehabilitation client against loss of capitol goods through legal attachments issued to satisfy creditors.

Because of dire economic conditions, Minnesota farmers will require $2,000,000 for relief in December, John Bush, head of the Farmers' Holiday association informed Governor Olson last week Approximately 40,000 farmers will require help in December, mostly from western, southwestern Minnesota, this being principally due to drouth conditions. In January this number will increase to 60,000, Mr. Bush said. Most of the relief will be needed for feeding livestock. Governor Olson stated that the federal government promised him during his recent visit at Washington that it will co-operate fully, and as a result a repsesentative of relief needs among Minnesota farmers.

The proposed Lac qui Parle flood control and water conservation project has moved out of the dream stage and is fast becoming a reality. SERA officals have virtually assured completion of the onehalf million dollar undertaking by their decision to take up options on land involved. When the project is completed, the higher lake level will necessitate construction of a bridge across the narrows of the lake, near Milan. Work on the approaches to the bridge will be started immediately. The Lac qui Parle project is one of the most extensive in the SERA's general conservation program. It involves construction of two dykes to raise the water level in the lake, and will require the re-routing of railroad tracks near Watson. In addition, the highway across the narrows of the lake wll be straightened and rerouted. Relief labor will be used to carry out the project. It will be completed in about a year.

More that 150,000 pleasure cars and trucks have been checked for lights and brakes since June 1, chief John P. Arnaldy of the state highway patrol has anonunced; and of these, 16 per cent have been found with defective brakes and 10 percent with defective lights. Where police departments and sheriffs have actively co-operated, accidents have been cut approximately 50 per cent, and the cooperation has extended to practically every part of the state.

The presence of two state forests within the proposed Quetico-Superior Council's international forest project would not hinder but aid the plan, E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conseration said in a statement last week. Commissioner Willard's statement takes issue with one recently made by Mr. Sewal Tyng member of the Quetico-Superior Committee. Mr. Tyng said that the presence of the state forests within Quetico-Superior arch hampered the plan for the international forest. Mr. Willard contends that the two state forests within the area would "stimulate cooperation between both state and federal agencies to accomplish the aims and objects of the council."

CORN FODDER AND STAW BEING BOUGHT BY SERA FOR RELIEF PURPOSES

The emergency demand for livestock feed in Minnesota's drouth counties will be lessened through the purchase from farmers in the southern counties of corn fodder and straw for $200,000 by the Minnesota SERA, according to an announcement by E. F. Mattson, director of the livestock relief division.

Mark Graham, formerly field supervisor of the division, has been placed in charge of the buying project. It is estimated that the fund now set aside for the purpose will provide about 15,000 tons of feed.

Farmers in the southern part of the state have been urged during recent months to save their fodder and straw, Mr. Mattson explained SERA will purchase this material, which in normal times is destroyed, and bale it for shipment into the drouth counties for use as cattle feed. It will add to the stock of 27,000 tons of hay and straw which SERA has already contracted for in the Red River Valley.

Charivari, Mock Serenade, Once Used for Newlyweds

Charivari is pronounced Sha-re-va-re, a as in father, e as in end, accent on third syllable, or colloquially as if it were spelled chiv-e-re. It is a mock serenade of a newly married couple. It originated in the Middle ages in France where it was customary to raise the charivari only against persons just married for the second time, says a writer in the Indianapolis News.

Neighbors would gather round the home of the couple, and make a tumultuous noise by shouting, whistling, hissing, groaning, ringing bells, beating tin pans, etc. The crowd, generally in masks and special costumes, would not stop the charivari until the newly married couple bought their peace with a ransom, which usually consisted of food and drink, or supply of money to buy it. The charivari of the rural districts of the United States is similar, except it is raised against any newly married couple. In Germany it is called "katzenmusik." which means "cat's concert."

Desert Yields Precious Stones

Precious stones weighing as much as five pounds have been found in the Libyan desert. They are of a beautiful greenish-yellow color and extremely hard. It is believed that they were formed out of desert sand by the terrific heat of a great aerolite or meteor, which fell long ago in this district. Similar stones have been found around a meteoric crater at Wabar, Arabia. These are supposed to be remains of a broken planet. The crater is similar to the 19 discovered in 1931 in the Central Australian desert, blasted out by giant meteorites. Some of these craters are more than 200 yards in diameter. Scattered around are fragments of the meteorites, composed of pure nickel and iron.

Perfection in Dogs Not Preferred by Dog Owners

In commenting on the high standards set on finely bred dogs, one prominent dog owner says:

"Accepting the 100 per cent standards set for various breeds of dogs, I believe that 75 per cent is top for 999 out of every 1,000 dogs housed by the average dog owner.

"The prospective owner looks for three things: General appearance—does the dog appear true to type, is he unmistakably a setter, Scottie or fox terrier or whatever he is supposed to be; is the dog symmetrical in form, well-balanced, so to speak, from nose to tail, and is he attractive, which can be shown by alertness, attitude to persons looking him over and general appearance.

"If the dog fulfills these three things and is, in addition, of registered stock, the average owner is not going to worry about the 100 per cent standard. We must not lose sight of the fact that if all dogs were absolute standard nobody could afford to own one; they would be too perfect and too expensive."

The presence of two state forests within the proposed Quetico-Superior Council's international forest project would not hinder but aid the plan, E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conseration said in a statement last week. Commissioner Willard's statement takes issue with one recently made by Mr. Sewal Tyng member of the Quetico-Superior Committee. Mr. Tyng said that the presence of the state forests within Quetico-Superior arch hampered the plan for the international forest. Mr. Willard contends that the two state forests within the area would "stimulate cooperation between both state and federal agencies to accomplish the aims and objects of the council."

CORN FODDER AND STAW BEING BOUGHT BY SERA FOR RELIEF PURPOSES

The emergency demand for livestock feed in Minnesota's drouth counties will be lessened through the purchase from farmers in the southern counties of corn fodder and straw for $200,000 by the Minnesota SERA, according to an announcement by E. F. Mattson, director of the livestock relief division.

Mark Graham, formerly field supervisor of the division, has been placed in charge of the buying project. It is estimated that the fund now set aside for the purpose will provide about 15,000 tons of feed.

Farmers in the southern part of the state have been urged during recent months to save their fodder and straw, Mr. Mattson explained

SERA will purchase this material, which in normal times is destroyed, and bale it for shipment into the drouth counties for use as cattle feed. It will add to the stock of 27,000 tons of hay and straw which SERA has already contracted for in the Red River Valley.

Charivari, Mock Serenade, Once Used for Newlyweds

Charivari is pronounced Sha-re-va-re, a as in father, e as in end, accent on third syllable, or colloquially as if it were spelled chiv-e-re. It is a mock serenade of a newly married couple. It originated in the Middle ages in France where it was customary to raise the charivari only against persons just married for the second time, says a writer in the Indianapolis News.

Neighbors would gather round the home of the couple, and make a tumultuous noise by shouting, whistling, hissing, groaning, ringing bells, beating tin pans, etc. The crowd, generally in masks and special costumes, would not stop the charivari until the newly married couple bought their peace with a ransom, which usually consisted of food and drink, or supply of money to buy it. The charivari of the rural districts of the United States is similar, except it is raised against any newly married couple. In Germany it is called "katzenmusik." which means "cat's concert."

Desert Yields Precious Stones

Precious stones weighing as much as five pounds have been found in the Libyan desert. They are of a beautiful greenish-yellow color and extremely hard. It is believed that they were formed out of desert sand by the terrific heat of a great aerolite or meteor, which fell lonz ago in this district. Similar stones have been found around a meteoric crater at Wabar, Arabia. These are supposed to be remains of a broken planet. The crater is similar to the 19 discovered in 1931 in the Central Australian desert, blasted out by giant meteorites. Some of these craters are more than 200 yards in diameter. Scattered around are fragments of the meteorites, composed of pure nickel and iron.

Perfection in Dogs Not Preferred by Dog Owners

In commenting on the high standards set on finely bred dogs, one prominent dog owner says:

"Accepting the 100 per cent standards set for various breeds of dogs, I believe that 75 per cent is top for 999 out of every 1,000 dogs housed by the average dog owner.

"The prospective owner looks for three things: General appearance —does the dog appear true to type, is he unmistakably a setter, Scottie or fox terrier or whatever he is supposed to be; is the dog symmetrical in form, well-balanced, so to speak, from nose to tail, and is he attractive, which can be shown by alertness, attitude to persons looking him over and general appearance.

"If the dog fulfills these three things and is, in addition, of registered stock, the average owner is not going to worry about the 100-per cent standard. We must not lose sight of the fact that if all dogs were absolute standard nobody could afford to own one; they would be too perfect and too expensive."

Very Likely

It is expected that the population of the United States will be three to five million greater in 1940 than it is today.

Little Red Riding Hood, Grown, Writes to Her Old Grandmother

Editor's note: The following exceptional satire was originally submitted to the Minneapolis Journal, but its editorial chief turned thumbs down on it. The writer subsequently sent it to this paper with a note that the Journal had refused it and requesting space if we felt it worth it. We take pleasure in printing it.

Minneapolis Minn.
Nov. 7, 1934.

To the Minneapolis Journal
Dear Grandma:—

Many years have now passed since I, bringing you gifts of cake and wine, was wont to trip gaily through our little village and enter fearsomely upon the winding path that led from the village through the woods to the little cabin that you occupied. The village was small and friendly and my dallying there often made it late before I entered the gloomy forest. The forest was not really a forest and the way through the woods was not really very long or dangerous, but my overactive childish imagination prompted as it had been, found along the path and in the forest the most fantastic terrors. Your stories had filled it for me with hobgoblins and big bad wolves, until every gust of wind and every lurking shadow made me dart forward, or back, in unutterable terror.

I am now a woman grown and have been abroad and for many years away from the scenes of my early childhood, but the vivid experiences (for they were experiences) of those days often occupy my moments of idle reverie. You were, of course, not my real grandma. Mine I never knew, but it pleased me in those days to have some one whom I could call grandma. All the other children had grandmas, and what more fitting person than you could I have chosen for that relationship? As you went in your employment from scullery to scullery, your figure became familiar to the whole neighborhood and your diligence in your tasks won the common favor. Especially did the children like you for your chatter, your stories and your friendliness.

I hear that you still live in that little cabin and I am curious to know whether you remember as clearly as I do, the visits I paid you, the tall stories that were told the avidity with which I swallowed them and the effect they had upon me. To me the little wood became a vast and unexplored forest, the path from the village a long and dangerous trail, spirits filled the upper air and fire-breathing dragons and bad wolves lurked everywhere—especially big bad wolves Particularly do I remember the story of the big bad wolf who imitated our voices, was very hungry and ate you and me. First you, and then me. Just in the nick of time came the brave young hunter, killed the big bad wolf, slit open his belly and saved you and me. First me, and then you. Repetition—and your open, unbeguiling way of telling it—made me believe the story I related my experience to my mother, and then to others. Pretty soon the whole village had it. I have since heard that the story has traveled much farther.

And grandma, do you remember how you objected to the innovation of knives and forks? You said that the Creator had shaped our fingers to hold our food. Before I left the village there was talk about lighting the streets at night. You said that God had made the moon and stars and that if there had been need of other lighting for the outdoors, he would have provided it Although I have not heard, I suppose that the streets are now well lighted.

Do write (an editorial) and tell me how things are now. I wish also that you would touch upon one other thing. Did you yourself believe the things you told me?

Yours with the kindest of memories,

Little Red Riding Hood

Rockville Gets School Built thru the SERA

Construction is under way on Rockville's new $41,250 school, according to Walter F. MacGregor director of the works division, Minnesota SERA.

Located in the heart of the granite industry of Stearns county, the school is to be built of this product contributed by the owners of local quarries. More than one third of the cost was raised locally. The project will employ an average of 44 men.

Besides offering accomodations for 160 students in class rooms space will be allotted in the building for community center with recreational fixtures. The structure will exemplify the use of granite for building purposes, Mr. MacGregor suggested.

Wood Sale in State Forests Increased the Past Summer Season

A large increase in wood sales on state forests has been noted during the past summer.

According to Mr. J. C. Gannaway, assistant in charge of timber during the week of November 19 the following sales of timber were reported:

81,000 feet of dead and down tamarack
676 cords of dead and down tamarack
41 cords of mixed tamarack and pruce, and
234 dead and down tamarack ties

These sales not only bring in some revenue to the state but also help in salvaging considerable dead and down timber. The sales also serve to help clean up the forest and put it in a healthier and safer condition. Sales of this dead and down material will be continued throughout the winter.

All sales are handled through the district ranger in whose district the forest is located.

FORESTRY EDUCATION TO START IN C. C. C. CAMPS

With the start of winter activities in the C. C. C. camps, the division of forestry has begun a new educational campaign in the camps Forestry courses for the men have been started. These courses will be taught under the direction of the Technical Forester in each camp and covers various phases of technical forestry work.

To supplement these courses, Mr C. M. Roberts and Harold Searles will visit the camps with lantern slides. These men will give illustrated lectures on the different phases of conservation work and will work in cooperation with the educational advisor of the camp.

Two men have also been assigned to the showing of conservation movies in the camps and are equipped with sound on film movie projectors furnished by the U. S. Forest Service The men will show the various conservation films at least once a week. This work will continue until spring.

THREE-POINT-TWO BEER TAKES ONE ON THE CHIN

Iowa Judge Deals the Legislative Fiction a Knock-out Blow

By G. W. Calderwood

There is small doubt that every congressman who voted to write into the law that 3.2 percent liquor was not intoxicating, and the president who signed it, knew that he was helping to put a lie into the Federal statutes. The same statement holds as to the legislators and governors. But the question has not been to court often. Nor has the issue of the toxicity of the liquor usually been squarely faced in the cases which have been tried

A recent decision in the District Court of Buchannan county, Iowa met the issue squarely and decided that regardless of congress and the legislature, 3.2 beer is an intoxicating liquor. This was a clean knockout of the legislative fiction. In part, the decision reads:

"If beer is not intoxicating, why are we here with this controversy at all? If beer is not intoxicating why the regulations about permits to sell it—three different kinds of sale? Why have any restrictions on its sale and use if it is not intoxicating? The whole treatment of the beer question in the law of his state and in the law of every state is clear evidence that it is regarded as intoxicating, and there is no question in the world but that it is intoxicating, no matter what any congress or any legislature or any attorney-general may say about it. That is the reason it is regulated; that's the reason we have provisions like that law with regard to the establishment of beer of the school.

"The fact is, the use and sale of intoxicating liquor is under the ban everywhere, and any man who contemplates going into the business of sale of intoxicating liquor whether beer or something else goes into it with the knowledge beforehand that he may be regulated or legislated out of business at any time that the public sees fit to do so.

"So-called beer parlors over the country are nothing but beer saloons under another name, and the influence upon children in coming to this hall for their curricular activities and school activities is going to be protected against the operation of a beer parlor within the prohibited area so far as this court is able to do it."

This is a clean knock-out blow to the legislative fiction that intoxicating liquor will not intoxicate. The end of this tragic legal fiasco may come quickly as 3.2 comes before judges who have seen the devastating havoc of beer, falsely called non-intoxicating.

DIVISION OF FORESTRY CHECKS CHRISTMAS TREES

During the past week, personnel of the division of forestry have been stationed on the main highways leading into the Twin Cities from the north to check on the transportation of Christmas trees Each shipper must have written permission from the owner of the land and this permit must accompany the trees while being transported. The permit must contain the description of the land from which the trees are removed and the signature of the owner.

The men stationed on the highways have instructions to stop all trucks carrying Christmas trees and examine the permit carried by the drivers.

This Christmas tree patrol will be maintained until after the Christams tree shipping season is over.

All Christmas tree cutter are required by law to report the descriptions of the land on which they expect to cut the trees. This report must be sent to the Director of the Division of Forestry, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minnesota, before any cutting is done. It must be signed by the person responsible for the cutting.

The Reader's Rostrum

Thief River Falls Forum
Thief River Falls, Minn.
Dear Editor:

I have been reading quite a bit about the farm labor party, what they have done and what they will do. I would like to ask where these men come from that started this party. Are they new men that just came to America or are they men that has held office with the republicans and then turned out and then went over to the democrat party and throwed out by the democrat party and now start a new party and say they are just the stuff I stay by the old party that had plenty of money in our banks and plenty in the treasury before we went into the World War. They are the boys that run our government in such a way that a high school graduate did not need a garden to get him a job. He got his own job and worked six days in a week. And the people owned their homes and, if they needed money the money was here and any honest man could get money and if he had a mortgage coming due he could renew his loan for another five years and go home about his business. Now if you go to the bank to borrow money the first thing the banker will say is; I am not interested. If so what the devil is he claiming he is running a bank for? When he has no money.

I want to tell you farm labor men you can change your ticket every four years and just before you are ready to die, you will crawl back to the party that had the best dollar in the world and the most of them. But to help some old woman in a foreign country our money must go. And let all old women in this country have a garden to say how much they can have to eat or drink.

Now I want to say to you farm labor men, when you put the United States in the shape it was before the last war, it will be when the dog dies barking at the moon. So just cut out this slip and save it and see if I havn't stated facts. Money is what this government is in need of so bad that our government is trying to please the people by giving three men a one man job, so some will see a few pennies. The United States did not only have a world war, but they had a world fire and no insurance and the world is still burning.

The reason I stay by the party that built up the United States is this: If we have a man in office that don't prove satisfaction to the people, I help to vote him out and try and get a better man in. For I know if I went into some other party and we got a man we did not like, I would have to vote him out or do like some, leave the party and start in new and keep starting experimenting and throw to the dogs the good that has been done If the people in general would work to get the money back that is due to us, they would be doing something.

NOTICE!

At a meeting by the Milkmen's Organization the following agreement was entered into:

To fix the milk price beginning Saturday, Dec. 15 at 9 cents for a quart retail; 1 pint cream 18 cents, 1-2 pint cream, 9 cents.

Reason for this small raise on this important commodity as milk is, the cost of producing milk at the present time is so far out of proportion to former feed prices that we feel the little increase is justified.

Origin of English Toy Spaniel Much Disputed

Retrousse nose, abundant coat and highly intelligent expression—these are the chief characteristics of the English Toy Spaniel, observes an authority in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There are four classes of English Toy Spaniels—King Charles, Blenheim, Ruby and Prince Charles. King Charles have a black and tan coat, Blenheim have a red and white coat, Ruby a solid red and Prince Charles a tricolor coat.

Under an American Kennel club ruling in 1902, English Toy Spaniels were classed together in a general group. Another standard for the breed was adopted by the Toy Spaniel Club of America in 1909.

The origin of the Toy Spaniel is so much disputed that Pug, Malteset, Pekingese, Jap and even the Bulldog have been credited with a share in its ancestry. A cross probably was used to obtain the present short-faced specimen.

Toy Spaniels date back to the Sixteenth century. They were in high favor before the restoration of the House of Stuart in England.

Since the days of King Charles, whose name they bear, they have been closely associated with royalty. They reached the zenith of their popularity during the reign of James II, who bred them extensively.

Mice Destroy Thousands of Acres of Farm Crops

Mouse plagues, disastrous as they are, are of minor importance in comparison with the steady, yearly drain on crops by the mice over the country at large in normal years, says the Montreal Herald. Even as few as ten meadow mice to the acre on 100 acres of meadow would take about 11 tons of grass or 5½ tons of hay a year. This number, on the 65,000,000 acres of hay raised in the United States would cause a loss of over 3,000,000 tons of hay a year, or a money loss of some $30,000,000 annually in hay alone. The number of young in a litter ranges from two to nine, and one pair average five to the litter. At this rate of increase, allowing equal numbers of males and females, and the young beginning to breed at 46 days old, the total increase from one pair, if all lived and bred, would be over 1,000,000 individuals at the end of year. If all were confined to one acre of ground, this would mean over 20 mice to every square foot.

Simple Tuberculin Test Reveals Hidden Enemy

Tuberculin tests among school children form one of the most important year around projects promoted by Christmas Seals in the constant battle against loss of life through tuberculosis. Pictured here is a demonstration of the simple test, which has proven to be one of the essential steps in the battle. It is the only sure method of early discovery of infection, the forerunner of the dangerous type of tuberculosis.

monstrated his product. He stated that the cost to weather-strip the building would be $472.00 and that this stripping would save at least 20% of the heat during the first winter and would later save approximately 35% No action was taken on this matter.

Mr. Hall came with a proposition to the council whereby the Rotary Club would donate $25 towards the reconstruction and maintaining of the tobbaggen slide. He stated that an atttendent at the slide was to be insisted upon by the Rotary Club and that it would be so arranged that it could not be used unless there was an attendent present. Mr. Frabric stated that it might be possible for the SERA to furnish a man to take care of the slide.

Mhyor E. L. Tungseth asked the council to consider the setting up of o commission to take charge of the municipal water and light department stating that this was one of the planks in his campaign for reelection. Walter Jung argued for the commission along with Myhrom;; Christofferson and Knight opposed taking the light plant out of the hands of the council, while McFarland stated that he didn't want to go into any thing unless he knew just what power and what duties would be in the hands of the commission. The mayor stated that after the group and he had studied the situation that it might be that the commission plan wouldn't look so well to them.

The bombshell of the evening came at the conclusion of the meeting when Mr. Myrom presented a letter to the city clerk to be read; it was the resignation of W. W. Veibahn as city engineer effective Dec. 31. His reason for leaving was that he was disappointed in the council because they didn't take the water and light department out of politics. The resignation was unaminously accept-

Origin of English Toy Spaniel Much Disputed

Retrousse nose, abundant coat and highly intelligent expression—these are the chief characteristics of the English Toy Spaniel, observes an authority in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There are four classes of English Toy Spaniels—King Charles, Blenheim, Ruby and Prince Charles. King Charles have a black and tan coat, Blenheim have a red and white coat, Ruby a solid red, and Prince Charles a tricolor coat.

Under an American Kennel club ruling in 1902, English Toy Spaniels were classed together in a general group. Another standard for the breed was adopted by the Toy Spaniel Club of America in 1909.

The origin of the Toy Spaniel is so much disputed that Pug, Malteset, Pekingese, Jap and even the Bulldog have been credited with a share in its ancestry. A cross probably was used to obtain the present short-faced specimen.

Toy Spaniels date back to the Sixteenth century. They were in high favor before the restoration of the House of Stuart in England.

Since the days of King Charles, whose name they bear, they have been closely associated with royalty. They reached the zenith of their popularity during the reign of James II, who bred them extensively.

Mice Destroy Thousands of Acres of Farm Crops

Mouse plagues, disastrous as they are, are of minor importance in comparison with the steady, yearly drain on crops by the mice over the country at large in normal years, says the Montreal Herald. Even as few as ten meadow mice to the acre on 100 acres of meadow would take about 11 tons of grass or 5½ tons of hay a year. This number, on the 65,000,000 acres of hay raised in the United States would cause a loss of over 3,000,000 tons of hay a year, or a money loss of some $30,000,000 annually in hay alone. The number of young in a litter ranges from two to nine, and one pair average five to the litter. At this rate of increase, allowing equal numbers of males and females, and the young beginning to breed at 46 days old, the total increase from one pair, if all lived and bred, would be over 1,000,000 individuals at the end of year. If all were confined to one acre of ground, this would mean over 20 mice to every square foot.

Simple Tuberculin Test Reveals Hidden Enemy

Tuberculin tests among school children form one of the most important year around projects promoted by Christmas Seals in the constant battle against loss of life through tuberculosis. Pictured here is a demonstration of this simple test, which has proven to be one of the essential steps in the battle. It is the only sure method of early discovery of infection, the forerunner of the dangerous type of tuberculosis.

VEIBAHN QUITS JOB AS CITY ENGINEER EFFECTIVE DEC. 31

monstrated his product. He stated that the cost to weather-strip the building would be $472.00 and that this stripping would save at least 20% of the heat during the first winter and would later save approximately 35%. No action was taken on this matter.

Mr. Hall came with a proposition to the council whereby the Rotary Club would donate $25 towards the reconstruction and maintaining of the tobbaggen slide. He stated that an atttendent at the slide was to be insisted upon by the Rotary Club and that it would be so arranged that it could not be used unless there was an attendent present. Mr. Frabric stated that it might be possible for the SERA to furnish a man to take care of the slide.

Mayor E. L. Tungseth asked the council to consider the setting up of o commission to take charge of the municipal water and light department stating that this was one of the planks in his campaign for reelection. Walter Jung argued for the commission along with Myhrom;; Christofferson and Knight opposed taking the light plant out of the hands of the council, while McFarland stated that he didn't want to go into any thing unless he knew just what power and what duties would be in the hands of the commission. The mayor stated that after the group and he had studied the situation that it might be that the commission plan wouldn't look so well to them.

The bombshell of the evening came at the conclusion of the meeting when Mr. Myrom presented a letter to the city clerk to be read; it was the resignation of W W. Veibahn as city engineer effective Dec. 31. His reason for leaving was that he was disappointed in the council because they didn't take the water and light department out of politics. The resignation was unaminously accepted.

Toboggan Slide to Be Constructed at Tindolph Park Soon

Plans are being completed for the reconstruction of the toboggan slide in a new location at Tindolph Park under the supervision of the city park board.

The toboggan slide will be built by relief workers obtained from the local ERA office, and the supervision and care of the slide will be handled by the recreational division of the relief office. The Rotary club made a sizeable donation towards reconstructing the slide, but the remainder of the expense of actual construction is financed thru city funds.

According to the chairman of the park board, this will be a much longer and better slide than was the toboggan slide maintained here before. The tower will be set up in Tindolph Park, therefore enabling the slide to extend over the river.

Co-operatives Met At the River Valley Creamery Last Sat.

A meeting of people interested in cooperative enterprises was held in the new store building at River Valley creamery in Deer Park township last Saturday afternoon, December 15, for the purpose of discussing cooperation and cooperatives. Lars Fore presided at the meeting. Speakers on the program included R. M. Aalbu and Fred C. Proehl of this city, Mr. Whitney, of the Central Cooperative Wholesale at Superior, Wisc., and Stuart McLeod of this city.

In his speech, Mr. Aalbu mentioned the breaking down of large industries operating for private profit with the consequent unemployment of millions of workers and resulting "below cost of production" prices, for farm commodities. He stated it as his opinion, that large industries must be cooperatively controlled and operated, for use rather than for profit. He cited the fact that the federal government finds that it is necessary to turn to cooperation to meet the relief problems, pointing out the so called subsistence homesteads being set up to take care of the destitute and make them selfsustaining in cooperative colonies.

Mr. Proehl spoke on the manipulation of moneys and credits by large financial institutions, chain banks, and large holding companies which own or control chain banks, chain stores and corporation farms. He demonstrated the "smaller package gag" used by the large chain groceries and dime stores in deceiving people into be-

Resume Shows Christmas Seals Have Financed Many Local Health Projects

What benefits does our county receive from the sale of Christmas Seals?

This is a question frequently asked by purchasers of the penny tuberculosis seals. The answer is contained in a bulletin recently received by local Christmas Seal workers from the Minnesota Public Health Association, which directs the sale and program thruout the state.

Pointing out that 95 percent of each dollar raised thru the sale of Christmas Seals remains in Minnesota to support local projects and the statewide campaign, the bulletin explains that five percent goes to finance the national campaign which benefits each county.

Listed among the activities of the National Tuberculosis Association are the following:

Medical research in sixteen laboratories seeking a specific cure; Publication of scientific and popular magazines and leaflets on tuberculosis; Standardization of tuberculin testing and X-ray technique; Child health and education; Preparation of Christmas Seal activities and supplies; Promotion of the campaign.

Listed among the activities of the state asociation are:

Organization of programs and seal sale in the counties; promotion and organization of clinics, nursing service, tuberculin testing surveys and standardization of methods; publication of a monthly magazine, leaflets, posters, etc., for schools and popular educational purposes; short courses of physicians on tuberculosis; health lectures for teachers; continuous education thru cooperation with other agencies, newspaper publicity, exhibits, movies, talks, meetings, etc.; heart disease prevention work.

In Pennington county, Christmas Seals have made possible an extended program of health education and health activities during the past five years.

A tuberculin testing and x-ray survey was conducted in the schools of Thief River Falls during 1933 and 1934. A large appropriation from Seal funds was used to pay for x-rays of positive reactors to the test. Crippled children and adults were examined at the Orthopedic Clinic held in Thief River Falls this fall.

Dr. Kathleen Jordan has given three health talks before rural teachers' institutes, the high schools and the Ninth District Federation of Women's Clubs in Thief River Falls. A portable scale was sent for use in the CWS nursing service in the county.

Each year "Everybody's Health" is sent to every school in the county and health educational material is distributed to the schools, including: thermometers, cup dispensers and paper cups, towel cabinets and paper towels, first aid kits, health books, recreation balls, bats, health balls, and volley ball nets.

INSPECTION OF BALLOTS BEGUN WE'N'SDAY P.M.

Prestemon, Lundgren, and Ecklund Named as Inspectors

After counting approximately 2600 votes in the recount for the House and Senate seats in the Legislature instigated by W. E. Day and P. A. Harris, very little change in the results has occurred. There are in all about 12,000 ballots to be checked and a change of eleven votes is all that is necessary to change the outcome of the election in the case of Day vs. Waldal while a change of one vote of every two hundred ballots will give the election to Harris.

Changes in the third ward gave Harris a net gain of two votes which were absorbed by losses which occurred in Rocksbury and the First Ward. Day gained one vote in the third ward but in the 1600 votes recounted the result amounts to the same as before the start of the recount. Waldal's vote remains the same in net result. There are about 75 ballots which have been contested by attorneys for both sides but which will, in the opinion of Mr. Boughten, attorney for Harris and Day, be counted as they were originally.

If the present rate of counting keeps up it will take approximately seven more days to finish counting the district. The first day of the recount found that about 400 ballots had been checked, the second day 900 and the third day a little more than 1300 ballots were inspected.

STATE CENSUS OF FARMS TO BEGIN IN JAN.

Census to be Conducted by Fed. Government for Farmers' Benefit

The federal government is undertaking a census of agriculture in Minnesota which will start during the first week in January. Approximately 1500 people will be employed enumerating in addition to about 75 other workers. The payroll will amount to nearly $125,000 for this state.

The setting up of the census organization will be under Einar Hoidale with the state divided into seven districts with a supervisor in each district who will be appointed in a few days, according to Mr. Hoidale. There will be no state supervisor, so each dsitrict will send its report direct to Washington. The district supervisors will appoint their own office help and name the tabulators for their district. These enumerators must be farm people and no others will be permitted, Mr. Hoidale announced emphatically.

By writing to the Bureau of Census in Washington, D. C., a sample copy of the schedule may be procured which will enable the farm population to answer the questions acurately when the enumerators call.

Unemployed Council Held Open Discussion Of Townsend Plan

A well attended meeting of the Unemployed Council was held last night in the court room of the County Courthouse in this city. The main topic under discussion was the Townsend Pension Plan which was argued pro and con by persons interested in this plan of old age pension.

Frank Dudley spoke in favor of the plan while R. M. Aalbu and F. C. Proehl tried to show why the plan would not be feasible. Mr. Dudley claimed that the Government was going to allow only 7% to the industries on the original cost of the product but this was refuted by Mr. Proehl on the grounds that this meant a 7% profit which will be over and above the cost of production. Mr. Proehl further stated that we would probably get the sales tax all right but the pension was apt to be forgotten. Mr. Aalbu in his talk spoke against the Plan because it was not a cure for the depression but only a plan that would tend to make the poor poorer and the rich richer as the tax would be on the commodities which the poor man uses most of as is the case in nearly all sale taxes. H. S. Van Pelt also gave a general talk against the Townsend Plan. No action was taken by the body at the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McCann and family of Gilbert, Minn. will arrive Saturday to spend several days with Mrs. McCann's mother, Mrs. J. Thill.

REHABILITATION OF 5,000 FAMILIES IS CONSIDERED

The actual removal of 20 families from Minneapolis to a 640 acre farm in Itasca county is an example of what the near future may have in store for 5,000 eligible farm families under the plans of a rural rehabilitation division, Minnesota SERA, it is announced by Dr. R. W. Murchie, director.

Recent surveys disclose that 14,000 farm relief families in the state could support themselves, if given the special aid which the division is authorized to render. This aid includes the securing for them of suitable lands, and the granting of financial assistance to start them anew on a safe and sound working basis.

About 5,000 families have been selected as prospective beneficiaries of the restoration program of the division. They have been classified in two groups of 2,000 and 3,000 respectively. It is estimated that the families in the first category, could become independent at an average outlay by the SERA of $250 per family for livestock and farm machinery. As regards the other group, their greater needs require an advance of not more than $1,000 for each family. Debt adjustment assistance is available in all instances.

The colony just established in Itasca county by the rural rehabilitation division is the first of its kind in the state, Dr. Murchie stated. An area of 640 acres at Goodland, near Grand Rapids, was purchased by the SERA and placed at the disposal of the settlers, most of whom were on relief in Minneapolis. Their number is 104, of whom 49 are adults and 55 children ranging in age from one to 16 years.

At present, the colonists are living in a communal dwelling, while preparing for the building of separate houses for occupancy in the spring. Livestock, farm equipment and other necessary materials will be furnished by the SERA, at a cost of approximately $22,000. Being helped along on the road to recovery, the colonists should soon be self supporting and free from debt in about five years, Dr. Murchie added.

Supervision is exercised by the Itasca county rural rehabilitation advisory committee, aided by the county relief administrator and R L. Donovan, superintendent of the University of Minnesota experiment farm.

NAZI MURDERERS REINSTATED INTO FORMER POSITIONS

Breslau (TIS)—The contradiction between peace protestations abroad and the systematic increase of persecutions within the country does not seem evident to Nazi minds. According to reports from Silesina, eleven storm troopers who killed four innocent German-Jewish citizens on the momentous June 30th, have been released from custody and reinstated into their old positions. The four people killed were a lawyer, Dr. Forster, a dentist, Dr. Franz and his wife and a merchant, Cherig. After their arrest the four were taken by to an open road. Under the pretense of trying to escape, they were shot to death. Police investigations, however, disproved this convenient excuse by proving that none of the four were shot in the back. The eleven murderers were arrested after considerable delay. Open threats were issued against the public prosecutor, who was forced to request constant police protection.

Ag. School Conducts Sheep Experiments

The Northwest Experiment Station, in cooperation with University Farm, is conducting an extensive sheep breeding trial with special emphasis on the effect of size of market lambs on returns to producers. The trial is being conducted under the direction of O. M. Kiser of the Northwest Experiment Station, and L. M. Winter and P A. Anderson of University Farm.

This project was initiated in the fall of 1933 at which time a breeding flock of grade ewes was purchased on the So. St. Paul market One half of these ewes were of large size with evidence of characteristic rapid growth, while the balance were fine boned ewes of medium size. A group of large ewes was mated to a purebred Shropshire ram of large type, while the group of medium type ewes was mated to a purebred Shrophire ram of compact form and medium type. The two flocks were maintained in separate lots until the pasture season opened in May. Separate feed records were kept on each flock.

Results secured during the preliminary trial indicate the desirability of repeating the work this year. Two separate flocks have therefore been secured and careful records are being kept. Attention will be given to the percentage lamb crop, milking qualities of the ewes, rapidity of gains made by the lambs and comparative cost of production. Results should be of interest to the sheep breeders thruout the country.

THE SIZE OF GERMAN ARMS

The German army consists at present of twenty-one infantry divisions, and four cavalry divisions The number of reserve officers is 18,000, or 14,000 more than provided by the Versailles treaty.

Expert Tells of Care of Laying Birds in Winter

After weeks of heavy egg production, laying hens are likely to show loss in weight followed by a drop in production. According to A M. Pilkey, Northwest School and Station poultryman, to prevent layers from moulting out of season and to insure a heavy egg flow during the winter, it is essential that they be kept in good physical condition.

It is a good plan to examine a few birds from time to time to be certain that body weight is being maintained. Any tendency towards loss in weight should be checked at once either by increasing the amount of grain or by supplying a special moist mash at noon. A method that has been successfully followed at the Northwest Experiment Station for many years calls for an extra feed of whole yellow corn a short time before roosting. The corn is placed in a large pan or trough so that the birds can quickly obtain their full requirements.

A well balanced laying mash should also be kept before the birds at all times. One foot of hopper space should be provided for every ten birds. Grit, oyster shells and greens should also be available together with a regular supply of clean drinking water. Mr. Pilkey has found that where a supply of milk is available in sufficient quantities, it is distinctly advantageous to replace all water with milk.

LIVESTOCK FEED RELIEF SITUATION VERY CRITICAL

Extinction threatens a large part of Minnesota's livestock unless government feed allowances are raised without delay, warns L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator Minnesota SERA.

The rising grain prices, he explained, have put previous estimates of feed costs out of line with current quotations. Even if the original requests had been granted they would not have met all requirements at present, he stated.

Unfortunately the December drouth relief budget was cut in half. Out of a total allowance for all relief purposes of $4,079,135, drouth relief was alloted $500,000, sufficient for two weeks, it was said.

This perilous situation has been aggravated by the recent heavy snowfalls, covering remaining natural grazing lands.

Mr. Zimmerman pointed out that the state appropriation of $200,000 to purchase corn fodder in southern Minnesota can not be used for any other purpose. Furthermore, the feed expected from this source will not be available until late this month.

For these reasons, he said, a supplementary, emergency request for an additional $400,000 livestock grant will be dispatched to Washington, in the hope that imminent disaster may be staved off.

According to E. F. Mattson, director of livestock relief, the aspect of the feed situation is most serious in the following counties: Traverse, Big Stone, La Qui Parle Yellow Medicine, Lincoln, Lyon Renville, Chippewa, Kandiyohi Meeker, Swift, Stevens, Pope Stearns, Wright, Morrison, Todd Benton, and Sherburne.

Dams Proposed in the Pomme de Terr River

Engineers from the Minnesota SERA have spent several weeks in Morris, Stevens county, to make soundings for the four dams which have been recommended for the Pomme de Terre river.

The soundings consisted largely in measuring the depth of mud in the river bed at designated points and ascertaining the nature of the solid strata underneath.

Included in the survey are detailed notes on the areas where water would be impounded by the dams, if built. Information was also obtained so that computations can be made as to the amount of earth that must be removed in leveling off these areas and in building dykes in some places.

Having completed the field work, the engineers will draw maps of the proposed dam sites from their notes and report on the feasibility of the water control plan for the river.

TRUNK HIGHWAYS HAVE NEW 'NO PASSING' ZONES

In a new effort to reduce accidents on sharp curves, bad hills and other places of unusual hazard the state highway department will soon establish "no passing" zones on trunk highways.

Such danger zones will be indicated by a double center line in the middle of the highway, as contrasted with the single center line in general use. Signs at the roadside will carry the "no passing" message.

Engineers are now making a survey of places on the main routes where passing restrictions are needed. In general, such locations will be on approaches to the crest of a hill where the clear view ahead is less than 500 feet, and on all curves with a radius less than 600 feet or where the clear view ahead is less than 500 feet.

At places of extreme hazard, special reflector button markers may be placed between the double center lines to emphasize the danger at night.

Many head-on collisions result from cars attempting to pass others while the driver cannot see far enough ahead to insure safety

INTER-STATE FEATURES OF THE WHETSTONE RIVER PROJECT IS CONSIDERED

Problems of the Whetstone river flood control plan as regards division of costs between Minnesota and South Dakota were discussed at a meeting, in Pierre, S. Dak., between representatives of both states.

Conferring with Governor Thos. Berry of S. Dakota were these Minnesotans: Walter F. MacGregor director of the works division, Minnesota SERA; O. S. Kipp, construction engineer; Rex Green, right of way engineer; H. E. Chard district engineer of the state highway department, and O. T. Bundlie assistant attorney general.

This conservation project has been approved by the Minnesota SERA and some 50 relief clients are already at work on it.

The Whetstone river, now emptying into the Minnesota river, is to be diverted into Big Stone lake by means of a new channel. A dyke will be built in Big Stone City in S. Dakota to Big Stone Lake and Ortonville, Minnesota, to impound the floodwaters in the lake and raise its level. Plans are being prepared for an inter-state highway between Big Stone City and Ortonville.

The estimated cost of the project is $50,000, requiring [illegible] to complete and employing 300 men.

Because of the inter-state nature of the proposed dyke and highway questions as to financing and labor will have to be threshed out between the two states interested.

PRISON FIGURES REVEAL THE NAZI TERRORISM

Cologne (TIS)—The average daily number of prisoners in the jails and penitentiaries of Prussia has jumped from 32,525 in 1931 to 37,982 in 1932 and 56,928 in 1933. The latter figure proves the extent of the Nazi terror. A single illadvised word is sufficient to bring about imprisonment in a concentration camp and jail. At the same time, food expenditures for the individual prisoner have decreased approximately 40 percent despite the universal rise in prices.

Lakefield Boy Football Champion in Contest

Final scores have been tabulated in the state wide football efficiency contest staged by the recreational department of the Minnesota SERA, it is announced by George K Tuttle, director.

Charles Denker, a 14 year-old youth of Lakefield, won the state championship with 3,043 points when he place kicked 59 yards, 2 feet; drop kicked 47 yards; passed 40 yards, and punted 50 yards, 1 foot.

Second place went to Eino Himango, 13 years, of Biwabik, with 2,951 points, and third place to G Phelps, 10 years, of Wells, with 2,936 points.

This was the first contest of its kind ever held in the United States, Mr. Tuttle said. Minnesota youths numbering 40,000 participated. The events included punting, forward passing, drop and place kicking. Competition open for boys from 10 to 18 years, points were awarded according to age and results, on a handicap basis.

All events were directed by J. W. Crossett, state athletic director in the recreational department.

LARGE SEWING PROJECT IS STARTED IN DULUTH

A sewing project for more than 100 women in Duluth relief rolls is being set in motion with funds provided by the Minnesota SERA.

The women will be busy in three sewing centers making comforters sheets, pillow cases and towels for distribution among the needy families in St. Louis county.

The SERA appropriated $31,419 for the project which will furnish 52,000 hours of work.

Swedish Hospitality is Abused by the Germans For Armament Purposes

Stockholm (TIS)—That the well known Junkers Aircraft Factories are extending German rearmament activities to Sweden is conclusively proven by a recent investigation at Malmo. Numerous military air planes are being built for Germany by the Aktiebolaget Flygindustrien at Lindhamn near Malmo. The favorable situation of the factories at the Swedish south coast permits extensive experiments, among them the release of air bombs and other air arms. The Lindhamn works are an affiliate of Junkers' Factories Dessau, Germany, according to "Folkets Dagblad". The main production are four types of light military planes and a limited number of heavy passenger aircraft. By removing doors and certain partitions, and installing machine guns the latter can be easily transformed into auxiliary army planes.

Confidential news from Dessau discloses that from 1,000 to 1,500 members of the German army and police forces are being sent in regular relays to Dessau to be trained there as flyers. The men have been ordered to wear civilian clothes only, and to deny all military or government connections.

Dredging has Started on The Breckenridge Dam

A dredging machine is already in operation on what is to become a 300 acre lake dam across the Otter Tail river near Breckenridge as part of the $50,000 flood control project on the river, to insure an adequate water supply for the city.

The dam is to be built on the Henry Kosek farm, approximately one-half mile up the river from the Northern Pacific bridge on the outskirts of Breckenridge. It will be of concrete construction with a spillway 60 feet wide.

An 11 foot head of water will be impounded by a dyke 900 feet long at the southwest end of the dam and requiring 12,000 cubic feet of earth for its construction.

When completed, the water held back by the dam will be a quarter of a mile wide and approximately 16 feet deep at its deepest point. It is planned to stock the lake with fish.

Sixty persons will be employed on the project.

DEER HUNTING REPORTS INDICATE HEALTHY HERD

Appreciation was expressed by Erling Swenson, director of the game and fish division because of the comparatively large numbers of deer hunters who have already filed their hunting reports. He warned that all hunting reports including the amount of game taken must be returned before January 31. Failure to do so, Director Swenson said, bars license for next year.

"Reports received to date indicate in the whole that Minnesota's deer herd is in good condition," Mr. Swenson said, "It is gratifying to note the absence of serious decease and the fact that the widespread drouth did not affect the deer areas of the state to any great extent."

Tree Nursery Capacity Is Being Increased by the State Conservation Dept.

By spring approximately six million trees will be growing in the state nursery at Badoura, according to G. M. Conzet, director of the division of forestry. After the fall shipping season was over an inventory was taken and it was found that approximately this number of trees would be left at the nursery.

A large number of the wind breaks of western and southwestern Minnesota have been destroyed by the drouth. The division of forestry has been receiving inquiries daily regarding the disposition of nursery stock grown at the state nursery. Mr. Conzet wishes to emphasize that under the present nursery law the division of forestry cannot supply planting stock to farmers and individuals. The law specifically states that the trees grown in the state nursery cannot be sold or given away but must be planted on state land.

Persons wishing to replenish their windbreaks, woodlots, and shelter belts may secure lists of nurseries supplying this stock by writing to the division of forestry. The division of forestry is glad to advise persons wishing to establish or reestablish windbreaks. This information may be secured by writing to the Director of the Division of Forestry, State Office Building, St. Paul.

MOUNTAINS OF SAND FOR THOSE SLIPPERY ROADS

Nearly 40 million pounds of sand and cinders and many tons of calcium chloride will be used by the state highway department this winter on slippery roads. Supplies have been kept in stock piles since fall, and are drawn on as occasion demands.

HITLER BOOK SMUGGLED INTO CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Prague (TIS)—Smuggling of prohibited German books on a large scale has been discovered, the Czechoslovakian postal authorities announce. Among the books expressly forbidden on Czechoslovakian soil for their inflamatory and otherwise pernicious character, is Hitler's "My Struggle", which is smuggled into Czechoslovakia by means of innocent looking book covers, bearing the names of girls' stories.

SHUSH, SHUSH, BOYS, MUSTN'T FIGHT.

Forsooth, uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. No sooner has Hizzoner, the Mayor gone thru a hard campaign and gained a contest to harrass him. than he faces insurrection in the ranks of his hitherto so faithful council. What ho, churls, has the campaign made the Master's voice hoarse that ye no longer recognize it, or has the pills of the autocrat developed sharp corners that rasp even gullets grown accustomed to swallowing promiscuously, decrees, conscience and pride?

We suggest a trip to "headquarters", there amidst the pleasant memories of happy accord in its continued operation, even a wet council and a "dry" mayor should be able to reach an understanding on such a small matter as the establishment of a water and light commission. Remember men, chins up. If you can't gain your end completely, you can at least compromise. Like the man who wanted to go to the mountains when his wife wanted to go to the seashore. He compromised—by going to the seashore.

BUSINESS IS GOOD—FOR BIG BUSINESS

The Hurrah press, has been enthusing for months about the "wonderful upturn in business" and the splendid gains made in the mercantile marts of the country as compared with last year, the year before, the year before that etc. It has been rather hard for us to believe. In fact we quite decidedly took all that balyhoo to be "baloney".

However, we have been wrong, decidedly wrong. Despite the fact that government figures inform us that the relief lists have grown by thirty thousand or more families, reaching an all-time peak, business has been good—for big business.

Income figures reveal that fewer people of moderate incomes have had an income during the past year than the previous year. For instance, the tax figures made public by the federal treasury department last week, shows that the number of persons in the United States who had incomes of $5,000 per year or less dropped by 91,393; the number of people who had incomes ranging from $5,000 to $10,000 dropped by 17,538; the number who had incomes from $10,000 to $25,000 decreased by 2,419.

On the higher brackets, however, the story is quite different. We find that the number of people who had incomes from $25,000 to $50,000 grew by 510 persons; the number who had incomes ranging from $50,000 to $100,000 increased by about 300; the number who had incomes ranging from $100,000 to $150,000 doubled; the number who took it to the tune of from $150,000 to $300,000 net during the year, grew by 104 persons; the number of persons who had incomes ranging from three hundred thousand to a half a million dollars increased from 136 to 139; those who figured their net incomes from half a million to one million dollars raised their total from 80 to 84 and to top the list, those who made over a million dollars last year numbered 49 as compared with 20 the year before. Truly business has been good, in good old American style. We challenge any other country in the world to show that they could go out and more than double their output of millionaires during a depression year.

The news release also states that "Three individuals, their names carefully guarded by the treasury department, had net incomes aggregating 26 and a half million dollars in 1933 after all lawful deductions had been made." The precautions taken by the treasury department are quite in order. Some members of those thirty thousand families who went on relief rolls while these birds enjoyed "good business" to the tune of $26,000,000 net, might get foolish and think it isn't right. They might even get the idea that they should do something about it—something unethical.

ROOSEVELT WILL TAKE THE PROFITS OUT OF WAR (?)

Now that Senator Nye and his coworkers on the committee investigating munition makers and munition profits have brought the deadly racket to the attention of the American people, President Roosevelt comes to the front assuring us that he will sponsor legislation to take the profit out of war. Mr. Roosevelt is rather late in his protestations against war and munition profits. As a member of President Wilson's cabinet, holding the office of Assistant Secretary of the Navy, he must have been quite conversant with the munitions racket. As president of the United States, now almost two years he has had ample time to look into the matter that has been public knowledge for many month.

His entrance at this time looks very much to us like an attempt to squash further inquiry by the Senate Committee. The fact that he calls to his assistance Barney Baruch and General Hugh Johnson in the drafting of legislation "to take the profit out of the munitions racket", sounds rather like calling the wolves to guard the sheep.

Barney Baruch is one of the "big shots" in the ranks of the international bankers, a member of the firm of Kohn-Loeb and company, who own and control the munition racket. General Hugh Johnson is a militarist of the first water and has had intimate relations with the munition racketeers for many years. How these men will take the profit out of the munitions racket is a caution.

We are ready to witness the next farce-comedy to be staged by the administration. Barney Baruch will frame a law to stop the profits in munitions as effectively as the Minnesota old age pension law pensions the aged, and General Johnson will mount the rostrum and bombast in his inimical fashion for public consumption. And when the curtain is rung down on the act the faithful will applaud while the racket in human lives continues in all its ghastly horror.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

Mrs Roosevelt Challenged to Debate the Booze Issue

Miss Ethel G. Hubler, Editor of the National Voice, published in Los Angeles, California and one of the most prominent Prohibition workers in the Nation, has challenged Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to debate. The challenge was sent from the seat of the National W. C. T. U. Convention at Cleveland, Ohio after the challenge having been made by Miss Hubler on Sunday morning at the service in the Nazarene Church, it was then dispatched by telegraph to Mrs. Roosevelt and the next morning appeared in leading newspapers throughout the Nation. The challenge was given closely following Mrs. Roosevelt's announcement that wines would be served at state dinners in the White House. The following is the text of the challenge:

> "Because of your active personal interest in national problems, it has occurred to me that you might enjoy an opportunity to debate one of the nation's greatest issues with me. At your convenience and pleasure I would deem it a great privilege to take the affirmative side of the proposition: 'Resolved, That Repeal Has Failed'."

Arithmetic and the Townsend Plan

The Townsend Plan, which provides for an old-age pension of $200 a month (to be spent within the month), and which is to be paid by a ten percent sales tax has swept the country like wildfire. I was amused to see an article the other day by an enthusiastic supporter of the Townsend Plan, in which he challenged all critics of the plan to apply simple Arithmetic,—the assumption being that you would see immediately that the Townsend Plan was O. K.

Being a critic of the plan (and any plan which attempts to lift capitalism by its own bootstraps) I applied simple arithmetic, and here is what I got:

The ten percent sales tax is paid by pensioners as well as ordinary people. This knocks twenty dollars off the two hundred dollars right away, since the entire sum must be spent for things within the month.

In buying things, the next deduction we meet with is a profit, which must go to uphold our captain and lieutenants of industry. This profit is fairly estimated at 25 percent. Take 25 percent off $180, and you have a remainder of $135; which presumably circulates among the tradespeople, workmen, and professional people with whom you pend your pension money. But they, in turn, buy things, on which they pay a ten percent sales tax and a twenty-five percent capitalistic tax.

The sales tax money, it is true acts as a sort of "revolving fund"—but not the profit-tax. That goes into the pockets of the profiteers—and remains there, as real "frozen assets".

That's the trouble with things today. The immense speeding-up of profits after the war is the sole cause of the present predicament. It's like playing poker in the old style gambling joints. A certain part of each pot went to the house—and if you played long enough, it all went to the house.

Until we make that "house" ours, with production for use, not for profit,—in the true cooperative commonwealth,—we will continue having nightmares like the present depression, and horse-medicine cures like the Townsend Plan, which may brighten things for a while, but leaves an awful headache with us in the last analysis.

Take it from me, no supporter of the profit system will uphold any plan that does not assure some profits—the enthusiastic support given the Townsend Plan ought to make the serious-minded person wary of being taken in.

Cranks in My Short Life

After viewing the situation carefully, I have come to the conclusion that the world is run by cranks. Our government, our financial system, our railroads, our educational system,—all have very crankish persons at their heads. Which is all right,—for only cranks know their own line of business—This came to my mind after reading of "Coin" Harvey, the money authority of the past generation. There is nothing in the monetary system that a reading of Harvey's works will not throw a light upon. Harvey, as candidate for president on the Liberty Party ticket in 1932 distributed thousands upon thousands of copies of his book, "The Book", which brought new ideas to people who had never had new ideas before.—Another crankish crank, who could perhaps teach Coin Harvey a thing or two, is Warren E. Brokaw, of Del Rosa, California, the author of Equitism, a new philosophy of work and a work unit of exchange. Brokaw went beyond Karl Marx on the money question. He reduced exchange to its component parts, and showed what is now the matter with it.—Coin Harvey wanted to build a pyramid which was to house all the wonders of modern life. Begun over ten years ago, work on it was suspended for lack of funds, and the inventions installed in it are already out of date.—Another pyramid builder crank friend of mine is Axel Peterson, of Avery, Iowa, an old crippled Swede who wants to be buried like an old Egyptian king. Latest reports are that lots have been bought, and rock is being cut for the monument. Axel spends his time printing a little soap-wrapper of a publication on a hand-press.—A crank closely associated in my mind with Warren E. Brokaw, mentioned above (who is one of his disciples) is Isaac Newton Vail, who lived at the latter half of the last century and valiantly battled the erroneous conceptions of one Charles Darwin. Vail's ideas of evolution was that the embryo alone "evoluted", and that the evolution of a higher species from a lower was impossible. Vail's thesis includes a supposition (pretty well founded) that the Earth once had rings like Saturn, and that the fall of the last of these caused the flood of Noah's time.—Although I can not swallow everything, all these cranks have a fascination for me They are so reasonably crazy, so rationally irrational, that I prefer their logical maunderings to the sober, unimaginative errors and hypocricies of most human beings whose fancy died at an early age and left them walking like automatons in a brainless machine age. It is easy enough to be dead in a dead world.

BOURBONS AND TORIES

(From the December issue of "The Railroad Trainman")

The Bourbon kings are known to their posterity for having possessed the characteristic of never learning anything and never forgetting anything. How like the Bourbon is the present day Tory. He refuses to learn the significance of modern technology on our social existence and he never can forget his favorite sophistry that high wage costs make high production costs, reduce profits and throw men out of work. The Tories today tell us that shorter work hours would lower the standard of living of the workers In their foolish complacency they reason that we should produce for the sake of "cheap production costs", rather than for the sake of a generous existence for humanity With an air of sincerity, they try to argue that a shorter work hours' program is essentially a principle of trying to have more by producing less. Probably no argument against the principle of shorter work hours without reduction in pay more clearly portrays the shallowness of the thinking of our modern Tories.

Between 1929 and 1933, factory employment declined 34 per cent the total number of workers declined 50 per cent, but physical volume of production declined only 38 percent. In those figures there may be found an unanswerable argument for shorter work hours. Output declined more slowly than the decrease in the number of the employed because scientific and technological progress and modern methods of efficiency continued during the depression. Output per man hour has increased 27 percent since 1929. The total number of workers declined more than factory employment because, instead of reducing working hours, men were reduced, that is, fewer men were required to do more work and the remaining workers were thrown into the breadlines.

Our answer to the Tories, therefore, is that the six-hour day does not contemplate lowering production. On the contrary, it contemplates increasing production. Not only will workers be more efficient on a shorter work day, but there will be something to produce for—we will have a consuming power that will inspire production and will make it feasible and profitable to produce. It is only the Tory, the banker, who refuses to lend for prosperity, those with an anti-social view, who conceive less production under a program of shorter work hours without reduction in pay. Those with a social vision realize that not only will there be greater production, but there will be many more men producing.

The stupidity of our modern Tories, which exceeds the stupidity even of the Bourbon kings of France, again manifests itself in their continual carping about the great decline in the so-called durable goods industries. These Bourbonic Tories view with alarm the fact that there has been a proportionately greater decrease in the durable goods industries than in the consumable goods industries. Like the natives of uncivilized areas who run for cover upon the appearance of an aeroplane, these modern Bourbons become alarmed at entirely normal and natural economic phenomena. A decline in the durable goods industries is only the natural and logical result of overconcentration of wealth and overcapitalization in industry.

Naturally the unemployed and the part-time employed had to continue to eat, or starve. They had to have clothes, or go naked. Logically these items of the so-called consumable goods class could not decrease in equal proportions with non-consumable goods without bringing about extinction of the human race. The items in the so-called durable goods category inevitably had to decrease disproportionately, not only because they had been expanded abnormally (In a past prosperous year we spent $54,000,000,000 on durable goods, while householders spent $34,700,000,000 on the necessities of life.) but because men cannot buy houses when they need food and railroads will not buy locomotives when they already have more power units than their business requires. When millions of men were thrown out of work and other millions were given only part-time work on a bare subsistence income; when all industries were capable of producing far more than they could sell, obviously there was little need for expanding those items manufactured by the durable goods industries—factories, machinery, tools, locomotives, etc. The Tories must be made to understand that the manufacture of a tool is justified, not merely because it serves their desire for profit, but only when it serves the direct uses of man. The making of so-called durable goods merely for the profits of those in that industry, the building of sidewalks for cows to walk upon in many wild real estate developments, brought us to our economic knees. Those in the durable goods industries will continue to suffer from distended stomachs until mass production is restored by the adoption of shorter work hours without reduction in the workers' pay.

Mr. Henry I. Harriman, President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who might be described as spokesman for the Bourbonic Tories against a shorter work hours program has said, "The thirty-hour week may become an actuality sooner than we anticipate." In this prediction he has shown wisdom and foresight that is not common among the Bourbon and the Tories.

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Grays

Christmas is here

A time not so much to recall a Baby as a Life.

For the Baby there were angels, shepherds, wondrous star, wise men and gifts.

But for the Life, loneliness, Gethsemane and Golgotha.

What a mockery all this fuss about the birthday of Jesus unless we bravely accept and follow His Life and Teachings.

We adore Him as a Baby, but what is our attitude to Him as a Man?

If He was here as a Man, in the flesh, as when in Judea, what would He say, concerning war, child-labor, unemployment politics, liquor, service-clubs secret societies, church divisions, lobbying, stocks and bonds, graft and greed?

What would He say to this restless, jazzmania, crooning movie, drinking, smoking, lawless, defiant, Sabbath desecrating age?

If Jesus was here today in the flesh, as a Man, would we celebrate for Him as we do at Christmas in remembrance of His birth, or would we crucify Him?

CHURCH CHIEFS TURN TO THE LEFT ON ECONOMICS

More than 300 leaders of North American Protestantism, who make up the Federated Council of Churches, in biennial session in Dayton, Ohio, adopted a definition of "the church's position and responsibility on the new social frontier."

The Federated Council is the co-operative agency of 25 denominations representing upward of 20 million members. The defining document prepared by a special committee of more than 40 notable denominational leaders, was read by President Albert W. Palmer of the Chicago Theological Seminary. In general, the definiton of the church functions made by the Palmer statement has been described as "leaning to the conservative right in Theology, but to the left in cocal and economic matters."

"It means," said the Palmer statement, "a searching criticism of a social order, in contrast with nature's fruitfulness and invention; leaving millions in poverty, and providing no adequate protection against unemployment or the disabilities arising from disease, accident and old age."

Economic reforms were urged by the report, a special plea to the laymen of the churches was made "that they catch up with the more rapidly marching socialism of their pastors."

Apology for the backwardness of the laity was included in which it was asserted that laymen "are inevitably and oftentimes unwillingly geared into the present economic system by inheritance and environment." But despite such fate, these laymen were called upon to frankly face "the anti-Christian aspect of current economic life."

WHY NOT READ A BOOK?

By 'High School Graduate'
(In Minneapolis Tribune)

When Louis Untermeyer lectured here he said that people were beginning to read books because they want to share life, not escape from it. People are finally finding out that they are part of a social organism and that no man is a law unto himself.

As we begin to take a more realistic attitude toward the problems of life, those perplexities which puzzle so many of us, but really should not, will begin to work themselves out into the light. Every one of us should try to cultivate an open mind, a sense of realism and a taste for facts.

I feel sorry for the person who has not learned to occasionally enjoy a good book. In these times when most of us haven't much money to spend for entertainment our better judgment behooves us to take advantage of our wonderful library and its many services.

When Daddy was a Boy

by Lawrence Hawthorne

"When I was just a little boy,"
I've heard my Daddy say,
"I had a lot more things to do
Than youngsters have today!"
An' then he goes right on an' tells
About the chores he did—
An' you can bet he makes it sound
Like he was quite a kid!

He had t' feed a dozen cows,
An' milk 'em twice a day;
He always had some horses, too,
That needed corn an' hay;
He watered 'em, an' curried 'em,
An' kep' their stables clean;
An' there was other little jobs
T' scatter in between!

He had t' saw up logs, an' then
He had t' split 'em, too,
So they'd go in the kitchen stove;
An' then he wasn't through
Until he'd carried in the coal,
An' carried out the ashes,
An' filled the water pails an' pans—
An' wiped up all the splashes!

If Daddy had t' do so much,
An' go t' school all day,
I don't see how he ever had
A bit o' time t' play;
But preba'ly he thought his work
Was such a lot o' fun
That he jus' worried every night
For fear he might get done!

MOTHERS STARVE THAT 'KIDDIES' MAY LIVE

St. Louis County Independent

"The health of the children is being maintained at the expense of the mothers'," says a recent bulletin of the British Labor Party, pointing out that "one of the most serious health problems of today is the condition of mothers in unemployed families," says Labor.

The bulletin then quotes a British medical officer as saying that "the small evidence of underfeeding of children is a result of the self-sacrificing bravery of the mothers. It is the mother of the family who suffers most when there is not enough food."

An investigation made by the "British Journal" showed that "50 per cent of the women suffered from malnutrition." Anemia, tuberculosis and death in childbirth are cited as a result of "the self-denial of the working-class mothers."

But in England as in America comfortably fixed people like to blame the undernourishment of mothers and children on "parental inefficiency," which the British labor bulletin says "as a charge constantly brought against the mothers."

How little there is in this hardhearted theory was shown by Dr. J. R. Marrack, who made a study of malnutrition in a British working-class area and reported that "no amount of education in food values or instruction in cooking will make it possible to feed a family on these unemployment relief incomes. Education in food values is useless unless the puchasing power of the family is adequate to carry out the instructions given."

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR

St. Paul Daily News

Because modesty and common sense so seldom make the headlines it is a pleasure to quote from a good reporter's account of the visit to New York of Dr. Allen R. Dafoe, the country doctor who successfully brought into the world the famous Dionne quintuplets.

The good doctor took his first trip in 26 years and "saw the famous skyline but turned aside to talk to the mate of a ferry boat about children."

"Even in teeming Times square, Dr. Dafoe appeared only mildly interested. But if someone mentioned 'his babies' his face lighted up with pride. * * * He didn't seem especially thrilled by the motorcycle escort, one of New York's courtesies to great men. He regarded cheering crowds, police and his hosts and welcomers with modest approval. Photographers and reporters were met with frankness and even at a special-press conference he was unruffled. * * * Then someone asked him what fee he had received.

"'Oh, I got $25. But that's not a bit bad. I bought a new suit with it. Why, there's one woman there who had 17 children and never paid me a penny for any one of them.'"

There are thousands of "family" doctors like Dr. Dafoe in this world. Only when quintuplets come does the world hear of them. But the world couldn't get along without them and hundreds of thousands of persons treasure their presence and good deeds.

THOSE "CRAZY" FILIPINOS

Union Advocate (St. Paul)

For years congress has passed the buck on the matter of granting full independence to the Filipinos, those little brown men this nation Christianized with Krag-Jorgenson rifles and sword bayonets something like 35 years ago when the sugar barons of this country wanted to annex the sugar lands of the Philippine Islands. Coolidge scorned the idea of granting independence to this insular nation, but Hoover finally yielded to pressure and as a consequence the little brown men will have full independence within a few years.

Looking forward to the day when the sugar barons and the U. S. marines move out of the islands the Filipinos have already begun the writing of their national constitution. They are very courteous in their giving credit to this nation for their deliverance from the yoke of Spanish rule. They acknowledge they have been inspired by the American declaration of independence, the constitution and its amendments. That is characteristic of the oriental. He is always very courteous.

But the Filipinos did not acclaim the American constitution as their rock of ages. Instead, they have made radical departures from the constitution written by the founding fathers, and among these departures might be mentioned their declaration that "all agricultural, timber, and mineral lands belong to the nation." They go further still by declaring "So do the waters, minerals, coal, petroleum, game, fish and other natural resources—including the air, water power and all forces of potential energy."

Another section provides that corporation franchises may not run for more than 50 years and sets up rigid safeguards against all forms of monopoly. No corporation will be permitted to own more than 1200 acres of farm land, and the government may operate any kind of business without fear of being told that to do so is unconstitutional.

In a word, the Filipinos apparently were not fully Americanized when Admiral Dewey and the war department of the U. S. A. landed armed forces at Manila and then proceeded to blast the daylights out of the little brown men. The Filipinos actually believed that all the people—and not just handful of capitalists—should own the Philippines.

All of which proves how sadly their education has been neglected during the past 35 years.

THE PRICE OF FREEDOM

Polk County Leader

There is an old saying: 'Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom." That axiom is most important now, because freedom faces its greatest dangers in times of stress.

If we are to maintain our fundamental liberties—of speech, of action, of press, of church—we must pay for them in the coin of vigilance. We must not trade permanent blessings for temporary benefits—no matter how desirable those benefits seem at the moment. We must hold steadfastly to the democratic principles upon which the United States was built, and with whose aid it grew great.

Many sincere persons, carried away by their wish to better conditions, would permit our institutions to be weakened and perhaps destroyed, believing that they are no longer able to cope adequately with the problems of the modern world. The best answer to that lies in the examples of other great nations, which have jettisoned individual and corporate liberties—with disorder, bloodshed, revolutions, as the results.

Freedom is a sacred trust. It is the duty and the privilege of every American to discharge the great obligation it imposes.

Congressman-Elect R.T. Buckler Is Honor Guest at Crookston Luncheon

A fine tribute to Congressman-elect R. T. Buckler in the form of a luncheon at which he was the honor guest was given at the Eagles' hall in Crookston on Saturday. About 200 people were present, among them a large number of legislators.

The affair was in the nature of a good-will send off for Mr. Buckler who will leave shortly to take up his duties as Ninth District Congressman at Washington.

A group of local people were among those present of whom B O. Norby manager of the local Land O' Lakes plant was called upon for a short address. In his talk he stressed the need of adequate farm legislation and stated that he feels sure that Congressman Buckler will be a champion of good farm legislation.

Dean Rasmussen of Concordia college told the audience that he know Congressman Buckler is "politically honest", which, he said is a tribute to any politician.

The principal speaker of the afternoon was Elmer Benson, State Commissioner of Banks, who congratulated the people of the nin congressional district upon th clean campaign which was carr on in the congressional fight. He stated that one of the reasons there was so much "mudslinging" in th gubernatorial race is the fact that the opposition is afraid of the changes which must come if the Farmer-Labor Party is placed in power. Radical changes are progress which cannot be stopped, no matter how desperately the opposition may attempt to stop them when they are first proposed, he said.

Congressman Buckler when called upon stated that he has always hoped people would say nice things about him after he is dead but had not expected so many nice things to be said about him while he is still alive. He stated that he expects that there may be times when he does not agree with the president on all things, but he hopes to be able to convert him into seeing things in the same light as we do. He stressed the need of monetary reforms and stated that the government should take over the Federal Reserve Bank and operate it for the benefit of the people. He declared himself in favor of the immediate payment of the Soldiers' Bonus, the Frazier Bill for re-financing the farmers and an adequate federal old age pension law.

Messages of congratulation from Governor Olson and others were read.

LOCAL MAN SIGNED FOR BUTTER SHORT COURSE

Among the successful candidates chosen by the Minnesota College of Agriculture to attend the Six Weeks' Creamery course at University Farm is Floyd B. Olson, of Goodridge, manager of the cooperetive creamery at that place. Because of a reduced budget, the College has been compelled to restrict the attendance this year to only highly qualified creamery men. The course begins January 8, 1935 and will close February 19.

The Six Weeks' Creamery course has been an annual event for the past 41 years, enabling over 4,000 men to receive special training in that field. Applications were received from four outside states as well as from practically every county in Minnesota.

Professor W. B. Combs, in charge of the short course, announced that there would be a special course in dairy bacteriology, particularly in that branch which includes the activity and relationship of bacteria in the manufacture of butter.

Plans Now Being Made For 1935 Land Sale

Lists of public lands to be offered at the annual spring sales next year are now being prepared by the Division of Lands and Minerals, according to F. A. Wildes, director. Present plans call for sales to be conducted at the county seats of about 30 counties with printed lists to be ready for distribution about Feb. 1st.

Tracts to be sold are all agricultural lands, a large part of which have been in use under lease by farmers in the various areas where lands are located. Lists may be secured by writing the division of Lands and Minerals, State Office building, St. Paul, designating the county in which interest is centered.

Terms of the sale are 15 percent of the purchase price payable on date of sale, the balance payable on or before forty years with interest at four percent payable annually. Persons desiring to purchase state lands must attend the sale at the court house in the county in which the land is located or be represented by a properly authorized agent.

"All state lands are sold at public auction for not less than the appraised price," Mr. Wildes said "Where improvements have been made on the land, such improvements must be paid for in cash at the time of the sale. Timber is also paid for in cash at time of sale.

"Several thousand desirable tracts, located for the greater part in the northern counties will be included in the 1935 sales. Not more than 320 acres will be sold to any one person." Mr. Wildes stated.

To sell, to let, to buy, to trade, lost, found, strayed or stolen, an advertisement in the Fornum will bring you satisfactory results.

U. S. Volunteer Life Savers

The United States volunteer lifesaving corps was formed in 1870 and instructs in rescue work from drowning, resuscitation and first aid, places life-saving equipment, surf boats, life buoys and so on, at the most dangerous places throughout the United States, and grants medals and certificates. Its work has been adopted by the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Red Cross and practically all municipal life guards in the country, as well as army, navy and other branches of the government, each organization modifying the work. The corps has over 100,000 rescues to its credit and countless first aid cases since its inception. Its membership approximates 75,000, and is active in many states throughout the Union. The headquarters are at Providence, R. I.

Croats Became a Subject State

In the Eighth century the Croats became a subject of state in the Western Empire of Charlemagne, and for the next 150 years remained under the domination of one or another of their western or eastern neighbors. In 924, Tomislav won the independence of a large portion of Croatia, and it is to him that the Jugoslavs look back on a thousand years of history. In 1102, Croatia was joined with Hungary as an autonomous kingdom under the Hungarian crown of St. Stephen, and remained so until the World war.

Meaning of Word "Rand"

Rand is a Dutch word in use in South Africa, meaning rim, edge, edge of hills. Specifically it is an abbreviated form of Witwaters Rand, an elevated ridge in South Transvaal, forming the water-parting between the Vaal and the Olifants rivers. The Rand is famous for its auriferous reefs and the word is often used as a synonym for the extensive gold mining industry of this area, or for Johannesburg, the city which the industry created.

Sea-Lilies Not Flowers; Are Related to Starfish

Zoology has revealed no organism more at variance with the popular conception of animals than the sea-lilies or crinoids, found in the waters of Australia, according to a correspondent in the New York Herald Tribune. When seen for the first time it is difficult to believe that they are not flowers; yet in all but the stately form they are animals, belonging to the same family as does the starfish.

The crinoids grow in clusters like the beds of tiger-lilies, and from the bed a jointed stalk rises, sometimes to a height of several feet, before the "lily" is produced. Surmounting the stem is a disk that bears the mouth, as in the case of the anemones; but the tentacles are much longer, and rise around the margins of the disk in such a manner as to simulate a lily with marvelous perfection.

Unlike most of the anemones the crinoids live in deep water, and some of them have been dredged up from depths in which it seems imposible for such tender and delicate things to exist. They were among the earliest types of animal life on earth, and their fossils are very common. They are in such preservation that they were called "stone lilies" before their true nature was understood.

Caterpillars Big Eaters; Weave Own Silken Cocoon

Caterpillars eat very heartily. It has been said that one may eat seven times his own weight in a day. As they eat, they grow. And as they grow, they frequently shed their skins and grow new ones. Finally, writes J. H. Furbay, in the Missouri Farmer, after shedding their skins and enlarging themselves several times, they reach their full size.

When the full size is attained, they cease eating, and fasten themselves to twigs or other objects. Often they hang head downward, supported by a silken thread which they have manufactured within their bodies. After one more molt, or change of skin, they manufacture more of this silk thread, and completely wind themselves in it.

Inside this silken case, which we call the cocoon, the caterpillar loses its legs and mouth-parts. Then it remains in this little prison until it has developed two pairs of wings, three pairs of legs, long antennae on the head, and new mouth-parts consisting of a coiled tube for sucking nectar from flowers. These great changes require various lengths of time. In some cases, only a few days are required; while in others, it takes all winter.

Collecting Brazil Nuts

One of the most dangerous jobs is the collecting of Brazil nuts in the jungles of the Amazon valley. The peons who gather this world crop, which is neither planted nor picked, are not only beset on all sides by deadly animals, insects, fishes and plants, but they are in constant danger of having their backs broken or skulls cracked by the four-pound pods which are frequently falling around them from a height of 100 feet.—Collier's Weekly.

Haiti Has Colorful History

Port au Prince is the capital of Haiti, a land where the early slaves revolted and massacred the whites; where voodoo drums once echoed throughout the mountains to proclaim human sacrifice; where ebony monarchs presided over gorgeous royal courts, where negro generals fought their way to pomp and power through more than a century of bloodshed and intrigue. Haiti, high and picturesque, stands out as a colorful spot in the Caribbean.

The temples of Paestum, in Italy, are world-famous, and the ancient city there, founded about 600 B. C., has been thoroughly excavated and explored. Three temples, known as the Basilica, and the other two respectively dedicated to Ceres and Neptune, date from 570 to 420 B. C., and all belong to the Greek period. The fourth, known as the Temple of Peace, is a building of the Roman period

Rome's No. 1 Attraction Is Nero's Town Palace

From Prince Hill in Rome one sees straight across towards St. Peter's dome, the open space that was the Garden of Nero, where crucified Christians expiated their imaginary crime of burning Rome. Though condemned to death by the senate, Nero's remains were buried with honors and a fine tomb reared above it, says a writer in the Detroit News. But soon "demon crows" possessed themselves of his vile ghost—so runs the holy legend—and made Pincine hill hideous with their noises until Pope Paschal himself cut down their roosting trees roundabout and, leveling the tomb, on its foundations erected a church, Santa Maria del Popolo it was called, and there it stands today! The marble urn holding the imperial ashes was used as a public measuring cup for salt in the marketplace. No one living has seen that urn.

His temporal home, that magnificent golden house built after the burning of Rome, with mile long porticos, gilded and carved columns, mother-of-pearl inlaid walls, outdid all imperial palaces in sumptuous luxury. Trajan built great baths over its ruins. In the stretches of its game preserves stands the Colosseum. Wings long underground have been cleared, disclosing fine murals. In one room was found, four centuries ago, the celebrated Vatican group of Laocoon and his sons, executed in Nero's time. Visitors enter the ruins off a municipal rose garden.

UPTON SINCLAIR WILL AGAIN ROCK THE WORLD

(Contributed)

Everyone knows of the book called the "Jungle" which showed up the terrible conditions existing in the Packingtown in Chicago. It aroused the country as no other book has done and brought not only a national investigation but real reforms. Upton Sinclair, the writer, of Passadena, California, was its author. He is now preparing a book to come out in January to be titled "I, Candidate for Governor And How I Got Licked." It will be the Jungle of our political campaigning methods. He ran for Governor of California on the Democratic ticket. He carried on the most sensational campaign this country has seen. He came near winning against the most bitter, sordid and unclean campaign that has ever been waged. California had a real quake and the echoes of this political quake will reverberate over the whole world. It will show the insides of a political campaign as no one has ever done before. It will be a sensation and a real eye opener. Its sale will be enormous. It will be the biggest exposure since his Jungle came out. It will hang all the dirty political linen on the line unwashed. You will see. you will feel, you will be shocked "The story of what will happen to you when you try to change your part of the world."

Natives of Samoa Island Can All Read and Write

American Samoa consists of the islands of Tutuila, Aunuu, Ofu, Olosega, Tau, Swain's island (which was made part of American Samoa on May 11, 1925), and the uninhabited coral atoll of Rose island. These islands, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, became possessions of the United States by virtue of the tripartite treaty with Great Britain and Germany in November, 1899. The census of 1930 gave American Samoa a population of 10,055.

The islands are located about 4,200 miles southwest of San Francisco, and about 2,000 miles east of Australia. The natives can all read and write.

The history of American Samoa commenced in the year 1872, when the harbor on Pago Pago (Island of Tutuila) was ceded to the United States by the native king for a naval and coaling station. This is the most valuable harbor in the South Pacific and possibly in the entire Pacific ocean. All of the land on the island is privately owned.

Muskellunge

Wisconsin has been long and favorably known for its muskellunge fishing, having acquired a reputation for this sport far in the lead of any other state. And so when Wisconsin tells you that there is only one way to spell the name of this big game fish it ought to be accepted by the fishing public as being final. The state conservation commission, after considerable research, has decided that the old Chippewa or Ojibwa name for this fish, mashkinonje, can be spelled in English in only one way, "Muskellunge," and from now on muskalunge, maskilonge, muskelonge, maskinonge, mascalunge, mascononge and maskanong are out. It is O. K. if you want to abbreviate to "Muskie" but otherwise stick to Muskellunge.

Patchwork Quilts

Patchwork is older than history, originating doubtless through primitive economic need of utilizing scraps of cloth. It was one of the first decorative arts practiced by such ancient civilizations as the Egyptian and Chinese. In Europe it was flourishing at the time of the Crusades when applique was employed in the making of battle banners and draperies. In America the handicraft arrived with the earliest settlers, being a direct heritage from England.

The Name "Dolphin"

The name "dolphin" is a misnomer, and properly belongs to the group of cetaceans known as porpoises, which are not fish. The "dolphin" is built for speed. The body is elongated and compressed and the head elevated. The dorsal fin has no spine, and extends practically the entire length of the body. It inhabits the high seas of warm climates and is an excellent food fish.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Most Beautiful Cemetery

Santiago, Chile, claims only one superlative for itself; possession of the most beautiful cemetery in the world. It is truly a city of the dead. Beyond the entrance are stately chapels and streets laid out at right angles. Some of the avenues, says the Detrit News, are lined with statues and columns. All are shaded by flowering magnolias, rosewoods and orange trees.

An Early Passion Play

A Passion Play was performed in Lucerne as early as 1470 in the Weinmarket square. Clergymen and town councilors played the chief roles.

Water as Food

Commonly speaking, foods are those substances eaten or drunk for the building up and maintenance of the human body and to supply those constituents of the foods consumed which are actually assimilated are considered foods, the remainder being waste. Water may be regarded as the most important of foods, constituting nearly 70 per cent of the human body. It is an absolute necessity for the maintenance of life. The average weight of water consumed per day, only part of which is assimilated, exceeds the dry weight of all the other foods combined.

Origin of English Toy Spaniel Much Disputed

Retrousse nose, abundant coat and highly intelligent expression—these are the chief characteristics of the English Toy Spaniel, observes an authority in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There are four classes of English Toy Spaniels—King Charles, Blenheim, Ruby and Prince Charles. King Charles have a black and tan coat, Blenheim have a red and white coat, Ruby a solid red and Prince Charles a tricolor coat.

Under an American Kennel club ruling in 1902, English Toy Spaniels were classed together in a general group. Another standard for the breed was adopted by the Toy Spaniel Club of America in 1909.

The origin of the Toy Spaniel is so much disputed that Pug, Malteset, Pekingese, Jap and even the Bulldog have been credited with a share in its ancestry. A cross probably was used to obtain the present short-faced specimen.

Toy Spaniels date back to the Sixteenth century. They were in high favor before the restoration of the House of Stuart in England.

Since the days of King Charles, whose name they bear, they have been closely associated with royalty. They reached the zenith of their popularity during the reign of James II, who bred them extensively.

Mice Destroy Thousands of Acres of Farm Crops

Mouse plagues, disastrous as they are, are of minor importance in comparison with the steady, yearly drain on crops by the mice over the country at large in normal years, says the Montreal Herald. Even as few as ten meadow mice to the acre on 100 acres of meadow would take about 11 tons of grass or 5½ tons of hay a year. This number, on the 65,000,000 acres of hay raised in the United States would cause a loss of over 3,000,000 tons of hay a year, or a money loss of some $30,000,000 annually in hay alone. The number of young in a litter ranges from two to nine, and one pair average five to the litter. At this rate of increase, allowing equal numbers of males and females, and the young beginning to breed at 46 days old, the total increase from one pair, if all lived and bred, would be over 1,000,000 individuals at the end of year. If all were confined to one acre of ground, this would mean over 20 mice to every square foot.

Knew Their Winds

The ancient Greek navigators knew enough about the seasons and directions of certain winds, such as etesians and the Indian monsoons, to utilize them in making voyages that would have been difficult or impossible without such knowledge, states a writer in the New York Tribune. After the Fifteenth century the trade winds of the Atlantic and the Pacific were similarly turned to account. At the close of the Seventeenth century the earliest attempt to chart ocean winds was made by Halley, the English astronomer, whose crude map of the trade winds and monsoons implies that he had a certain amount of statistical information at his disposal.

UPTON SINCLAIR WILL AGAIN ROCK THE WORLD
(Contributed)

Everyone knows of the book called the "Jungle" which showed us the terrible conditions existing in the Packingtown in Chicago. It aroused the country as no other book has done and brought not only a national investigation but real reforms. Upton Sinclair, the writer, of Passadena, California, was its author. He is now preparing a book to come out in January to be titled "I, Candidate for Governor And How I Got Licked." It will be the Jungle of our political campaigning methods. He ran for Governor of California on the Democratic ticket. He carried on the most sensational campaign this country has seen. He came near winning against the most bitter, sordid and unclean campaign that has ever been waged. California had a real quake and the echoes of this political quake will reverberate over the whole world. It will show the insides of a political campaign as no one has ever done before. It will be a sensation and a real eye opener. Its sale will be enormous. It will be the biggest exposure since his Jungle came out. It will hang all the dirty political linen on the line unwashed. You will see. you will feel, you will be shocked. "The story of what will happen to you when you try to change your part of the world."

Natives of Samoa Island Can All Read and Write

American Samoa consists of the islands of Tutuila, Aunuu, Ofu, Olosega, Tau, Swain's island (which was made part of American Samoa on May 11, 1925), and the uninhabited coral atoll of Rose island. These islands, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, became possessions of the United States by virtue of the tripartite treaty with Great Britain and Germany in November, 1899. The census of 1930 gave American Samoa a population of 10,055.

The islands are located about 4,200 miles southwest of San Francisco, and about 2,000 miles east of Australia. The natives can all read and write.

The history of American Samoa commenced in the year 1872, when the harbor on Pago Pago (Island of Tutuila) was ceded to the United States by the native king for a naval and coaling station. This is the most valuable harbor in the South Pacific and possibly in the entire Pacific ocean. All of the land on the island is privately owned.

Muskellunge

Wisconsin has been long and favorably known for its muskellunge fishing, having acquired a reputation for this sport far in the lead of any other state. And so when Wisconsin tells you that there is only one way to spell the name of this big game fish it ought to be accepted by the fishing public as being final. The state conservation commission, after considerable research, has decided that the old Chippewa or Ojibwa name for this fish, mashkinonje, can be spelled in English in only one way, "Muskellunge." and from now on muskalunge, maskilonge, muskelonge, maskinonge, mascalunge, masconconge and maskanong are out. It is O. K. if you want to abbreviate to "Muskie" but otherwise stick to Muskellunge.

Patchwork Quilts

Patchwork is older than history, originating doubtless through primitive economic need of utilizing scraps of cloth. It was one of the first decorative arts practiced by such ancient civilizations as the Egyptian and Chinese. In Europe it was flourishing at the time of the Crusades when applique was employed in the making of battle banners and draperies. In America the handicraft arrived with the earliest settlers, being a direct heritage from England.

The Name "Dolphin"

The name "dolphin" is a misnomer, and properly belongs to the group of cetaceans known as porpoises, which are not fish. The "dolphin" is built for speed. The body is elongated and compressed and the head elevated. The dorsal fin has no spine, and extends practically the entire length of the body. It inhabits the high seas of warm climates and is an excellent food fish.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Most Beautiful Cemetery

Santiago, Chile, claims only one superlative for itself; possession of the most beautiful cemetery in the world. It is truly a city of the dead. Beyond the entrance are stately chapels and streets laid out at right angles. Some of the avenues, says the Detrit News, are lined with statues and columns. All are shaded by flowering magnolias, rosewoods and orange trees.

An Early Passion Play

A Passion Play was performed in Lucerne as early as 1470 in the Weinmarket square. Clergymen and town councilors played the chief roles.

Water as Food

Commonly speaking, foods are those substances eaten or drunk for the building up and maintenance of the human body and to supply those constituents of the foods consumed which are actually assimilated are considered foods, the remainder being waste. Water may be regarded as the most important of foods, constituting nearly 70 per cent of the human body. It is an absolute necessity for the maintenance of life. The average weight of water consumed per day, only part of which is assimilated, exceeds the dry weight of all the other foods combined.

Origin of English Toy Spaniel Much Disputed

Retrousse nose, abundant coat and highly intelligent expression—these are the chief characteristics of the English Toy Spaniel, observes an authority in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There are four classes of English Toy Spaniels—King Charles, Blenheim, Ruby and Prince Charles. King Charles have a black and tan coat, Blenheim have a red and white coat, Ruby a solid red and Prince Charles a tricolor coat.

Under an American Kennel club ruling in 1902, English Toy Spaniels were classed together in a general group. Another standard for the breed was adopted by the Toy Spaniel Club of America in 1909.

The origin of the Toy Spaniel is so much disputed that Pug, Malteset, Pekingese, Jap and even the Bulldog have been credited with a share in its ancestry. A cross probably was used to obtain the present short-faced specimen.

Toy Spaniels date back to the Sixteenth century. They were in high favor before the restoration of the House of Stuart in England.

Since the days of King Charles, whose name they bear, they have been closely associated with royalty. They reached the zenith of their popularity during the reign of James II, who bred them extensively.

Mice Destroy Thousands of Acres of Farm Crops

Mouse plagues, disastrous as they are, are of minor importance in comparison with the steady, yearly drain on crops by the mice over the country at large in normal years, says the Montreal Herald. Even as few as ten meadow mice to the acre on 100 acres of meadow would take about 11 tons of grass or 5½ tons of hay a year. This number, on the 65,000,000 acres of hay raised in the United States would cause a loss of over 3,000,000 tons of hay a year, or a money loss of some $30,000,000 annually in hay alone. The number of young in a litter ranges from two to nine, and one pair average five to the litter. At this rate of increase, allowing equal numbers of males and females, and the young beginning to breed at 46 days old, the total increase from one pair, if all lived and bred, would be over 1,000,000 individuals at the end of year. If all were confined to one acre of ground, this would mean over 20 mice to every square foot.

Knew Their Winds

The ancient Greek navigators knew enough about the seasons and directions of certain winds, such as etesians and the Indian monsoons, to utilize them in making voyages that would have been difficult or impossible without such knowledge, states a writer in the New York Tribune. After the Fifteenth century the trade winds of the Atlantic and the Pacific were similarly turned to account. At the close of the Seventeenth century the earliest attempt to chart ocean winds was made by Halley, the English astronomer, whose crude map of the trade winds and monsoons implies that he had a certain amount of statistical information at his disposal.

Far sighted eyes in Minnesota are looking towards Wisconsin and looking carefully over the compulsory unemployment insurance plan which went into effect on July 1 of this year. The plan, novel in its provisions, stipulates that neither the state nor the employees supply funds for the insurance reserves and the administrators of the plans say that it is more a labor turnover stabilization plan than unemployment insurance. It provides that each employer pays a tax of 2 percent of his payroll into an individual unemployment reserve which averages $75 per employee. There is no pool, each employer acting as an individual. Proponents of the plan say that in this way the employer whose labor is steady is not penalized for the employer having a great labor turnover. Instead an incentive is offered to the employer who keeps his labor for longer periods of time inasmuch as he is not required to have more than an average of $75 per employee in the reserves. Furthermore, firms which have a high financial rating are permitted to place their unemployment reserves into working capital. The Wisconsin plan has been under scrutiny from all parts of the nation and especially Minnesota where it is almost certain that an unemployment insurance bill will introduced in the 1935 session of the legislature.

Farmers are jubilant over the heavy rains and snowfalls that the state is now enjoying. The same goes for sportsmen and lovers of the outdors. The dry cycle, which is said to have run its course raised havoc with agriculture, lake levels, and the general conditions of the northwest. It is to be hoped that prevailing snowfalls mean the end of the drouth, dust storms and the hundred and one evils that accompany dry periods.

Production of commodities for use by needy families in the state is continuing under the direction of the SERA. Mattress factories in the Twin Cities and Duluth have turned out 4,300 finished articles since work was started in October. Of this amount, more than 3,000 already have been given to relief families. A cannery in St. Cloud has turned out 800,000 tins of beef since September, while another plant in Duluth is boning 8,000 pounds of beef daily, preparatory to canning the meat. All of these articles are given as surpluses, and are in addition to the clients regular budgets. According to L. H. Jacobson, SERA industrial engineer, almost 2,000 clients are employed on these projects.
